THE EDITOR'S PREFACE.

THIS volume is issued by the Government of New South Wales, as a record of the language of native tribes that are rapidly disappearing from the coasts of Eastern Australia. Presentation copies will be sent to the chief learned societies at home and abroad. The indigenes of the Sydney district are gone long ago, and some of the inland tribes are represented now only by a few families of wanderers. In all New South Wales, there are only five thousand full-blood blacks; only four or five hundred in Victoria; and in Tasmania the native race became extinct in 1876. They have decayed and are decaying in spite of the fostering care of our Colonial Governments.

A considerable portion of this volume consists of Mr. Threlkeld's acquisitions in the dialect which I have called the Awabakal, from Awaba, the native name for Lake Macquarie—his sphere of labour. But we have now come to know that this dialect was essentially the same as that spoken by the sub-tribes occupying the land where Sydney now stands, and that they all formed parts of one great tribe, the Kúriǵgai.

In an Appendix I have collected several Grammars and Vocabularies as a contribution to a comparative knowledge of the dialects. The map and other illustrations are new, and were prepared for this work.

The Gospel by St. Luke herein is now of no practical value, except to a linguist; but it is unique, and it shows the structural system of the language.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS.

I. MAP OF NEW SOUTH WALES AS OCCUPIED BY THE NATIVE TRIBES Frontispiece

This map is the issue of ten years' thought and inquiry on the location of our native tribes; nothing of the kind has been attempted before. The basis of the whole is the boundaries of the Kamalarai tribe, which were marked out for me by a friend who knew the tribe well fifty years ago; his information I have tested and extended by answers I got from others, who also knew the tribe about that time. The Walarai dialect differs only a little from the Kamalarai proper; so also the Wailwan, spoken by the Ngaiamba blacks; for this reason, and because they have the classification of the Kamalarai, these are regarded as only subdivisions of the great Kamalarai tribe. The Walarai dialect extends into Queensland.

The next great tribe is the Kuringgai on the sea coast. Their 'taurari' (hunting ground or territory) is known to extend north to the Macleay River, and I found that southwards it reached the Hawkesbury. Then, by examining the remains of the language of the natives about Sydney and southwards, and by other tests, I assured myself that the country thereabout was occupied by sub-tribes of the Kuringgai.

In a similar manner, I determined the territory of the Murrinjari on the south-east coast.

The boundaries of the Wiradhari tribe have long been known. Probably they did not extend quite to the Murray, but that river is their natural limit on the south.

From Moulamein westwards, as shown on the map, or from a line drawn from the Murrumbidgee to the Murray somewhat farther east than that, and on both sides of the Murray, there is a patch of associated tribes whose dialects are called Yerry-yerry, Marrawarra, Yuyu, Tataty, Watty-watty, &c., all from the local words for 'no.' Their position in fragments there is curious, and may be the result of some displacement from above by the incoming of stronger tribes, such as the Wiradhari.

The Bakanji is another strong tribe whose locality is well defined on the east by the Wiradhari. A sub-tribe of it is the Berriait, bordering on the Lachlan River and the Wiradhari frontier. A small portion of the north-west of New South Wales and much more of the adjoining territory in Queensland and South Australia has a tribe which some call the Korna, but I am not sure that that is the correct name for it.

The boundaries of the Paikalyung tribe were given me by the Rev. H. Livingstone, who knows it well. Its territory runs along the coast up nearly to Brisbane.

The next tribe (I have called it Wachigari) has its 'taurari' limited by the Paikalyung on the north and the Kuringgai on the south.

The Yakkajari speak the Pikambal dialect, and extend across our border some distance into Queensland.

The New England tribe, the Yunggai, has caused me much perplexity. There are scarcely any blacks of that territory now surviving; but the tribal language is quite different in its words from those around it; I also know for certain that the table-land of New England did not belong either to the Kamalarai or the Walarai. I have, therefore, called this tribe the Yung-gai, from Yung—the name which the coast tribes give to New England.

The Ngarego tribe belongs rather to Victoria than to New South Wales.

Of these tribes, the Kamalarai, Walarai, Ngaiamba, Bakanji, Wiradhari, the Associated Tribes, the Ngarego, the Kuringgai, are names already established and in use; and most of them are formed from the local word for 'no,' and thus describe more the speech than the people. The names, Murrinjari, Wachigari, Paikalyung, Yakkajari, I have made; for these tribes have no general name for themselves. Wachi-gari and Yakka-jari are legitimate formations from the local words for 'no'; Murrin-jari and Paikal-yung mean the 'men,' which also is the meaning of the native tribe-name Kuringgai—all from their distinctive tribal-words for 'man. Tribes of aborigines, in many parts of the world, call themselves 'the men.

2. PORTRAIT OF BIRABAN Page 88

This is the intelligent aboriginal who was so useful to Mr. Threlkeld. The illustration is reproduced from the pencil sketch which was made by Mr. Agate.

3. PORTRAIT OF "OLD MARGARET"—an 'Awabakalin,' or woman of the Lake Macquarie sub-tribe ... Page 196

'Old Margaret' is the last survivor of the Awabakal. She is now living in her slab-hut on a piece of land near Lake Macquarie Heads, and supports herself by her own industry. She had the advantage of early training in an English home in the district; she is respectable and respected.

Her features, as compared with those of other natives, show how much the type varies; and yet she is an Australian of pure origin. She was born at Waiong, near the Hawkesbury River, and is now about 65 years of age.

4. BUNTIMAI—'A MESSENGER' Page 212

This blackfellow is evidently on an errand which requires despatch. The 'possum cloak, the hair, and the general cast of the figure are true to nature, but the calves of the legs are stouter than usual.

INTRODUCTION.

I. THE GRAMMARS.

No large effort has yet been made to master the difficulties that present themselves in the study of the comparative grammar of the Australian languages. The only thing in this direction, that is known to me, is a paper on the "Position of the Australian Languages, by W. H. J. Bleek, Esq., Ph.D.," published in 1871. Dr. Bleek was a philologist who, in 1858, assisted in cataloguing the Library of His Excellency Sir Geo. Grey, K.C.B., then Governor of Cape Colony. Twenty years previously, Sir George (then Captain Grey), as leader of an expedition into the interior of our continent, had excellent opportunities of seeing the native tribes in their original condition; and the knowledge thus gained was enlarged by him and matured, while he was Governor of South Australia. The records of the knowledge of so intelligent an observer as Sir George Grey are sure to be valuable. These records are now in the South African Public Library, Cape Town, having been presented to that Library by him, along with his collection of books and other manuscripts.

The catalogue of Sir George Grey's Library was published by Trübner & Co., London, and Dr. Bleek devotes a portion of the second volume to the philology of the Australian languages.*

The earliest of individual efforts to deal with any single language of the Australian group was made by the Rev. L. E. Threlkeld, who, for many years, was engaged as a missionary among the blacks of the Lake Macquarie district, near Newcastle, New South Wales. His Grammar of their language was printed in Sydney in 1834, at the "Herald Office, Lower George Street." A few years previously, Mr. Threlkeld had translated the Gospel by St. Luke into the same language. This translation remained in manuscript and had disappeared; recently I discovered that it still exists, and is now in the Public Library of Auckland. This "Grammar" and the "Key" and the "Gospel," and some smaller fruits of Mr. Threlkeld's labours on that language, are now published in a collected form in the present volume. But Threlkeld's Grammar deals with only one dialect, and, for the purposes of comparative grammar, more languages than one are required.

* Throughout this Introduction I say "languages," although, in fact, there is but one Australian language with many dialects; I also use the word "language" instead of dialect, wherever the meaning is clear.

In looking about for another Grammar, I remembered that Mr. Horatio Hale, the philologist of the United States' Exploring Expedition, had, in his volume on the Ethnography and Philology of the Expedition*, made a short synopsis of two of our dialects. When in this colony, he got access to the Rev. William Watson, then missionary to the aborigines at "Wellington Valley," who drew up for him "an account of the most important peculiarities of the Wiraduri language, modelled as nearly as possible on the Grammar of Mr. Threlkeld, for the purpose of comparison." Further search disclosed the fact that, as early as 1835, a Dictionary and a Grammar had been prepared there, and the Gospel by St. Luke had been translated. How valuable these materials would now be, to illustrate the Awabakal of Lake Macquarie! but Mr. Watson had no relatives in this colony, and on his death his manuscripts were sold as waste paper; so I am told. Fortunately, the late Archdeacon Günther, of Mudgee, wrote a Grammar of the Wiradhari and collected a copious Vocabulary about the year 1838. The Vocabulary I found to be in the hands of his son, the present Archdeacon of Camden, and it is here published, along with a short introductory Grammar which forms part of the manuscript Vocabulary. A longer Grammar was, many years ago, sent to the home country, and I fear that it cannot now be recovered.

The next labourers in the field of Australian grammar were the Lutheran Missionaries, Messrs. Teichelmann (E. G.) and Schürmann (C. W.) In 1840 they published a "Grammar, Vocabulary, and Phrase-book" of the aboriginal language of the Adelaide tribe. Then, in 1856, appeared the primer, "Gurre Kamilaroi," by the Rev. W. Ridley. Mr. Ridley, who was a man of rare devotedness and self-denial, went among the aborigines of Liverpool Plains and shared the privations of their wandering life, in order that he might learn their language, and so be able to tell them the message of the Gospel. In 1866 (2nd edition, 1875), our Government Printing Office issued his book on the "Kamilaroi, Dippil, and Turrubul languages."

A Grammar of some of the dialects spoken in South Australia is contained in Taplin's "Folk Lore," which was published in 1879. This Grammar is given here in a condensed form.

II. MR. THRELKELD.

Lancelot Edward Threlkeld, the pioneer in the field of Australian language, died in Sydney on the morning of the 10th October, 1859, having on the previous day preached twice in his own church—the church of the Bethel Union there.

* See pp. 479-531 of "United States' Exploring Expedition during the years 1838-42, under the command of Charles Wilkes, U.S.N.—Vol. VI., Ethnography and Ethnology: By Horatio Hale, philologist of the Expedition. Philadelphia: Lea and Blanchard. 1846."

Mr. Threlkeld's birthplace was Hatherleigh, in Devon, but the family belonged originally to the county of Cumberland, and there to the village of Threlkeld, which either had its name from them or gave its name to them. In "Burke's Peerage," we read of Threlkeld of Threlkeld in the time of Edward I. That family became extinct in the male line in the reign of Edward IV, but the name was continued through a younger branch, Threlkeld of Melmerly, in the same county.

A romantic story from the Wars of the Roses connects itself with a Sir Lancelot Threlkeld by his marriage with the widow of Lord Clifford. Clifford had much power in Yorkshire, where his estates were, but, although related to the House of York, he was a keen supporter of the Lancastrians, and with his own hand he killed the youngest son of the Duke of York in cold blood after the battle of Sandal, in revenge for an injury he had received. The sanguinary conduct of Lord Clifford on this occasion is commemorated by our poet, Drayton, in his 'Polyolbion,' in the lines beginning:—

"Where York himself before his castle gate,
Mangled with wounds, on his own earth lay dead,
Upon whose body Clifford down him sate,
Stabbing the corpse, and, cutting off his head,
Crowned it with paper, and, to wreak his teene,
Presents it so to his victorious Queenc."

Three months after this, Clifford was himself shot through with an arrow in the battle of Towton, and the Yorkists, being now victorious, stripped the Clifford family of all their estates and possessions; this happened in the year 1470. The heir to Lord Clifford's name and fame was a little boy then six years old. His mother feared that the House of York would seek to avenge on him the murder of their own boy, the young Earl of Rutland; she had now no powerful friends to protect her and her son, and she knew that her movements were watched; in these circumstances she resolved, for safety, to commit her boy to the care of her faithful retainers, and have him brought up as a shepherd on his own estates. Meanwhile, the report was spread that he had been sent to Holland and had died there. When he had reached the age of twelve years, his widowed mother married Sir Lancelot Threlkeld. This was a fortunate thing for the lad, for it led to his removal from the neighbourhood of his own home to places of greater security among the mountains of Cumberland; and his new father, being entrusted with the secret, faithfully assisted in watching over the life of the orphan heir. To avert suspicion, it was still found necessary to continue his disguise; but, although he was thus left without education, and could neither read nor write till happier days had come, yet the culture of his race showed itself in his natural intelligence and his personal demeanour. He grew up a tall and handsome youth, with the features and commanding mien of his grandfather, who had been much loved and regretted. While still living in obscurity as a shepherd, he gained such a knowledge of astronomy as made him a wonder to many in later years, and his gentle manners so shone through rustic attire that he secured the affection of a lady of rank, well known at that time as the "nut-brown maid"—the daughter of Sir John St. John; her he married. When the "Wars of the Roses" were ended by the accession of Henry VII., and peace was again come, the young Lord Clifford, now 32 years of age, asserted his right to the Londesborough estates, and, on petition to the King, was restored to his title and his lands. The men of the time called him the "Shepherd Earl." In addition to Londesborough, the place of his birth, he was owner of Brougham and Skipton, but he usually resided near Bolton, and there, after many years, he died, and was buried in the choir of the Abbey. His son was created Earl of Cumberland; and a grandson was a naval commander in Elizabeth's reign. In 1742 the heiress of the Cliffords married an ancestor of the present Duke of Devonshire, and with her the estates in Yorkshire passed over to that family.

This incident has only a remote connection with the Threlkeld family, but I have given it here as an interesting glimpse into the private history of noble families in those troublous times.

Our author was born in 1788 at the village of Hatherleigh, and, while still a boy, he experienced deep religious convictions under the ministry of the vicar of the parish. This ultimately led to his offering himself to the London Missionary Society for work in the foreign field, and so, after several years of instruction and training at Gosport under Mr. Bogue, he was ordained, along with Mr. Ellis, on the 8th November, 1815, and appointed to labour at Rai-atéa, in the 'Society' group of the South Seas. Towards the end of that month he embarked in a government vessel, the "Atlas," which was about to proceed to Sydney. At Rio de Janeiro, his wife fell ill, and for nearly a year he had to remain there, all the while acting as the first Protestant minister whom the English residents at Rio ever had. On 22nd January, 1817, he sailed again, along with Messrs. John Williams, Darling, Bourne, and Platt, all bound for missionary work in the islands of the South Seas.

After a short stay at Hobart, they reached Sydney on the 11th May, 1817, and Mr. Threlkeld proceeded to Raiatea soon after. The death of his wife led him to return to Sydney in 1824. Next year, the London Missionary Society established a mission to our native blacks at Lake Macquarie under the care of Threlkeld, and there, with assistance subsequently from the Government of the Colony of New South Wales, the mission was maintained till December 31, 1841, when the number of the natives there had so declined that it had to be abandoned. It was during those seventeen years of labour that Mr. Threlkeld acquired so much experience in the use of the native dialect of the tribe, that he was enabled to prepare the works which form the bulk of this volume. The year 1842 and the surrounding years were a time of terrible commercial distress in the colony, and, when the mission station was abandoned, Mr. Threlkeld lost all his property there. But, in 1845, he was appointed minister of the Mariners' Church, Sydney, and in that office he continued till his death. By his first wife he had one son and three daughters; by his second wife—a daughter of Dr. Arndell, the Colonial surgeon of the time—he had two sons and three daughters. Those of his children who still survive occupy honourable positions in this colony.

The following is believed to be a complete list of Mr. Threlkeld's labours in the dialect which I have called the 'Awabakal':—

1827.—“Specimens of the Aboriginal Language”; printed then.

1829.—First draft of the Translation of the Gospel by St. Luke.

1832.—Translation of Prayers for Morning and Evening Service from the Ritual of the Church of England; these were selected by Archdeacon Broughton.

1834.—“The Australian Grammar” published. Mr. Threlkeld's memoranda show that at the beginning of this year the following subjects were occupying his attention:—

1. Specimens of the Language.
2. The Australian Grammar.
3. The Gospel by St. Luke, under revisal.
5. The Gospel by St. Mark, in preparation. The first rough translation was completed in 1837.
5. The Gospel by St. Matthew, just commenced.
6. The instruction of two native youths in writing and reading their own language.
7. Reading lessons selected from the Old Testament.
8. An Australian Spelling Book.

1836.—“The Spelling Book” printed.

1850.—“The Key to the Aboriginal Language” published.

1859.—At the time of his death he was engaged in completing the translation of the four Gospels; and was proceeding with the “Lexicon to the Gospel by St. Luke.” Thus our author's life closed in the midst of ‘labours many.’

III. INFLUENCES AFFECTING THE LANGUAGE.

The position of our Australian dialects in their relation to the great families of language has not yet been determined. That task demands leisure, labour, and skill. A collection of carefully prepared Grammars and Vocabularies would make the task much easier; but where are these to be had? With the exception of those that I have named, I know of none. Australian Vocabularies have been collected in abundance, but, for the most part, these are quite useless to the philologist; they consist of dialect-names for native customs and weapons, for the birds of the air, the beasts of the field, and the trees of the forest. All this is mistaken labour which yields no fruit. What we want is to get from each dialect a sufficient number of words expressing the ideas essential to a language, in the form of substantive, adjective or verb, and a sufficient number of simple sentences; this would enable the philologist to ascertain what is the structure of its grammar and its vocables.

The Australian languages are subject to a principle of change which it is worth our pains to consider here. The native tribes name their children from any ordinary occurrence, which may have taken place at the birth or soon after it. For instance, if a kangaroo-rat were seen to run into a hollow log at that time, the child would be named by some modification of the word for kangaroo-rat. At a later period of the boy's life, that name might be changed for another, taken from some trivial circumstance in his experience; just as our own boys get by-names at school. When a man or woman dies, his family and the other members of the tribe, as far as possible, never mention his name again, and discontinue the use of those ordinary words which formed part of his name; other words are substituted for those common ones, and become permanently established in the daily language of the clan or sub-tribe to which the deceased belonged.* In this way new words arise to designate those familiar objects, the previous names for which have been cast aside; and these new words are formed regularly from other root-words, that describe probably another quality inherent in the thing in question. Let me illustrate this matter by examples. A man or a woman may get a name from some peculiar physical feature, such as a large mouth, or chin, or head; or a name taken from an animal or tree, or any similar object, animate or inanimate, which had some relation to his birth. A Tasmanian woman was called Ramanalu, 'little gull,' because a gull flew by at the time of the child's birth. After her death, the word rama would never be used again for 'a gull'; a new name for 'gull' would be invented, formed, it may be, from a root-word meaning 'white,' because of the whiteness of the bird. This new word would be used by all the kindred and acquaintances of the deceased, and would ere long establish itself in the language of that portion of the tribe as the right name for 'gull.' Again, a boy of the Dungog tribe of blacks, in our own colony, was receiving instruction from the old men of the tribe; he was required to make a spear, and was sent into the bush to select a suitable piece of wood; he cut off and brought to them a piece of the 'cockspur' tree; this choice was so absurd, that forthwith his instructors dubbed him Bobinkat, and that was his name ever after. When he died, the word bobin would disappear, and some other name be found for the cockspur tree. And the operation of this principle is not confined to Australia; it is found also in Polynesia; but there it has respect to the living, not the dead. High chiefs there are regarded as so exalted personages, that common people must not make use of any portion of their names in ordinary talk, for fear of giving offence. If, for example, a chief's name contains the word pe'a, 'bat,' the tribe calls the 'bat,' not pe'a, but manu-o-le-lagi, 'bird of the sky.' In languages which are not subject to these influences, the derivation of such a word is usually very plain; the Latin vespertilio, 'bat,' for instance, bears its origin on its very face; but if a philologist, not knowing the history of the word manu-o-le-lagi, were to find it to mean a 'bat' in a Polynesian tongue, he would be puzzled to explain how it is that a creature so peculiar as the 'bat,' should have been named by a word having so indefinite a meaning as the 'bird of the sky.' Any one who may have had the curiosity to look into lists of names for common things in Australian vocabularies, must have been surprised to see how diverse are these names in the various tribes, but your wonder ceases to be wonder when the cause is known. In fact, we do find that among conterminous tribes, and even in the sub-sections of the same tribe, these words vary greatly; for the presence of death from time to time in the encampments kept up a frequent lapse of words.

* It is possible that the discarded word resumes its place in the language after a while; this point I have not ascertained; at all events, the adopted word remains.

To show how much a native language may be effected by this cause of change, I quote here a few sentences from T'aplin, who, for many years, was in daily contact with the black natives of South Australia. In his Vocabulary he says:—

"Therto, 'head'; obsolete on account of death. Koninto, 'stomach'; obsolete on account of death. Muna, 'hand'; not used on account of the death of a native of that name. When any one dies, named after anything, the name of that thing is at once changed. For instance, the name for 'water' was changed nine times in about five years on account of the death of eight men who bore the name of 'water.' The reason of this is that the name of the departed is never mentioned because of a superstitious notion that his spirit would immediately appear, if mentioned in any way."

It may possibly be asked why our blackfellows had so strong a disinclination to mention the name of a friend who had died. We ourselves have a feeling of the same kind. We speak of our friend as 'the deceased,' 'the departed,' 'him who has gone'; and if we must mention his name, we apologise for it by saying 'poor' Mr. So-and-so, and seem afraid to use the simple word 'dead.' But our indigenes have a stronger reason than that. They believe that the spirit of a man, especially if he is killed by violence, is excessively uncomfortable after death, and malicious, and in its fretfulness ready to take offence at anything, and so pour out its wrath on the living. Even the mention of the dead man's name would offend, and bring vengeance on them in the night time. Our blacks seem also to have the idea that the deceased, for a certain number of days after death, has not yet got his spiritual body, which slowly grows upon him, and that, while in this undeveloped state, he is like a child, and is specially querulous and vengeful.

IV. TESTS IN EXAMINING LANGUAGES.

I now proceed to show some results which may be obtained even from our Australian words, by comparing them with others elsewhere. It is agreed among philologists, that there is no surer test of the affinity of different languages than that which comes through the identification of their pronouns, numerals*, and, to a less extent, their prepositions. To this I would add, in our present inquiry, the identity of such common words as 'eye, foot, hand, fire, sun, moon,' and the like; for these words cannot have been used much in the names of individuals, and are therefore not likely to have suffered from the fluctuations which I have already explained. It is true that, in all languages, the pronouns and the numerals are subject to abrasion and decay, from the frequency and rapidity with which they are pronounced, and from a natural tendency everywhere to shorten the words which are most in use. But it is the function of the philologist, not only to understand these causes of decay, but to show the process by which the words fell away, and to restore them to their original forms for the purpose of identification.

It is agreed, then, that the numerals, the pronouns, and, to some extent, the prepositions, are a strong test of the affinity of languages. On this principle, such languages as the Sanskrit, the Greek, the Latin, the German and Gothic, the Lithuanian, the Keltic, have been tested and proved to be so much akin that they are grouped as a well-defined family of languages—the Aryan. Some anthropologists, especially when they are not linguists themselves, sneer at the labours of philology as deceptive and liable to serious error; so are all sciences, if not managed with care and ability. A student in chemical analysis and synthesis may get results which are clearly erroneous; instead of declaring the prescribed methods to be faulty or his materials to be bad, he ought to blame only his own want of skill in manipulation. As to the utility of philology, I would only remark that it was by the study of languages that the place of Sanskrit (and consequently of the Hindu race) was determined in its relation to the other members of the family I have named, and it was philology alone that settled the claim of the Keltic, and consequently of the Kelts, to be regarded as one of the most ancient members of the Aryan family. In the case of the cuneiform inscriptions, the services which philology has rendered are inestimable. And it is quite possible that, amid the conflicting opinions as to the origin of our Australian race, the via prima salutis, the first dawn of a sure daylight, may in the future arise from a careful examination of their language.

As is well known, the Australian numeral system is very limited in its range; our natives say 'one,' 'two'; sometimes 'three'; occasionally 'hand' for 'five'; all else is 'many,' 'a great number.' It was alleged by Sir John Lubbock, and has since been repeated by everybody, that their having separate words only for 'one' and 'two' is a proof that Australians possess very limited mental powers, since they cannot count higher than 'two.' Every colonist, who has been much in contact with the blacks, can adduce proofs to show that their mental powers are not so limited, and that, when our indigenes are taken out of their adverse environment and encouraged to cultivate their intellectual faculties, they readily develop a decided capacity for improvement. A friend of mine, fifty years ago, taught two young black boys to play chess; they soon acquired a liking for the game, and learned to play with caution and skill, and even with success. If it were possible to surround the blacks with favourable influences continued from generation to generation, I have no doubt that their whole position would be altered; but any final separation from their ancestral habits would lead to their speedy extinction as a race; this was the issue that was rapidly approaching after the last remnants of the Tasmanians were removed to Flinders' Island. But, for many hundreds of years, no one can tell how many, the Australian race has lived in the midst of adverse surroundings, tribe warring against tribe, each tribe restricted to its own boundaries, the supply of food in our precarious climate often scanty, the paralysing terror produced by their strong belief in the supernatural power of demons and of their own wizards, the ravages of waves of disease and death sweeping over them from time to time; all these and other causes compelled them to think only of their daily subsistence and the preservation of their lives, fixed and deepened their degradation, and prevented even the possibility of amelioration and elevation. The natives of the South Sea islands, whose lot has been a fairer one, have had many yams and cocoa-nuts and bananas and other things to count, and so have developed a wide system of numbers; but our poor blackfellows, whose only personal property is a few spears or so, have not felt it necessary to speak of more than 'one,' 'two,' or 'three' objects at once. Then, as to the linguistic question on which Sir John Lubbock builds his charge, I think it could be shown that even the Aryan system of numbers—the most highly developed system of any—is founded on the words for 'one,' 'two,' 'three,' and no more, all the rest being combinations of these by addition or by multiplication. Further, the Aryans have singular and dual forms for nouns and pronouns, that is, they have number-forms for 'one' and 'two,' but all the rest beyond that is included in the general name of plural, that is 'more'; indeed the Sanskrit uses its word for 'four' in a general way to mean a considerable number, exactly as to our blackfellows all else beyond two or three is bula, 'many.' For these reasons I think that this charge against our blackfellows ought to be laid on better ground than that afforded by their numerals.

V. THE AUSTRALIAN NUMERALS.

If Bopp's dictum is well founded, the numerals 'one,' 'two,' 'three,' when tested, may tell us something about the origin of our Australian blacks. I, therefore, now proceed to examine these numerals. And here I may be permitted to say that I alone am responsible for the arguments drawn from the evidence produced in this inquiry. So far as I know, these arguments have never been advanced previously; indeed, I am convinced that no one has ever discussed these numerals before, for it is commonly alleged that it is impossible to give any account of them.

1. The Numeral 'One.'

(a.) Of the words for 'one,' I take up first that which is least common, pir, 'one.' It is used in the Walarai country (see map). It must be an old and genuine word, for I know that, in another dialect, the word piriwal means 'chief,' and pir seems to me to bear the same relation to piriwal that the Latin primus, 'first,' bears to princeps, 'chief,' 'first,' or the Latin preposition pro, 'before,' to proceres, 'chiefs,' or our English word 'first' to the German fürst, 'a prince.' In fact, I regard pro and pir as the same word originally.

Now, do not mistake me here; for I do not assert that the languages spoken by our Australians are uterine brothers to the Latin and the Greek; but I do assert that all languages have one common, although ancient, origin, and that, in the essential words of these languages, there are proofs of that common origin. Pir, then, as allied to pro, means the number which comes 'before' all others in the row, the one that comes 'first.' The Latin primus is for pri-imus (cf. Sk. pra-thamas, 'first'), in which the root pri, not unlike pir, is the same as the Latin pro and prae. In the Aryan family, the nearest approach to the Australian pir is the Lithuanian pir-mas, 'first,' and pir-m (a preposition), 'before'; other remote kinsmen are the Greek pro-tos, 'first,' pru-tanis, 'a prince,' 'a president' (cf. piriwal), prin, 'before'; the Gothic fru-ma, 'first'; the Aryan prefixes pra, fra, pro, pru, prae, pre, and fore as in our English 'fore-ordain.' The Keltic languages drop the initial p or f, and say ro, ru, air, ari, to mean 'before.' In the Malay region ar-ung is a 'chief,' and in Polynesia ari-ki is 'a chief,' which the Samoans change into ali'i; these words, I would say, come from eastern forms corresponding to the Keltic ro, air, 'before.' In Samoan i lu-ma means 'in front,' and in Malay de-alu-wan; these are like ru; in Aneityum, a Papuan island of the New Hebrides, a 'chief' is called natimi arid, where natimi means 'man,' and arid is 'high,' 'exalted,' doubtless from the same root as ariki; and arid is to ariki as the Latin procērus, 'tall,' to procēres, 'chiefs.' From the abraded form ru I take the New Britain* word lūa (Samoan lua'i), 'first.'

In the Dravidian languages of India, from which quarter, as I suppose, our Australian languages have come, there is a close parallel to our word pir, for pira means 'before,' and piran is 'a lord.' Dravidian scholars themselves acknowledge that piran comes from the Sanskrit preposition pra, 'before'; this corroborates my derivation of the Australian word piriwal and the Maori ariki. The Aroma dialect of New Guinea says pirana, 'face'; and in my opinion this pirana bears the same relation to the Dravidian pira that the Latin frons has to the preposition pro, the Samoan mua-ulu to mua, 'first,' and the English fore-head, to be-fore. The Motu dialect says vaira for 'face, front'; I take this to be a metathesis of pira, for the Motu also says vaira-nai, 'before'; another dialect says vari; with this compare pro, para, and frons. The negroes, to the west of Khartoum, also say ber, bera, for 'one.'

The Australian postposition bir-ung, 'away from,' seems to be connected with this root in the same way as the Greek para. The dictionary meanings of the Sanskrit preposition pra are 'before,' 'away,' 'beginning'; now, if these three meanings were carried to Australia through the Dravidian form pira, they abundantly justify my arguments as to the origin of the Australian word pir, 'one,' and birung, 'away from.' In New Britain pirai means 'odd,' 'not a "round" number' (cf. the game of 'odds and evens'), and this sense must be from a numeral meaning 'one.' In the Ebudan* language of Efate, 'a voice came from heaven' is nafisan sikei i milu elagi mai, in which milu elagi signifies 'away from (direction from) the sky.' Here milu is identical in form and meaning with the Awabakal birung. Further, in New Britain and in the Duke of York Is. (Melanesian), ka, kan mean 'from,' kapi, with verbs of motion, implies 'motion from,' and kabira means 'on account of.' These correspond very well with the forms and uses of the Awabakal postpositions kai, ka-birung, kin-birung. The simple form biru is therefore cognate to the Sanskrit para, Gr., para, 'from.'

Some further light on this point may be got from another quarter. The Hebrew preposition corresponding to birung is min, or, without the n, mi, mä; in form this is not far removed from the bi of birung. Min, originally, is a noun meaning a 'part,' and, in its use as a preposition, it answers first to the partitive genitive or the preposition ex in the classic languages; then, from this primary notion, it is used to signify a 'departing from' any place, 'distance from,' 'proceeding or 'receding from'; in these respects it corresponds exactly with the Australian birung. Now, män, (min), 'a part,' comes from the Heb. root mânâh, 'to divide.' But, in Dravidian, the verb 'to divide' is per, piri, and that also is a close approximation to our Australian birung. In the chief Dravidian dialects, 'a part,' 'a portion' is pâl; this again brings us to the Shemitic pâlâ, pârash, and many other forms of that verb, meaning 'to share,' 'to separate,' &c., and to the Sanskrit phâl, 'to divide,' Gr. meiromai, 'I share,' meros, 'a part,' Lat. pars, and a host of words from these. Now, if birung be the Dravidian piri, per, and if piri, per be the same word as the Sanskrit pâl and the Heb. pâlâ, and if these are all original root-words belonging to a common stock, I cannot see how it is possible for anyone to avoid the force of the argument from this that our Australian indigenes have a share in a common ancestry, and that, in language, their immediate ancestors are the Dravidians of India.

Results in this Section are:—Preposition forms to mean 'before' are, in the primitive languages, pro, pri, pro, prae, pru; other forms are par-a, par-os, pur-as; modes of all these are, fra, fru, vor, fore, and, without the initial letter, ro, ru, air; the Lithuanian has pir, and with this correspond the Dravidian pir-a, 'before,' the Australian pir, 'one,' and the Turkic, bir, 'one.' In Sanskrit, the old ablative form purá means 'formerly,' 'first'; cognates are the Gr. paros, 'before,' and the Zend para, 'before.'

* I have made the word 'Ebudan' (Lat. Ebudes insulae), and use it as more convenient to handle than 'New Hebridean.' The languages spoken on New Britain, New Ireland, Duke of York Island, Solomon Islands, Santa Cruz, and Banks Islands I call 'Albannic' (cf. Lat. Albion), and any root-words which are found in the Malay, Melanesian, and Polynesian languages I call 'Sporadic.'

(b). But the most common word for 'one' in New South Wales is wākul. In fact, it is our Sydney word for 'one,' and there can be no doubt of its genuineness, for it is noted by Lieut.-Colonel Collins as a Port Jackson word in his book on the Colony, published 1802; he spells it wogul. At Newcastle it was wākōl; in the Williams River district, wakul-bo, and on the Manning, wakul. From my manuscript notes I write down the various forms which this word assumes, beginning with Tasmania and passing northwards to the Timor Sea:—Tasmania, mara-i, mara-wa; in Victoria, bur; on the Murray River near Wentworth and Euston, mo, mata, máda, meta-ta; on the middle course of the Darling, waichola; on the Upper Murray, mala; on Monero Plains, yalla; at Moruya, med-enda; in the Murrumbidgee district, mit-ong; at Jervis Bay, met-ann; on Goulburn Plains, met-ong; in the Illawarra district, mit-ung; at Appin, wōgul; at Sydney and northwards to the Manning River and the Hastings, wakul; on Liverpool Plains, mal; at Wellington, mal-anda; in southern Queensland, byáda, muray, baja, byáya; in the Northern Territory of South Australia, mo-tu, wa-rat, wa-dat.

Besides these, some other words for the number 'one' are used in various parts of Australia, but those that I have given all proceed from the original root, which it will be our duty now to discover. And I notice, first of all, that one word in the list stretches along the whole extent of seaboard from the Illawarra district to the Hastings—the word wakul—and this fact affords the presumption that all that coast line was occupied by the same tribe, or by tribes closely akin; for the tribes a little inland say mal and mal-anda for 'one.' Wakul, then, was the word used by the Sydney blacks, as Collins testifies. If a chemist has a compound substance handed to him for analysis, he experiments on it, and tests it in order to discover its elements. Let us do so with wakul; it is a compound, for simple roots are usually monosyllables; but are its parts wa+kul or wak+ul? Here I remember that, in the same region where wakul exists, there is a word kará-kal, 'a wizard,' 'a doctor or medicine-man,' but inland he is called kará-ji. This satisfies me as proof that the -kul is merely a formative syllable, and that the root is wa. And this conviction is strengthened when I cast my eye over the above list of words; for they all begin with the syllable ma or some modification of it, the rest of each word consisting of various formative syllables. As I have now got hold of a clue to a solution, I reflect that the initial labial of a root-word may assume various forms; thus, p, b, m may interchange, and may easily become f, wh, v, w. There can be no doubt, for instance, that the Latin pater, the German vater, and the English father are the same word; there $p=f=v$; and in one district in Scotland the people always say fat for what and far for where; so also the Maori whatu is the Samoan fatu; that is $f=wh$; b and m also are interchangeable, in Oriental languages especially, for m is only the sound of the letter b modified by the emission of a breathing through the nose; m is therefore regarded as a b nasalized. I note also that the words under consideration all begin with the cognate sound of m, b, or w, except yalla; and this example I think must have been at one time walla, that is, uala, of which the u has obtained the sound of i (y); or wa-la may come from the same root as wa-kul, the difference lying only in the termination. The other vowels of root word are o, u, e, i, ai, all of which in Australian are modifications of the original sound a.

Having now discovered the root-germ from which our Sydney friend wakul proceeded, and having noted the various guises which he has assumed in these colonies, we must next ask where he came from, and see if he has any kinsmen in other lands; for, when by searching we find that out, we may perhaps be justified in saying that the Australians brought the root-word with them from those lands. Before setting out on this quest, I observe that when a number of men are arranged in a row, he who is number one is (1) 'before' all the others, and 'in front' of them; he is thereby (2) 'first or foremost'; he has (3) the 'pre-eminence' in honour or authority, and (4) he may be regarded as the 'beginning or origin' of all the others.* We may therefore reasonably expect that words for 'one' will be akin to other words, bearing some one or other of these four meanings. I have already shown that the Kamalarai numeral pir, 'one,' is related to Aryan prepositions meaning 'before,' and to the Maori word ariki (Samoan aliri), 'a chief,' as one having authority and eminence†; I shall now show that the kindred of wakul have the other meanings as well. And, first, I note that the word bokol is used for 'one' in the island of Santo, one of the New Hebrides. Bokol is so like wogul, the Port Jackson word, that I cannot doubt their identity; and yet it is impossible to suppose that the one word can be borrowed from the other. The islanders of Santo can never have had any intercourse with the blacks of Sydney; nor, if they had in any past time, can we believe that either language was so miserably poor as to be without a word of its own for 'one.' The blacks of Santo are a frizzly-haired negroid race; I therefore argue, from the evidence of this word, that these blacks and our blacks have, in some way, one common origin.

* Cf. the Heb. ahādih, kedam, rôsh, aûl or yaâl, for these meanings.

† The Insular-Keltic words for 'chief,' 'principal,' are prionh, ard, araid; and roimh is 'before.' It is evident that these are only corruptions of the root pri, pro, prae, pra, 'before.' In Ku, a Dravidian dialect, 'one' or 'first' is ra (cf. Sk. pra) and in Duke of York Island (New Britain Group), 'one' is ra, re.

I next take you to another Papuan region having a negroid population—a group of islands off the east end of New Guinea and consisting of New Britain, New Ireland, and some others. In the Duke of York Island there, I find the following words, all akin to wakul, viz., makala, 'for the 'first' time' mara, mara-kam, 'for the 'first' time,' marua, 'to bear fruit for the 'first' time, to enter on a new course, to begin,' mara, 100 (= the 'beginning' of a new reckoning), muka, 'first,' muka-na, 'first-born son,' muka-tai, 'first,' mun, 'to go first.* In all these, the root is ma, mu, as in Australia, and the abundance of these derived forms in this Tukiok language proves that the root is indigenous, not borrowed. Among them I observe mara, 'for the 'first' time,' and mara, 100, and this is exactly the Tasmanian word (marawa) for 'one'; another of them is muka, 'first,' and this word, by dropping the k, which is never† sounded in Samoan, becomes the Samoan mua, 'first,' and mua-ulu, 'the fore-head.‡ Mua also is very common in Samoan (as in foe-mua, 'the 'first' or stroke oar,' a-fua, 'to begin'), and thus proves itself to be native to the language. Further, you may have observed that some of the Australian words for 'one' are mo, mata. With mo compare the Santo word mo-ig, 'to begin,'—another proof that the Santoans and the Australians are kinsmen; with mata compare the Motu word mata-ma, 'a beginning,' and mata-mata, 'new,' 'fresh'; the Fijian matai, 'first,' and tau-mada 'before-hand'; the Maori ti-mata, 'to begin'; the Samoan a-mata, 'to begin'; the New Britain a-ma-na, 'before, in front,' mata-na, 'the front,' biti-na 'the commencement'; the Motu badi-na, 'origin,' and the Aneityumese ni-mti-din, 'the front'; with mu compare the Fijian vuna, 'to begin,' and the New Britain wa-vuna, 'to begin,' and the Santo mul, 'a chief,' as being the 'first' man. All these I have noticed in the course of my reading, but I believe there are many other words in these islands which are of the same origin as our Australian word wakul.* I pray you to remember that, with the exception of Samoa and New Zealand, these words all come from Papuan regions and afford indirect evidence that our Australians are allied to the Papuans.

* Compare with this the Tamil postposition mun, 'before.'

† The one solitary exception is puke, 'catch you!'—a child's play-word.

‡ An uncommon form of the root ba is va; and from it the Mangaians (Hervey Islands) say va-ri, 'a beginning'; but in the Koiari dialect of New Guinea this same word means 'the forehead,' 'the face.' This word thus illustrates the procession of meanings from the root pra (para), pro, 'before'; for vari is equivalent to 'that which is before,' hence 'a beginning,' 'the forehead' as the 'front' part of the human body, 'the face'; it also throws some light on the derivation of frons, which has so puzzled Latin etymologists that some of them derive it from the Greek ophrus, 'the eyebrow'! The Motumotu dialect of New Guinea says hali, instead of vari, for 'forehead'; several other dialects there say i-piri-ti, paru, para-na, pira-na, for 'face'; these are all connected with the Dravidian pira, 'before.' The Brahui of Afghanistan says mun, 'the face,' which is the same word as the Tamil, mun, 'before.'

As to the Maori and Samoan congeners that I have quoted, it is commonly alleged that these races are Malayo-Polynesians, on the theory that their languages are of Malay origin †; but let us look at this theory in the light of our present inquiry. It is said that the Polynesians are Malays. Well, let us see. If the Samoans are Malays, then the Duke of York Islanders are Malays; for the word mua, which is essential to the Samoan language, is the same word as the Tukiok muka; therefore the Papuans of that island also are Malays! But the corresponding Malay word is mūla, 'in front,' 'foremost,' 'at first,' and it is certain that muka can never be formed from mula; for, while k may become l, the letter l, when once established in a word, cannot revert to k. Thus the Malay language might be said to have come from the Duke of York Island, as least so far as the evidence of this word goes! But I acknowledge that they may both be taken from one common source, and this, I believe, is the true solution of the question. Where shall we find that common source? The root-form of mula, muka, mua, and of all the others, is ma, mu, and if we can find that root, it will be easy to understand how all these words have been formed independently from that original root; and it will then be unnecessary to say that the Samoan language is of Malay origin, or that the Papuans of the New Britain isles are using a Malay language. I now take you to Southern India, to a group of languages called the Dravidian, occupying the mountains of the Dekkan, and the coasts both to the east and the west of that. Some of these Dravidian tribes are considered by the best authorities to be certainly negroid, and, in England, Prof. Flower, from an examination of their crania, has classed them as kinsmen of the Australians. One of the most cultivated languages of the group is the Tamil, and the Tamilians are known to have class-marriage laws similar to those in Fiji and Australia. Now for 'first' the Tamil says mudal, and this mudal is a verbal noun meaning 'a beginning,' 'priority' in time or place. The root is mu, and dal is a formative syllable. The mu is, without doubt, our Australian

* These and all other words from the New Britain and Duke of York Islands I quote from manuscript dictionaries of these languages, prepared by the missionaries there.

† The name and authority of K. Wilhelm von Humboldt first gave this theory a standing; but we have now much fuller materials on which to form an independent judgment.

root ma, mo, mu. The late Bishop Caldwell says*—"Mudal is connected with the Tamil postposition mun, 'before'; mudal is used as the root of a new verb 'to begin.' Mu evidently signifies 'priority,' and may be the same as the Tamil mu, 'to be old,' mudu, 'antiquity.'" I think there is a better derivation than that. The Sanskrit mûla means 'origin, cause, commencement,' and is the same word as the Malay mula already referred to, and both of these I take from the Sanskrit root-word bhû, 'to begin to be, to become, to be,' with which is connected the Latin fore (fuere), 'to be about to be,' fui, &c. From bhû come such Sanskrit words as bhava, 'birth, origin,' bhâvana, 'causing to be,' bhuvanyu, 'a master or lord' (cf. piran, &c.), and many other words in the Aryan languages. At all events, wakul and these other Australian words for 'one' are assuredly from the same root as the Dravidian mu-dal, 'first,' 'a beginning.' I, for one, cannot believe that words so much alike both in root and meaning should have sprung up by accident over so vast an area as India, Malaya, New Guinea, Fiji, Samoa, and back again to the New Hebrides and Australia. The only rational explanation seems to me to be that these races were all at one time part of a common stock, that in their dispersion they carried with them the root-words of the parent languages, and that in their new habitations they dressed out these root-words with prefixes and affixes by a process of development, just as circumstances required.

Results.—The root in its simplest form is ba, 'to begin to be,' 'to begin'; other forms are bo, bu, bi; ma, mo, mu; ja, ju, vu; wa. The nearest approach to the Australian wakul, 'one,' is the Ebudan bokol, 'one,' and the Tukiok makal-a, 'for the first time,' but many other cognate words are found all over the South Seas in the sense of 'first,' 'begin.' The Tasmanian marawa, 'one,' is the same as the Tukiok maraw, 'for the first time,' and maraw, 100; and in New South Wales, maragai means 'first' in the Mudgee dialect.

2. The Numeral Two.

Almost the only other Australian numeral is bula, 'two.' It is true that several tribes have a distinct word for 'three,' and a few have a word for 'five' taken from the word 'hand,' but in most parts of Australia the number 'three' is expressed by 'two-one,' 'four' by 'two-two,' 'five' by 'two-two-one' and so on. But the word bula is universal; with various changes of termination, it exists from Tasmania in the extreme south, right on to the Gulf of Carpentaria. If you ask me why there is only one word for 'two,' while the words for 'one' are so numerous and different, I reply that, in other languages, and especially in those of the Turanian family, there is a similar diversity in the words for 'one'; and the reason is this, that, wherever there is a considerable number of words for 'origin,' 'commencement,' 'before,' &c., there will be a similar variety in the words for 'one,' which are formed from them. But the range of ideas for 'two' is somewhat limited; the only ideas possible are 'repetition,' or 'following,' or something similar. Let me show you this by a few examples. The Hebrew shênāim, 'two,' is a dual form, and is connected with the verb shânâh, 'to repeat;' the Latins also say 'vigesimo altero anno' to mean in the 'twenty second year;' but alter is 'the other of two,' and in French and English it means to 'change;' and secundus in Latin comes from sequor, 'I follow.' Thus we shall find that words for 'two' are the same as words for 'follow,' 'repeat,' 'another,' 'again,' 'also,' 'and,' and the like; and most of these ideas are usually expressed by forms of the same root-word.

*All my knowledge of the Dravidian race and language comes from Dr. Caldwell's "Comparative Dictionary of the Dravidian or South Indian Family of Languages; second edition; London: Trübner and Co., 1875." In this Introduction, I quote from the notes which I made when I read the book some years ago, and now I cannot always tell whether I am quoting his words or only my own statement of them.

As to the form of the word *bula, we have here no friendly karáji to tell us whether the -la is radical or not. I think that the -la is formative. The Tasmanian bu-ali (Milligan writes it pooalih) is probably the nearest approach to the original form, the bu being the root and the -ali the affix. In the Tasmanian pia-wa, the pia seems to me to be only a dialect form of bula, for the liquid l easily drops out, and in the Aryan languages a modified u approaches very nearly to the sound of i (cf. Eng., sir); in the Polynesian, i often takes the place of u. Thus bula would become bu-a, bi-a, pia. The syllable wa in pia-wa, as in marawa, 'one,' is only a suffix, the same as ba in our colony. All the other words for 'two' are only lengthened forms of bula.

As to the kindred of bula, I find that, in the Papuan island of Aneityum (New Hebrides), the word in-mul is 'twins'; there, in is the common prefix used to form nouns; the mul that remains is bul, 'two'; there also um, for mu, is 'and'; in the other islands it is ma, mo. In New Britain, bal-et is 'again,' bul-ug, 'again,' 'also,' 'another,' mule, 'again,' bula, 'another,' 'an additional one' (cf. ma, 'and'), bula, ka-bila, 'also' (with -bila cf. Tasm. pia), murū, 'to follow.' In Samoan, muli is 'to follow,' fo'i is 'also,' ulu-ga (for fulu-) is a 'couple.' The Fijian has tau-muri, 'behind' in the sense of 'following,' just as tau-mada in Fijian means 'first' or 'before.' The Malay has ulang, 'to repeat,' and pula, 'again, too, likewise.' In some of the Himalayan regions, to which a portion of the aboriginal inhabitants of India was driven by the Aryan invasion, buli, pli, bli means 'four,' that is, as I suppose, 'two-twos,'—a dual form of 'two.'

It seems to me that the Dravidian words maru, 'to change,' murū, 'to turn,' muri, 'to break in two,' are from the same root as bula, and that root is to be found in Aryan words also, such as Lat. mu-to, mu-tu-us; for there is a Sk. root ma, 'to change.' It is known that the Sanskrit dvi, dva, 'two,' gives the Greek dis (for dvis), 'twice,' and the adjective dissos, 'double,' and that dvis gives the Latin bis; but the Sk. dva also gives the Gothic twa, 'other,' 'different,' and the Eng. twain, 'two,' as well as words for 'two' in many languages. Hence I think that our root bu, ba, gives the Samoan væ-ga 'a division,' væga-lemu, 'the half,' and other words; because when people are 'at one' on any subject they are agreed, but when they are at 'twos and threes' they are divided in opinion; and in the same sense I would connect the Lat. divido with the Sk. root dvi. Probably the Latin varius and the English variance are connected with the root ba in that same sense.

I would only add a line to say that our blackfellows use the word bula also to mean 'many.' I do not believe that this is the same word as bula, 'two.' I consider it to come from the same root as the Sanskrit pulu, puru, 'many,' and that root, under the form of par, pla, ple, plu, has ramifications all through the Aryan languages in the sense of 'fill, full, much, more,' &c. The eastern form of this root gives, in New Britain, bula, 'more,' mag, 'many,' buka, 'full'; in Motu, bada is 'much,' and hutu-ma, 'many,' 'multitude'; in Ancityum, a-lup-as (lup=plu), 'much'; in Fiji, vu-ga, 'many'; in Duke of York Island, bu-nui, 'to increase.' In Dravidian, pal is 'many,' pal-gu, 'to become many, to multiply, to increase.' It thus appears that the Australian bula, 'many,' has kindred, not only in Melanesia and the Dekkan, but also all through the Aryan region.

Results.—The root is bu, which denotes 'repetition,' 'change,' and this is the idea which resides in the Hebrew numeral 'two,' and in the Latin alter, 'second'; another, but cognate, idea for 'two' or 'second' is 'that which follows'; of the root bu other forms are bu, bi, pi, ma, mo, mu, fu, fo, and u; from ma, mu, come Dravidian words meaning 'to turn,' 'to change'; and from the same root-forms there are, in the New Hebrides, New Britain, and Polynesia, numerous words in the sense of 'follow,' 'again,' 'another,' 'a couple,' 'also.' The Melanesian word mu-le, 'again,' and the Malay pu-la, 'again,' connect themselves, not only with the Dravidian ma-ru, mu-ru, but also with the Sanskrit word pu-nar, 'back,' 'again,' and also with the Greek pa-lin, 'again.'

VI. OTHER TEST-WORDS.

Words for 'Water,' 'Blind,' 'Eye.'

(a). In dealing with the Australian words for 'water,' 'fire,' 'sun,' 'eye,' &c., I must use brevity. All these can be proved to have their roots in India, and to have stems and branches from these roots in Aryan Europe, in Malay lands, and in the islands of the South Seas. First, let us take up the word for 'water.'

Collins quotes bado as the Port Jackson word for 'water'; others write it badu; it is found in various parts of our colony and in Western Australia. The root is ba, ma, and the du is a suffix; du is also in Dravidian a formative to neuter nouns. The root ma means 'to be liquid,' 'to flow.' It is a very old word; for the Assyrian cuneiform inscriptions have mami, 'waters,' and this is a plural by reduplication; the Hebrew has mo, ma(i), 'water,' moa, 'to flow'; the ancient Egyptian has mo, 'water,' whence, according to some, the name Moses; the Sanskrit has ambu (am for ma, by metathesis), 'water,' the Keltic has amhainn, abhuinn, 'a river,' whence comes the river-name, 'Avon.' From ma come the words wai and vai which are so common for 'water' in the New Hebrides and in the Polynesian islands, and from the same root, in a sense known to the Arabs, by an appropriate euphemism, as 'the water of the feet,' come the Melanesian and Polynesian words mi, mim, mimi, miaga, &c., the Sanskrit mih and the Keltic mùn. From am (= ab=ap) comes the Sanskrit plural form âpas, 'water,' while from ma may come the Latin mad-idus, 'wet.' We found that wa-kul, 'one,' comes from root ba, ma; so, from the root of ba-du, comes the Australian word wa-la, which means 'rain,' and in some places, 'water.'

As to the kindred of our Sydney badu, I would remind you that 'water,' 'rain,' 'sea,' and 'wave,' are cognate ideas; hence the Samangs, who are the Negritos of the peninsula of Malacca, say bat-cao for 'water'; the Motu of New Guinea say medu, 'rain,' batu-gu, 'shower'; the Aneityumese in-cau-pda,* 'rain';

* Cau is the Fijian tau, 'to fall as rain,' and -pda is the same as the New Britain word bata, 'rain'; au in Samoan is 'a current.'

New Britain says bata, 'to rain,' ta-va, 'sea,' and the Maori say awa, 'water.' As a coincidence, it is remarkable that the old high German word awa (cf. the Ger. wasser, Eng. water) means 'water,' and bedu is quoted as an old Phrygio-Macedonian word meaning 'water.'

Some observers have remarked that our blacks soon master the dialects spoken by other tribes, and have ascribed this to a natural readiness in learning languages. But the present inquiry shows that there is another cause for this. A man or woman of the Sydney tribe, which said ba-du for 'water,' would easily recognize ba-na in an adjacent tribe as the same word, the termination only being different, just as it is not hard for Englishmen to remember that the German wasser is water, and that brennen means burn. So also, a Kamalarai black, who says mu-ga, would soon know the Wiradhari mu-pai; and elsewhere mata, 'one,' is not much different from meta and matata for 'one,' or even from the Tasmanian mara.

Results.—Ba, ma, mo, am, ap are forms of an original root meaning 'water,' 'that which is liquid and flows'; derived forms are mi, me, wa; from ba comes the Sydney word ba-du, 'water'; the du here is a suffix in Dravidian also, and exists in the New Guinea word ba-tu, elsewhere ba-ta; the Samang Negritos say bat-eao; the old language of Java has banu, 'water,' where the n has the liquid sound of gn, and takes the place of d in the suffix du. From all this it is clear that our Australian badu is of good and ancient lineage.

(b.) In the Maitland district of New South Wales a 'blind' man is called boko; in Polynesia poko is 'blind,' or, more fully, mata-poko, mata-po, 'eyes-blind.' As there can be no suspicion of borrowing here, how is so striking a resemblance to be accounted for? Do you say that it is a mere coincidence? Well, if so, let us examine the matter. In the Kamalarai region, (see map) mu-ga means 'blind,' and in the Mudjee district, mu-pai is 'dumb'; in Santo (New Hebrides), mog-moga is 'deaf'; in Erromanga, another island of that group, busa is 'dumb'; in Fiji, bo-bo is 'blind'; in Duke of York Island, ba-ba is 'deaf'; in Sanskrit, mu-ka is 'dumb'; in Greek, mu-dos, mu-tis is 'dumb,' Lat. mut-us. In Keltic, bann is 'to bind, tie,' balbh is 'dumb,' and bodhar is 'deaf.' Now, there can be little doubt that in all these words the root is the same (mu, mo; ba, bo, bu; po), and yet these words extend over a very wide area indeed, from Tahiti right across through India to Greece, Italy, and even to John o' Groat's. The meanings are 'blind,' 'deaf,' 'dumb,' and yet the root is the same. The general root-meaning which suits them all is 'to close,' 'to bind'; this meaning shows itself in the Greek verb mu-ō—from which mudos comes—'to close the eyes or mouth,' and in the Sanskrit mu, 'to bind'; similarly the Hebrew (a) illām, 'dumb,' comes from the verb ālām, 'to bind,' 'to be silent'; in the Gospels, the blind man's eyes were 'opened,' and Zacharias, who had been for a time dumb, had 'his mouth opened and his tongue loosed.' The root of our Australian words boko, muga, is therefore the same as the Sanskrit mu, 'to bind.' From the same source come the Samoan pu-puni, 'to shut,' po, 'night'; the Aneityumese at-apn-es (apn=pan), 'to shut,' nā-poi, 'dark clouds'; the New Britain bog, 'clouded,' and the Tukiok bog, 'to cover up'; cf. the Sanskrit bhuka, 'darkness.' In Aneityum, a-pat is 'dark,' 'deaf,' and po-p is 'dumb.' In Malay, puk-kah (cf. mu-ga) is 'deaf,' and bu-ta is 'blind'; ba-bat (cf. ba-ba, bo-bo) is to 'bind'; Fiji has bu-ki-a, 'to tie,' 'to fasten'; New Zealand has pu-pu, 'to tie in bundles,' pu, 'a tribe,' 'bunch,' 'bundle.' It is even possible that our English words bind, bunch, bundle, come, through the Anglo-Saxon, from this same root, ba, bu, mu.

I suppose that these examples will suffice to prove that the similarity between the Australian boko and the Polynesian poko is not a mere coincidence. Where have we room now for the theory that the natives of the South Sea Islands are of Malay origin? I might, with equal justice, say that they came from the Hunter River district in Australia, if I were to look only at the words boko and poko!

Results.—The ideas 'blind,' 'deaf,' 'dumb,' may be reduced to the simple idea 'bound'—the eyes, ears, mouth, or tongue 'closed, bound, tied.' This idea is, in the Aryan languages, expressed mostly by mu, but, in our Eastern languages, by ba, bo; mu, mo; pu, po; all these root-forms are identical, and are the basis of cognate words spreading from the region of 'ultima Thule' across the world to Tahiti. Can this be the result of accident, or of the spontaneous creation of language in several different centres? Is it not rather proof of a common origin? Even in the development of the root, there is a singular correspondence; for the Sanskrit adds -ka, and so do the Malay, the Kamalarai, the Santoan, and the Polynesian; others use t for k.

(c.) The word for 'eye' also may be useful as a sample test-word, for it is not likely to be subject to the influences of change to which I have already referred. In Tasmania a word for 'eye' is mongtena, and the common word in all Australia is mi or mil, or some other simple derived form from the root mi. Mongtena is in Milligan's "Vocabulary of the Dialects of the Aboriginal Tribes of Tasmania," but I have never found that Vocabulary to be satisfactory either as to its phonetics or its critical sagacity. I therefore suppose that the real form is ma-aġ-ta-na; for mong-talinnā is there the word for 'eyelash,' and mong-to-ne is 'to see'; at all events, I consider ma to be its original stem, while the Australian stem is mi, although there are, in various parts of the continent, words with the ma stem. The Australian words for 'eye,' then, are mi, mia, mikal, miki, mir, mil, mial, mina, minúk, miko, mirang; maal, mail; meur, mobara. These words extend from Port Darwin right across to Bass's Straits. Several words formed from the same root mean the 'face,' and compound words are:—wirtin-mirnu, 'eyelid,' turna-mirnu, 'lower eyelid,' wi'cin-mir, 'eye-lash,' genin-mir, 'eye-brow,' kráji-mring, 'white of the eye,' daami-mir, 'the temples,' katen-mirnu, 'a tear.'

Now, it is evident that all these words for 'eye' come from the root ma, mi, me, mo, and that those formed from mi are the most common. This ma is quite sporadic; for, in Samoan, which I take to be original and typical Polynesian, ma means 'clean,' 'pure,' 'bright-red,' maina is 'to shine,' said of fire; mā-lama means either 'the moon' or 'a light'; va-ai is 'to see,' and so on; the Ebudan ma is 'to see'; in New Britain me-me is 'scarlet,' 'bright-red,' and with the meaning of 'red' the Ebudan has me-me-a, miel, miala; in Samoan, mu-mu is 'to burn brightly,' and mú-mú is 'red,' and the Aneityumese ama-mud is 'to burn' transitively; the Maori has ma-hana, 'warm'; Papuan for 'eye' is mata, mara, maka, mana; the Malay has mata, 'eye,' and this is the sporadic word used everywhere for 'eye.'

From all these words, it appears that 'see,' 'clear,' 'shine,' 'eye,' 'burn,' 'fire,' 'red,' are allied terms, and that the root-idea from which they all proceed is that of 'shining brightly.' Now, so far as the eye is concerned, that is an appropriate designation for it; and this appropriateness is elsewhere confirmed by language; for the Sanskrit akshi, 'eye,' Latin oculus, and the Latin acer, 'sharp,' are founded on the root ak, meaning 'keenly bright' or 'sharp,' and the English word 'sheen' is, in Lowland Scotch, applied to the 'bright' part of the eye. Now, I find that meaning in the Sanskrit bhâ, 'to shine,' which is just our root ma. Sanskrit derivatives from this bhâ are bha, 'a star' (with which compare the Australian mirri, 'the stars'), bhaga, 'the sun,' and bhâ, 'light,' bhânu, bhâma, 'light,' 'the sun,' 'passion.' The Greek phai-no is from the same root.

The Dravidian language, like the Australian, seems to prefer the form mi; it has min, 'to glitter,' and hence mina is 'a fish,' so called from its phosphorescent scales.

A Samoan word 'to glisten,' 'to shine,' is ila-ila, applied to the eyes, and in the Papuan of Tagula (south-east coast of New Guinea) ira is 'bright'; at Port Essington (north coast of Australia) ira is the 'eye,' and in some parts of New South Wales ire, yir-oka is the 'sun.' In the Wiradhari dialect, iradu is 'day,' and the Ebudan of Erromanga has ire, 'to-day.' Further, a common word for 'eye' in Queensland is dilli; and

I have no doubt that this is the same Dravidian termination -illi which we shall find in ta-killi-ko and in many other Awabakal words, but here added on to the same root which we find in the Sanskrit di(p), 'to shine.'

The Ebudan of Baki has sembi to mean 'fire'; now sembu in Dravidian means 'red.' In Australia, a very general word for 'fire' is wi, win; in the north-west of Tasmania it is win-alia; these I take to be from the same root as our mil, 'the eye,' and the Dravidian min. In Tasmania also, tintya means 'red'; to which cognates are the Sanskrit damh, dah, 'to burn,' dams, damç, 'to bite,' 'to see'; in Tamil tind-u, is 'to kindle,' tittu, 'to whet'; cf. Anglo-Saxon tendan, 'to kindle,' English tinder.

Besides mata, the Maoris have another word for 'eye,' kan ohi, which much resembles the Dravidian kan, 'the eye,' kân, 'to see'; and the root of kan may be the same syllable as in Sanskrit ak-shi, 'eye,' the ak being by metathesis changed into ka. At all events, the root kan is abundantly prevalent in the sporadic languages; for the Maori itself has kana, 'to stare wildly,' that is, 'to look keenly'; ka, 'to burn'; ka-ka, 'red-hot'; kana-pa, 'bright,' 'shining'; kana-ku, 'fire'; and cognate Polynesian dialects have kano-i-mata, 'the pupil (i.e., 'the sheen') of the eye'; 'a'ano, certain 'red berries,' 'the flesh of animals,' from its redness; ka-napa-napa, 'to glitter'; ka-napa, 'lightning.' The simple root ka gives la, ra, 'the sun,' and all the Polynesian words connected with these forms.

Nor is this root-word ka, kan confined to Polynesian dialects; in Ebudan, 'fire' is in-cap, kapi, kapu, gapu, av, avi; and the Papuan dialects have for 'fire,' kova, kai-wa; for 'burn,' ogabu, igabi. And kai-o in Greek is 'I burn.'

It is interesting to know, also, that in the states which form the Himalayan boundary of India the words for 'eye' are mi, mik, mighi, mak, mo, mak, mo; and, farther east, in Cochin-China and Tonkin, mot, mok, mu. It thus appears that, on the whole our common word mil, 'the eye,' is more akin to the non-Aryan races of India—the representatives of its earlier population.

In closing this section of my subject, I presume I need scarcely say that the evidence before us drawn from the words for 'water,' 'blind,' and 'eye,' fully justifies the opinion that the Australian languages are not isolated, but that, in their essential root-words, they have a close relation to the languages of the Southern Seas and to similar root-words in the languages of the great peninsula of India. I cannot conceive it to be possible that our blackfellows should have, by chance, invented words which, when analysed, show the underlying ideas expressed by them to be the same as those root-words spread over so vast an area elsewhere.

VII. MISCELLANEOUS TEST WORDS.

(a.) There are just two or three other words which I would glance at very rapidly. The Malay kutu means 'louse'; in all Polynesia also that word means 'louse'; therefore, as some persons say, the South Sea Islanders must be Malay-Polynesians. But I find that in Aneityum also, a Papuan region, in-ket is 'louse,' and in South Australia kŭta, and in other parts of Australia, kŭ-lo, gullun. To complete the analogy, these persons should now say that the Papuans of the New Hebrides and the blacks of South Australia are Malay. This looks like a reductio ad absurdum.

(b.) The word kutu reminds me that there are some very un-savoury words, which are a strong proof of identity of origin among races; for, if these words have not come from one common source, it is scarcely possible to imagine how they are so much alike. For instance, gŭ-nung here means stercus hominis aut bestiae; in Sanskrit the root-verb is gu. In Samoan, (k)i-no is 'excrement,' the same word as gŭ-nung. Among our Port Stephens blacks, the worst of the evil spirits is called gŭnung-dhakia=stercus edens.' In Hebrew, a variant for the name Beelzebub is Beelzebŭl, which means dominus stercoris. Again, kak is an Aryan root-verb; in New Guinea it becomes tage (t for k, as is common); in New Britain, tak; in Samoa, ta'e; in Aneityum, no-hok and na-heh. The Sanskrit bhaga, which I need not translate, is in Fiji maga; and in Tasmania maga; and pi, mi, as I have already shown, is as old as the Assyrians.

(c.) The Tasmanian word for 'sun' is pugganubrana or pukkanebrena or pallanubrana or panubrana, according to Milligan's list. Of these, the first is clearly the original form, for the last is merely a contraction of it, and the third substitutes l for g. The last syllable -na is formative, and is exceedingly common in Tasmanian words; it is, I may observe in passing, exactly the same syllable which is used as a common suffix to form nouns in New Guinea and in the Albannic group, and in a slightly different way also in Aneityum. The remainder of the Tasmanian word is pugga and nubra. Now, nubra or nubré in Tasmanian is 'the eye,' but the vocabularies of that language do not enlighten me as to the meaning of pugga. I would write it bŭg-a, and connect it with the New Britain word bŭg (pronounced bŭng), which means 'day'; thus bŭganubra would mean 'the eye of day,' that is, 'the sun'; and that is exactly the meaning of mata-ari, the Malay word for the 'sun.' The Ebudan of Santo has bog, 'day,' and the Fijian for 'sun' is mata-ni-senga. Bug is allied to the Dravidian pag-al, 'day.' Bŭg I take from the Sk. bhâ, 'to shine'; with this compare the derivation of the English word 'day.'

(d.) In the Kamalarai dialect (N.S.W.), kagal means 'bad,' 'no good'; the -gal here, as elsewhere, is formative, and ka is the root. Now kâ is a Sk. prefix meaning 'bad'; in Fiji, 'bad' is ea, and in the New Hebrides, sa; in New Britain it is a-ka-ina.

(e.) The Awabakal word for 'good' is murrarâg; in Wiradhari, it is marang; in Kamalarai, it is murraba; the Port Jackson tribe at Sydney called it bujari. The root is ma, mu, bu; Mr. Threlkeld's spelling should thus have been ma-ra-raġ, that is, ma-ra with the last syllable reduplicated and -aġ added; and murraba should be ma-ra-ba; in bu-jari, the -jari is a very common formative. Analogues to these are:—Albannic, bo-ina, 'good'; Ebudan (Aneityum), up-ene (up for bu); Malay, bā-ik; Papuan, māgē, bo-ēna, na-mo, na-ma. The Sanskrit bha-dra means 'best,' 'happy,' 'well'; and the insular Keltic ma-th is 'good,' 'wholesome,' 'happy.' I believe that the Latin bonus (of which Latin etymologists cannot trace the origin) is connected with these ancient roots; for the Keltic ma-th, i.e., mad, would easily give bon-us.

(f.) The Wiradhari balun, 'dead,' seems to be the same word as the Dravidian mâ-l, 'to die,' and of the same origin as the Polynesian ma-te, 'dead,' and the Malay ma-ti, mang-kat, 'dead.' The old Assyrian has maatu, 'to die,' and the Sanskrit mri (mar), the Malay mi-ta, the Hebrew mûth, mât, are all cognate verbs. The Keltic has bath, bas, 'death.'

(g.) Korien is an Awabakal negative. If it were an Ebudan word, its form in -en would make it a verbal noun equivalent to 'the denying.' Now, it happens that, in the Motu dialect of New Guinea, gorea means 'to deny,' and the Maori ha-hore or hore means 'no' (h for k), and whaka-kore-kore, 'to deny.' The Ebudan of Efate has koro, 'to deny.' Another Awabakal negative is kya-wai, where the kya is for ka. The Maori ka-ua (imperative or optative) also means 'not.'

(h.) Wiyalli is to 'speak.' The Sanskrit vad, vaç, 'to speak,' would give the wiya, and the -alli is the usual verbal form. The Albannic has veti, 'speak.' Fiji has va-ka, 'to say,' and vei wali, 'to joke,' where vei is a reciprocal. The Awabakal wiya means 'say,' 'tell'; New Britain has wi, 'to tell, to inform.'

(i.) The Awabakal bûn means 'to strike,' 'to beat,' 'to kill.' With this compare the Malay bunoh, 'to kill'; the Albannic bua-tari, 'to destroy,' and we-umi, 'to fight,' 'to kill,' of which the we is reciprocal.

(l.) For an adult 'woman,' the Wiradhari says inar; the Port Jackson (Sydney) sub-tribe said din or dhin*; other localities say yinan, ina; thus the d is radical. Several districts, far apart, in

*Hence comes the word jin—so commonly used in Australia to mean the 'wife' of a black man (kuri).

British New Guinea say ina-gu, 'my mother,' ia ina-na, 'his mother,' ine, 'mother,' where the ina is our Australian word; and, in Samoa, tinā is 'mother.' Are these languages not akin? Is it possible that the Papuans, the Polynesians, and the Australians could have borrowed from one another so essential a word as 'woman,' 'mother'? Moreover, in Tamil, inu means 'to bring forth young' (cf. Eng. yeen), and in Malay indū is a word for 'mother.' Are these, too, not akin to our Australian word?

VIII. THE PRONOUNS AS TEST WORDS.

There are few languages in which the pronouns of the first and the second persons are declined throughout by the inflexion of the same base-stem. In the Aryan family, there are at least two bases for each of them, and these are often so disguised by the inflexions that it is difficult to detect them. In English, for instance, there does not seem to be any etymological connection between I and me and we, and a similar diversity exists in the Latin ego, mihī and nos, tu and vos; in the Greek ego, moi, noi, hēmeis; in the Sanskrit aham, mam, vayam, or tvad and yushmad. In Melanesian regions, the corresponding Papuan, Albannic and Ebudan pronouns are apparently considered so volatile and evanescent that a strong demonstrative is added as a backbone for their support, and thus the pronoun itself almost disappears from view. But many of these Melanesian pronouns usually have two forms—a longer and a shorter; the longer and stronger is used for emphasis and can stand alone; the shorter is suffixed to verbs and nouns, and it commonly shows the stem of the pronoun in its primary state. In Latin and Greek, we are already familiar with the strengthening use of demonstratives as regards these two personal pronouns, for we know that ego-ipse, ego-met, vos-met-ipsi, ego-ge, and the like, are used. As examples of the shorter Melanesian forms, I cite the Aneityumese etma-k, 'my father,' etma-m, 'thy father,' etma-n, 'his father,' where the k, m, and n represent the three pronouns of which the longer possessives are unyak, unyum, o un; corresponding suffixes are seen in the Papuan (Murua Is.) nima-gu 'my hand,' nima-mu, 'thy hand,' nima-na, 'his hand.' In Melanesian languages generally, either the separable possessive or its suffix form is used with nouns, although the one and the other use convey a slightly different shade of meaning; thus, the Tukiok dialect says either a nug ruma or a ruma-ig, 'my house,' and the Fijian something similar; but the Papuans say ia nima-na, 'his hand,' ina-gu, 'my mother.'

Each dialect in this volume has some peculiarity; for the Wiradhari has something which looks like suffixed pronouns,* and the Awabakal has a 'conjoined dual'; yet they all have long forms of the first and the second pronouns to be used alone or for the sake of emphasis, while other short forms always go with a verb as its subject. I add a list of the pronouns found in the whole of the Australian, Papuan, and Melanesian regions, so far as they are as yet known to linguists; for, although I shall make only a limited use of this list at present, yet it may be useful to students of language in Britain and elsewhere, especially as the sources from which I have compiled it are not generally accessible.

* See girugal-du on page 111 of this Appendix, gaddal-di on page 112, and other instances in the same section.

AUSTRALIAN PRONOUNS.

The Awabakal pronouns are :—

Singular.	Dual.	Plural.
1st.—Gatoa, baġ, emmo-uġ, tia	Bali, ġali	Ġeen, ġear-un
2nd.—Ġinto, bi, ġiro-ug	Bula	Nura
3rd. Masc.—Niuwoa, noa, ġi- ko-uġ, bón	Buloara	Bara
3rd. Fem.—Boun-toa, boun- noun

For the purpose of comparison, I give the forms of these two pronouns as found in other parts of Australia :—

New South Wales.

1st Pronoun.

3rd— Ia or i	dia-ra	di-tul	di-at

This is a long list, and yet it may be useful, as showing how great a variety there is in the pronominal forms of the Australian and Melanesian languages. But these forms, if subjected to analysis and comparison, will be found to resolve themselves into a few simple elements. In examining the Australian pronouns now given, we must bear in mind that they are subject to some degree of error, which affects also many other lists of Australian words. Australian vocabularies are made often by Englishmen, who, in writing the words, follow the sounds of the vowels as used in English, and sometimes even their own vices of pronunciation; for instance, kinner is written down for kinna, and i-ya for ai-ya. Again, a blackfellow, when asked to give the equivalents for English words, sometimes fails to understand, and so puts one word for another; thus, in some lists that I have seen, the word for 'I' is set down as meaning 'thou'; and even in printing mistakes occur; for, in Mr. Taplin's list of South Australian dialects 'we' is ġun, and 'you' is ġun also; the former should probably be ġén; and kambiyanna is made to mean both 'your father' and 'his father.'

* I prefer Binal and Ternal, because they signify ‘two (three) each time.’

The First Pronoun.—Making all due allowance for such defects, I proceed to examine the Australian pronouns, and I find that, notwithstanding the multitude of their dialect-forms, they have only a very few bases. These are, for the first pronoun—Ga-ad, ġa-ta, ġa-ad-du, ba, mi, mo; and, for the second pronoun—ġin, ġin-da, ġin-du, bi, bu, gula. I leave the demonstrative or third pronoun out of account, as it is not of so much importance to our inquiry. Now, the existence of the base ġa-ad is proved by the forms (given above), ġa-an, ġá-na; the base ġa-ta recurs in ġatha, ġa-ya, ni-te; ġa-ad-du, in ġád-thu, na-thu, a-thu, ġa-tu-ko, &c.; ba gives wa-an, a-an, and, in South Australia, ġa-pa, ġa-ap, a-pa; mo and mi are merely softened forms of ba, and are found in mo-to, wo-kok, mi-na, wi-nak, ġa-mi. Even so unpromising a form as ún-éa (Queensland) connects itself with the base ġa-ta through ġú-éa (South Australia); for some Melanesian dialects prefer to begin words with a vowel, and so transpose the letters of an initial dissyllable; thus, ún-éa is for úġ-éa=ġú-éa=ġá-ta.* Most of the dialect forms of this pronoun given above arise from the interchange of ng, n, and y; the Wiradhari dialect, for example, has ġaddu, naddu, yaddu, 'I,' and these become more liquid still in yallu, -ladu.† Let us observe here, also, that the Tasmanian forms ma-na, mi-na, 'I,' come from the base ma, mi. I have above given six bases for the first pronoun in Australian, and yet there are only two—ad or ta and ba; for mi and mo are only ba differently vocalised, and, in the other three, ġa- is a prefix, as will be shown further on, while the -du of ġa-ad-du is an emphatic suffix.

* The Aneityumese (Ebudan) language is so fond of an initial vowel that it constantly dislocates a consonant in favour of a vowel. Our Australian Vocabularies in this volume have very few words beginning with vowels.

† See Appendix, page 60. Dr. Caldwell was led into error by the form ga dlu, which an authority told him meant 'we' in South Australia. Used alone, it is only 'I,' for ga ddu.

Here comes in a most important question. Are these bases ta and ba exclusively Australian? Emphatically I say, No; for I know that, in Samoan, ta is the pronoun 'I,' and tā (for tā-ua) is 'we two,' 'ita' is 'me,' and ta-tou is 'we'; la'u (i.e., ta-ku, l for d) is 'my.' I quote the Samoan as the representative of the Polynesian dialects. And yet the Maori pronouns of the first and second pronouns present some interesting features. They are:—

- 'I,' 'me'—Ahau, au, awau.
- 'We two'—Taua, maua.
- 'We'—Tatou, matou, matau.
- 'My'—Taku, toku, aku, oku, ahaku.
- 'Thou'—Koe; dual, korua, plu., koutou.
- 'Your'—Tau, tou, au, ou, takorua, takoutou.

Here in 'we two,' 'we,' and 'my,' I see both of our Australian base-forms ta and ma; in 'my' I find the Australian possessive genitive suffix ku, *gu; and in 'we' I take the -tou to be for tolu the Polynesian for 'three,' three being used in an indefinite way to mean any number beyond two.† Then, in Fiji, I find that 'I,' 'me' is au, which may be for ta-u, for the binal form of it is -da-ru (i.e., da+rua, 'two'), the ternal is -da-tou (i.e., da+tolu, 'three'), and the plural is da. In the Motu dialect of New Guinea, 'I' is la-u, of which the plural is (inclusive) ai (for ta-i?) and (exclusive) i-ta. In other parts of New Guinea, 'I' is da, ya-u, ná-u, na-na, la-u, and, for the plural, ki-ta, i-ta (cf. Samoan). Ebudan parallels are—'I,' e-nau, iau, ain-ya-k; for the plural, hi-da, ki-to, a-kity; possessive forms are tio-ku, otea, u-ja. The Tukiok forms iau, io, yo; da-ra, da-tul, dat, correspond mainly with the Fijian, and are all from the root da, ta.

I think that I have thus proved that our Australian base ta is not local, but sporadic, and that, so far as this evidence has any weight, the brown Polynesians have something in common with the Melanesian race.

My next inquiry is this—Has this base, ta, da, ad, any connection with the other race-languages? And at once I remember that the old Persian for 'I' is ad-am, and this corresponds with the Sanskrit ah-am, of which the stem is agh-, as seen in the Græco-Latin ego and the Germanic ich. I assume an earlier form of this base to have been ak-, but, whether this Indian ak- or the Iranian ad- is the older, I cannot say. At all events, the change of ak into at and then into ad, and conversely, is a common phonetic change, and is at this moment going on copiously in Polynesia. The ak is now in present use in the Malay aku, 'I.'

*The possessive termination for persons in Awabakal is -umba; this I take to be for gu-mba, the gu being the possessive formative in Wiradhari; it corresponds to the Ebudan ki, which is used in the same way.

† Cf. Singular, Dual, and (all else) Plural.

The other Australian base-form of the first pronoun is ba, and this, in the forms of ma, me, mi, mo, is so common in all languages that I need scarcely quote more than Sanskrit mad (the base), 'I'; the Græco-Latin emou, mou; mihi, me; and the English, 'we.' This base, ba, gives us the Awabakal simple nominative bá ġ (for ba-a ġ), -a ġ being one of the most common of Australian formatives. Then, of the possessive form, emmo-ú ġ, which I would write emo-u ġ, I take the e to be merely enunciative, the -ú ġ being a possessive formation; the mo that remains is the same as in the Australian mo-to, wo-kok, 'I,' the Papuan, mōu, 'I.' The Awabakal ba-li, 'we two' (both being present), is ba + li, where the -li is probably a dual form.

The Awabakal accusative of the first pronoun is tia, or, as I would write it, tya or éa; cf. ġu'éa and úncá. This tia appears again in the vocative ka-tio-u, and is, I think, only a phonetic form of the ta which I have already examined.

I think, also, that the Hebrew pronoun an-oki, 'I,' is connected with our root ak, at, ta; for it seems to be pretty well assured that the an- there is merely a demonstrative particle placed before the real root-form -ok-i; for the Egyptian pronouns of the first and second persons have it (-an, -ant, -ent) also. And this quite corresponds with our Awabakal pronouns of the first and second persons, ġa-toa and ġin-toa; for, in my view, they both begin with a demonstrative ġa, which exists also in Polynesian as a prothetic nga, nge.* In Awabakal, I see it in ġa-li, 'this,' ġa-la, 'that,' and in the interrogative ġan, 'who' ? for interrogatives come from a demonstrative or indefinite base (cf. the word minyug on page 3 of the Appendix). Here again, in the Awabakal word ġan, 'who' ? we are brought into contact with Aryan equivalents; for, if ġan is for ká-an, as seems likely, then it leads us to the Sanskrit ka-s, 'who' ? Zend, evañt = Latin quan-tus ? Latin, quod, ubi, &c., Gothic, hvan = English, 'when' ? Lithuanian, kà-s, 'who' ? Irish, ean, 'whence' ? Kymric, pa, 'who' ? Greek, pōs, 'how' ? po-then, 'whence' ?

In the Australian plural forms ġéanni, ġéen, we have again the prefix demonstrative ġa, but now softened into ġe (cf. the Maori prefix nge) because of the short vowel that follows. The next syllable, an, is a liquid form of ad, ta, 'I,' and the ni may be a pluralising addition—the same as in the Papuan ni-mo. It should here be remembered, however, that the Australian languages seldom have special forms for the plural; for ta may mean either 'I' or 'we'; to indicate the plural number some pluralising word must be added to ta; thus in Western Australia 'we' is ġala-ta, literally 'all-I.' Some pronouns, however, seem to have absorbed these suffix pluralising words, whatever they were, and thus to have acquired plural terminations ; of this our géanni is an instance ; in western Victoria, 'we' is expressed by ga-ta-en, that is, gata, 'I,' with the suffix -en—the same as the -ni of géanni. The Awabakal 'we' is géen. Such plurals are very old, for they are found in the Babylonian syllabaries ; there the second pronoun is zu ; its plural is zu enan, that is, 'thou-they' = ye ; there also, 'I' is mu ; with which compare ba, na.

The Second Pronoun.—There are only two base-forms for the second pronoun, bi or bu and gin. The latter is strengthened by the addition of -da, which may also be -de, -di, -do, -du, and these vocalic changes support my contention, that this syllable proceeds from the demonstrative ta, for if the original is da or ta, all the others may proceed from that, but it is not likely that, conversely, any one of them would change into -da. The -toa in the Awabakal gin-toa is the same as in gat-toa, and the initial g is the same as ga, ge. But what is the body of the word—the -in ? I can only say with certainty that it is the base-form of the second pronoun, for I can give no further account of it. Possibly, it is for bin with the b (v) abraded ; for the other base-form, although it now appears as bi, may have been originally bin—the same as the accusative ; and yet, in the accusative dual, we have gali-n and bulu-n, and in the singular bón for bo-un, where the n seems to be a case-sign. If the -in of gintoa is for bin, then we get back to bi as the only base-form of the second Australian pronoun, and bi gives the forms wi-ye, wé, i-mi-ba, win-in, q.v. The other base-form of bi is bu, and this is attested in Australian by búbla, wuru, nuro, nuni, q.v. ; the n'yuraġ in South Australia shows how the initial n has come in, for that plural is equivalent to gvurag, from bu ; it also shows the origin of the Awabakal plural nu-ra. The -ra there is certainly a plural form ; for we have it in ta-ra, 'those,' from the singular demonstrative ta, and in ba-ra, 'they,' from ba. In the genitive géar-unba, 'of us,' the -ar may be this -ra, but it may also be simply the -an of the nominative. This same -ra is a pluralising suffix in Melanesia. In many parts of Melanesia, likewise, this mu—often when used as a verbal suffix—is the pronoun 'thou.'

I may here venture the conjecture, without adding any weight to it, that, as the Sanskrit dva, 'two,' gives the Latin bis, bi, so, on the same principle, the Sanskrit tva, 'thou,' may be the old form to which our bi, bu is allied.

As to the prefix ga, I know that, in New Britain, ngo is 'this,' in Aneityum, nai, naico, i-naico is 'that.' This nga, also, as a prefix, occurs in a considerable number of words in Samoan ; for instance, tasi is 'one,' and tusa is 'alike,' solo is 'swift' ; an intensive meaning of each is expressed by ga-tasi, ga-tusa, ga-solo ; the numeral 'ten' is ġa-fulu which I take to mean 'the whole' (sc. fingers). In Teutonic, it seems to have sometimes a collective force, as in ge-birge, 'mountains,' and sometimes an intensive, as in Gothic, ga-bigs, from Sanskrit bhaga, the 'sun.' In Latin the suffix e in sic is supposed to be the remains of a demonstrative.

Gátoa, then, is to me made up of ġa+ad+do, the -do being the same suffix particle of emphasis which is elsewhere in Australia written -du, and the -do is extended into -toa, also for emphasis, as in the Wiradhari yama, yamoa, and other Australian words. It is quite possible that this -do also is only the demonstrative ta—so often used in composition in Awabakal—changed into -to, -do, according to the rules on pages 10 and 11 of this volume.

From the lists of pronouns given above, it will be seen that Fijian also prefixes a demonstrative ko, ko-i to its first and second pronouns. This same particle, ko, o is also prefixed to nouns, and especially to proper names. In Samoan, 'o, that is, ko, is placed before nouns and pronouns when they are used as the subject of a proposition—this, also, for emphasis, to direct attention to the agent, like the agent-nominative case in Awabakal.

In the Ebudan and Papuan pronouns, a similar prothetic demonstrative is found; there it has the forms of na, ain, en, a, ka, ha, ya, ye; in many of the Ebudan dialects,—the Aneityumese, for instance—the demonstrative in, ni, elsewhere na, is prefixed to almost every word that is used as a noun. In other parts of Melanesia, the na is a suffix.

Finally, I placed the Dravidian pronouns in my list in order to compare them with the Australian. And the comparison is instructive. They are, chiefly, nân, yân, for the first person, and nin, ni for the second. Dr. Caldwell himself considers the initial n in each case to be not radical, and the base forms to be ân and in. This is a close approximation to our Australian bases; for we have the three forms, ġád-du, nád-du, yád-du, in which the n and the y proceed from the original nasal-guttural ġ, and that ġ, as I have shown, is only a demonstrative prefix. The d of nád and yád may easily pass into its liquid n, thereby giving the Dravidian nân and yân; and the Australian forms are older, for while d will give n, n, when established in a word, will not revert to d. So also, the Dravidian nin will come from the earlier ġin, which we find in the Australian ġinda.

IX. THE FORMATION OF WORDS.

Any one who examines the Vocabularies of the Awabakal and the Wiradhari dialects will see how readily the Australian language can form derivative words from simple roots, and how expressive those words may become. The language is specially rich in verb-forms. As an illustration of this, let us take from the Wiradhari dialect the root verb bangā, of which the original meaning is that of 'breaking,' 'dividing,' 'separating.' From that root are formed—bang-āna, 'to break' (intrans.), bang-āra, 'to break' (trans.), bangā-māra, 'to (make to) break,' and, with various other adaptations of the root-meaning, bangā-hira, bangā-dira, bangā-nira, bangā-naringa, bangā-dara, bangā-gambira, bangā-dambira, bangā-durmanbira, bang-al-gāra. It is true that these varying formatives resolve themselves into a few simple elements, but they certainly convey different shades of meaning; else, why should they exist in the language? Nor is the root bangā the only one on which such changes are made; for the Wiradhari vocabulary contains numerous instances of similar formations.

Then the modes of a verb are also usually abundant and precise. In the Indicative mood, the Awabakal dialect has nine different tenses, and the Wiradhari has one more, the future perfect. Our Australian verb thus rivals and excels the Greek and the Sanskrit, for it thus has four futures, and, for time past, it has three forms, marking the past time as instant, proximate, and remote. Corresponding to these tenses, there are nine participles, each of which may be used as a finite verb. Besides an Imperative mood and a Subjunctive mood, there are reflexive and reciprocal forms, forms of negation, forms to express continuance, iteration, imminence, and contemporary circumstances. Now, as the Australian language is agglutinative, not inflexional, the verb acquires all these modifications by adding on to its root-form various independent particles, which, if we could trace them to their source, would be found to be nouns or verbs originally, and to contain the various shades of meaning expressed by these modes of the verb. The Fijian verb—in a Melanesian region—is also rich in forms; for it has verbs intransitive, transitive, passive, and, with prefixes, intensive, causative, reciprocal, and reciprocal-causative. And among the mountains of the Dekkan of India—also a black region—the verb, as used by the Todas and Gonds, is much richer than that of the Tamil, the most cultivated dialect of the same race.

And, in Australian, this copiousness of diction is not confined to the verbs; it shows itself also in the building up of other words. On page 102 of this volume, a sample is given of the manner in which common nouns may be formed by the adding on of particles. Mr. Hale, whom I have already named, gives other instances, doubtless derived from his converse with Mr. Threlkeld at Lake Macquarie, and, although some of the words he quotes are used for ideas quite unknown to a blackfellow in his native state, yet they are a proof of the facility of expression which is inherent in the language. I quote Mr. Hale's examples:—

If we follow the numbers on the columns, and remember that the word in column No. 1 always denotes the person who does the action of the verb, the meanings which these words bear—all springing from the verbal root-form and meaning—may be shown thus:—

From

- Bún-ki-lli —2. a boxer ; 3. a cudgel ; 4. a blow ; 5. the smiting ;
6. a pugilistic ring ; root-meaning, 'smite.'
- Gakuya-lli —2. a liar ; 3. a pretence ; 4. deceit ; 5. the 'deceiving ;
6. a gambling-house ; rt.m., 'deceive.'
- Goloma-lli —2. a saviour ; 3. a safeguard ; 4. protection ; 5. the protecting ; 6. a fortress ; rt.m., 'protect.'
- Gu-ki-lli —2. an almoner ; 3. a shop ; 4. liberality ; 5. the giving of a thing ; 6. a market ; rt.m., 'give.'
- Gura-lli —2. a listener ; 3. an ear-trumpet ; 4. attention ; 5. the act of hearing ; 6. a news-room ; rt.m., 'hear.'
- Ko-ri-lli —2. a porter ; 3. a yoke ; 4. a carriage ; 5. the carrying ;
6. a wharf ; rt.m., 'carry.'
- Man-ki-lli —2. a thief ; 3. a trap ; 4. a grasp ; 5. the taking ; 6. a bank ; rt.m., 'take.'
- Pirri-ki-lli —2. a sluggard ; 3. a couch ; 4. rest ; 5. the reclining ;
6. a bedroom ; rt.m., 'recline.'
- Tiwa-lli —2. a searcher ; 3. a drag ; 4. search ; 5. the seeking ;
6. the woods ; rt.m., 'seek.'
- Uma-lli —2. an artisan ; 3. a tool ; 4. work ; 5. the doing ; 6. a manufactory ; rt.m., 'do.'
- Upa-lli —2. a writer ; 3. a pen ; 4. performance ; 5. the performing ; 6. a desk ; rt.m., 'perform.'
- Uwa-lli —2. a wanderer ; 3. a coach ; 4. a journey ; 5. the walking ; 6. a parade ground ; rt.m., 'walk.'
- Wiroba-lli —2. a disciple ; 3. a portmanteau ; 4. pursuit ; 5. the act of following ; 6. the barracks ; rt.m., 'follow.'
- Wiya-lli —2. a commander ; 3. a book ; 4. speech ; 5. the speaking ; 6. a pulpit ; rt.m., 'speak.'
- Wún-ki-lli —2. a magistrate ; 3. a watch-house ; 4. resignation ;
5. the leaving ; 6. the jail ; rt.m., 'leave.'
- Yallawa-lli —2. an idler ; 3. a seat ; 4. a session ; 5. the act of sitting ; 6. a pew ; rt.m., 'sit.'

As to the origin of these formatives, I think that kan equals k + an, the -an being a personal suffix from the same source as the demonstrative un-ni, 'this' ; in Wiradhari it is -dain, that is d + ain, the -ain being the same as -an. We shall find further on that k, d, t, g and other consonants are used in this language merely to tack on the suffix. Similarly, in Fijian and Samoan, there is a great variety of consonants in use for this purpose. The -kanne seems to be a softer form of -kannai or -kanmai, the -mai being a common formative. The -ta of number 5 is a demonstrative which is used abundantly in the language as a strengthening particle; and the -to is the agent-nominative form (see pp. 10, 11) of -ta. The -geil of number 6, or, as I write it, -gél, seems to me to be of the same origin as the suffix -kál (see page 18); a corresponding word in Dravidian is kál, 'a place.' The -yé of number 2 denotes a continued action, and may be the same as the imperative form -ía, that is -iya.

In the list given above, 'a magistrate' is called wúnkiye because he 'commits' the culprit to jail, and 'the watch-house' or jail is therefore wúnkilligél. The wirrobállikan are the 'light-horse,' who act as an escort to the Governor of the colony, and the place where they are housed is therefore wirrobálligél. In the Gospel, the disciples of Christ are called wirrobállikan, and their following of Him for instruction—their discipleship—is wirrobállikanne-ta. Búnkillikanne may be a 'musket,' because it 'strikes' with a ball, or it may be a 'hammer,' a 'mallet,' which gives 'blows.'

The reader has observed that all the verbals in the first column above contain the syllable -illi, and, as that table has given us examples of synthesis, it may be profitable now to examine the formation of Australian words by employing etymological analysis. With this view, I take up the Awabakal verb takilliko, 'to eat,' and I take this word, because the idea expressed by it is so essential to a language, that it is impossible that the word should be a loan-word. Now, the verb 'to eat' has, in Australian, many forms, such as thalli, dalli, thaldinna, thilala, dira, chakol, taka, tala, and, in Tasmania, tuggara, tughli, te-ganna. Of all these, the simplest is taka, which is used by the northern portion of the Kuriégai tribe (see map) in N. S. Wales. On comparing taka and tala, it is evident that the simple root is ta, and all the others come from this; chakol, for instance, is ta palatalized into éa, with -kál added; di-ra has the suffix -ra added on to the root ta, vocalized into di; and díra gives the universal Australian word for the 'teeth,' just as the Sanskrit dant, 'a tooth' (cf. Lat. dens), is a participial form of the verb ad, 'to eat.' The Tasmanian words, which I have here restored to something like a rational mode of spelling, are clearly the same as the Australian. Nor is the root ta confined to Australia; it is spread all over the East as ta or ka. In Samoa (Polynesian), it is tau-te, tau-mafa, and 'ai, that is (k)ai; in Aneityum (Melanesian), it is caig; in Efate, kani; in Duke of York Island, ani, wa-gan; in Motu (New Guinea), ania; in New Britain, an, yan. The Dravidian is un, and the Sanskrit is ad and khád. Our English word eat, Gothic ita, Latin edo, are from the same root. The Malay is ma-kan, of which the ma is also pa, ba, and with this corresponds the Melanesian (Efate) ba-mi, 'to eat.' Now, it seems to me likely that in primitive speech there were, alongside of each other, three root-forms, ba, ad, and kad, of which ba and ad passed to the West and produced the Greek pha-go, and e(s)thio, the Latin edo, the English eat, while kad spread to the East and is the source of all the other words; ba in a less degree accompanied it, and gives bami (Efate), -ma-fa (Samoa), and the Malay ma-kan. This root ba seems also to exist in Australia, for one dialect has a-balli, 'to eat.'

In the Samoan tau-te (a chief's word), the tau is an intensive and therefore, in this case, honorific, prefix, and the tē is our root ta; it thus corresponds with the Tasmanian tē-ganna.

In various parts of British New Guinea, words for 'eat' are bai, uai, mo-ana, kani-kani, an-an, ye-kai; and for 'food,' kai, kān, ani-ani, ai-ai, mala-m, ala, wa-la. All these come from the roots ba and ka, kan; with an-an (an for kan) compare the Dravidian un, 'to eat.'

Thus I dispose of the Awabakal root ta, 'to eat'; and, if the analogies given above are well founded, then I am sure that our Australian blacks have a share with the rest of the world in a common heritage of language.

When the radical syllable, ta, is removed, the remainder of our sample word is -killi-ko, and both of these are formative. On comparing ta-killi-ko with other Awabakal verbs, such as um-ulli-ko, wi-yelli-ko, um-olli-ko, and with the Wiradhari verbs and verbals da-alli, d-illi-ga, b-illi-ga, it is obvious that the essential portion of the affix is -illi or -alli, the consonants before it being merely euphonic. In the Dravidian languages, similar consonants, r, y, m, n, d, t, g, are inserted to prevent hiatus, and in Fiji and Samoa there is also a great variety of consonants used to introduce suffixes. Then, as to the -illi or -alli, I find exactly the same formative in Gond—an uncultured dialect of the Dravidian; there the infinitive of a verb has -âlê or -ilê; and in Tamil, the verbal noun in -al, with the dative sign -ku added, is used as an infinitive; in Canarese the -al is an infinitive without the -ku. In all this we have a close parallel to the Awabakal infinitive in -alli-ko, -illi-ko, for some of our dialects have the dative in -ol, -âl.* Our formative, when attached to a verb-root, makes it a verbal noun, as būn-killi, 'the act of smiting'; hence the appropriateness of the suffix -ku, 'to,' a post-position.

The -ko in ta-killi-ko is equivalent to the English 'to' with verbs, except that it is used as a post-position in Awabakal, where it is the common dative sign. It also resembles, both in form and use, the Latin supine in -tum. This Sanskrit -tum is the accusative of the suffix -tu to express agency, and may thus correspond with our Australian suffix -to, -du, which is used in a similar manner. In the Diyeri dialect*, the infinitive ends in mi, which means 'to'; in Aneityumese ini means 'to.' Now, in all the Dravidian dialects, the sign of the dative case is ku, ki, ge; in Hindi it is ko, in Bengali kê; other forms in India are khê, -ghai, -gai; with this -gai compare the Miryung dative in -gai*. In the Kôta dialect of the Dravidian, the dative sign is ke, and the locative is -ol-ge; the infinitive ends in -alik, probably a compound of ali and ke; the Aneityumese infinitive in -aliek is very like that. A close parallel to our Awabakal infinitive in -ko is the Dravidian infinitive in -gu; as, kuru, 'short,' kuru-gu, 'to diminish.' In the Malay languages, transitive verbs are formed by prefixes and affixes; of the latter, the most common is kan, which may be the preposition ka, 'to.'

In the Ebudan languages, ki is a genitive and a dative sign, and in one of them, Malekulan, bi, 'to,' makes an infinitive (cf. the South Australian mi), and this same bi is used like the Latin ut, 'in order that'; with this compare the Awabakal koa (page 75, et al.)—a lengthened form of -ko. In Fijian, some transitive verbs take ki, 'to,' after them, but a common termination for the infinitive is -ka, and the 'i (sometimes 'o) of many verbs in Samoan may be the same termination.

Our infinitive denotes the 'end' or 'purpose' for which anything is done; hence the dative sign; so also in Sanskrit, it would be correct to use the dative in -ana of the verbal noun. In the Wiradhari dialect, -ana is a very common termination for infinitives; but I do not know that it has any relation to the Sanskrit -ana.

I have taken this verb takilliko as an example of the formation of an infinitive in Awabakal; all other infinitives in that dialect are formed in the same way; the variations -ulli-ko, olli-ko, elli-ko proceed from -alli, which I would write -âlli, so as to include the vowel changes all in one sign. In other dialects, there are many other forms for the infinitive, but this one in -illi is not confined to the Kuriġgai tribe, but is found also in Victoria.

Another similar and very important verb in the Awabakal is kakilliko, the verb 'to be.' On the same principles, as shown above, the -killiko here is terminational and the root is ka. Here again the Dravidian dialects assist us to trace the word; for the Tamil has â-gu, 'to become,' the Telugu has kâ, the Canarese âgal, and the Gond ay-âlê. Our Wiradhari dialect says ġinya (for ġi-ġa), 'to become.' It is possible that these forms have a parallel, but independent, relation to the Sanskrit roots gan and ga, 'to come into being,' Greek ġigno-mai, ġino-mai.

X. GRAMMATICAL FORMS AND SYNTAX.

The consideration of the grammatical forms and the syntax of a language is a very important part of comparative grammar, and is a more potent proof of identity of origin than mere words can be; for, while words may be abundantly introduced from abroad, as the history of our English language testifies, yet the essential structure of allied languages is as little liable to change as the cranial character of a race. As none of the dialects spoken in Australia has had the chance of becoming fixed by being reduced to writing, the materials available for comparing them with themselves and with other languages are in a state of flux and decay, and any effort to determine their grammar will be only provisional at present, and subject to errors arising from the imperfect state of our information about them. Nevertheless, allowance being made for this source of imperfection and error, several of their features may be regarded as well-determined; and it will here be convenient to arrange these in numbered paragraphs.

1. The Australian languages are in the agglutinative stage; the relations which words and ideas bear to each other in a sentence are shown by independent words, often monosyllables, which do not lose their identity when attached to the word which they thus qualify. For example, 'he is the son of a good (native) man,' in Awabakal, is noa yinál mararág ko ba kúri ko ba, where the monosyllables ko and ba express the relation of yinál to kúri, and are otherwise in common use as distinct words; they can be combined and fastened on to kúri so that the whole may be pronounced as one word, kúrikoba, but they do not thus become lost as case-endings. These particles ko-ba, when thus united, may be also treated as an independent word, even as a verb, for koba-toara is a verbal form, meaning 'a thing that is in possession, gotten, acquired.'

Similarly, the tenses of the verb are indicated by particles added on to the stem; as, búm-mara-bún-bill-ai-koa bağ, 'that I may permit the one to be struck by the other'; here bún is the root-form, 'strike,' which may be almost any part of speech; mar-a is an independent stem meaning 'make' (ma); bún is another verb conveying the idea of 'permission'; it is not used as a separate word, but it appears to be only a derived form of the verb ba, (ma), 'to make,' 'to let'; the rest of our sample word is bill-ai-koa; of these, koa is a lengthened form of the preposition ko, 'to,' and is equivalent to the Latin conjunction ut; the -ai has a reciprocal force, and b-illi is the same formative which we found in ta-killi-ko, q.v. Thus our sample-word is made up of three verbs, a formative (illi), which, perhaps, is of the nature of a demonstrative, a particle, and the infinitive post-position, which, as to its origin, may have been a verb.

2. Nevertheless, several dialects have forms which show the agglutinative words on the way to become inflexional. In the dialect of Western Australia, 'the woman's staff' is yago-ák wanna, in which the -ák has lost its independence, and is as much a case-ending as the e, i, or is of the Latin genitive. So also in Awabakal; the -úmba of kokara emoúmba, 'my house,' may be regarded as inflexional; for, although the -ba can be detached and used as a separate word, not so the -úm. I believe the -úmba to be a weathering for gu-mba, the gu being a dialect form of the post-position ko, as in Wiradhari; yet the -ú cannot stand alone; the m belongs to the ba.

3. As to the Cases of nouns and pronouns, they are shown by separable post-positions which are themselves nouns, adjectives, or verbs. The post-position birung, for example, meaning 'away from,' is an adjective in the Wiradhari dialect, and means 'far distant,' while birandi, another form from the same root, is the post-position, 'from.' The other post-positions in the paradigm on page 16 are all taken from the monosyllables ka and ko. Of these, I take ko to be a root-verb, implying 'motion to,' and ka another, meaning 'to be' in a certain state or place; but of their origin I can give no account, unless ka be related to the Dravidian verb águ, already noticed, and ko be a modified form of ka. These two roots, variously combined, become the post-positions kai, kin-ko, ka-ko, kin-ba, ka-ba, ka-birung, kin-birung on page 16; by the influence of the final consonant of the words to which they are joined, the initial k of these becomes t, l, or r.

A similar account of the post-positions in the Narrinyéri, the Diyéri, and other distant dialects could, no doubt, be given, but from the scantiness of our knowledge, that is at present impossible.

4. As to the Gender of nouns, that is either implied in the meaning of the word or to be guessed from the context. In Fijian, a word is added to mark the gender; for example, gone is 'child,' and, from it, a gone tagane is 'a boy,' but a gone alewa is 'a girl.' The Samoans say uli po'a and uli fafine to mean a 'male dog' and a 'female dog,' and the Ebudans something similar. Our Australians have no such devices, but they have some words in which the gender is clearly distinguished by an ending added on, or by a change of the vowel sound of the final syllable of the word. The most common feminine suffix is -gun; as, mobi, 'a blind man,' mobi-gun, 'a blind woman'; yinal, 'a son,' yinal-kun, 'a daughter'; another suffix is -ín; as, Awabakal, 'a man of Awaba,' Awaba-kal-ín, 'a woman of Awaba'; makoro-ban, makoro-bin, 'a fisher-man,' 'a fisher-woman,' show a change in the vowel sound. I think that, in proportion to the extent of the language, instances of this kind—the expression of gender by change of termination—are quite as common in Australian as they are in English. To this extent, therefore, the Australian dialects are sex-denoting.

The -ban in makoro-ban seems to be a masculine suffix; in the Minyung dialect, yerrubil is 'a song,' yerrubil-gin, 'a singer,' and yerrubil-gin-gun is a 'songstress.' The Wiradhari-dain in birbal-dain, 'a baker,' from birbára, 'to bake,' and in many other words, is also a masculine termination.

5. As to Number of nouns and pronouns, the same word, and the same form of it, does duty both as singular and plural; the context shows which is meant; e.g., kúri is 'a (native) man,' but kúri is also 'men'; if the speaker wishes to say, 'a man came home,' that would be wakál kúri, 'one man'—the numeral being used just in the same way as our Saxon 'an,' 'ane'—but 'the men' would be bara kúri, 'they-man,' not kúri bara, as the Aryan arrangement of the words would be. Hence the pronoun ngaddu, ngadlu may mean either 'I' or 'we'; to mark the number some pluralising word must be added to nouns and pronouns, such as in the gala-ta, 'we,' of Western Australia, where the gala is equivalent to 'they,' or perhaps 'all.' In Wiradhari, galang is added on to form plurals. Nevertheless, there are, among the pronouns, terminations which appear to be plural forms, as, nge-an-ni, 'we,' nu-ra, 'you,' which I have already considered in the section on the Australian pronouns.

The declension of yago, 'a woman' (page 49 of Appendix), is an example of a termination added on to form the plural of a noun, and shows how much akin our Australian language is to the Dravidian and other branches of the Turanian family. Yago takes -mān as a plural ending, and to that affixes the signs of case which are used for the singular number. As a parallel, I cite the Turanian of Hungary; there, ur is 'master,' ur-am is 'my master,' ur-aim, 'my masters,' ur-am-nak, 'to my master,' ur-aim-nak, 'to my masters.' The Dravidian has not, in general, post-fixed possessives, but our Narrinyeri dialect has them, and they are quite common in the Papuan and Ebudan languages. In Fijian, the possessives, with nouns of relationship or members of the body or parts of a thing, are always post-fixed. And in Dravidian, when a noun denotes a rational being, the pronominal termination is suffixed.

6. The Minyung dialect (page 4, Appendix) makes a distinction between life-nouns and non-life nouns, and varies the endings of its adjectives accordingly. Something similar exists in Dravidian; for it has special forms for epicene plurals and for rational plurals and for neuter plurals; and, of course, in the classic languages the a of the neuter plural is distinctive. But in Fijian, the Minyung principle is carried out more fully, for possessives vary their radical form according as the nouns to which they are joined denote things to be held merely in possession, or to be eaten, or to be drunk. In Samoan there is a somewhat similar use of lona and lana, 'his.'

7. In the Awabakal dialect (see the Gospel passim), a main feature is the use of the demonstrative ta as a suffix; it is added to nouns, adjectives, pronouns, and adverbs, and always has the effect of strengthening the word to which it is joined; as, unni ta kuri, 'this man,' wakál-la purreàng, 'one day'; its plural is ta-ra; another form, apparently a plural, is tai, as in mararàng-tai, 'the good'; the singular form tarai means 'some one,' 'another.' Ta is simply a demonstrative particle, and may be related to the Sanskrit tad, 'this,' 'that.' Ta is always a suffix, and I consider it the same word as the demonstrative -na, which is so common as a suffix to nouns in all Melanesia, and sometimes in Polynesia. Some Ebudan dialects use it as a prefix, na, ni, in. In Telugu, ni and na are attached to certain classes of nouns before adding the case signs, as da-ni-ki, 'to that.' This ta is probably the same as the Dravidian da of inda, 'this,' anda, 'that.'

8. In Awabakal, a noun or adjective, when used as the subject of a proposition, takes ko (to, lo) as a suffix; so also in Fijian and Samoan, ko, 'o as a prefix. In Awabakal, this ko must be attached to all the words that are leading parts of the subject; as, tarai-to bulun kinbiru-g-ko, 'some one from among them.'

In Awabakal, there seems to be no definite arrangement of words in a simple sentence except that required by expression and emphasis; but an adjective precedes its noun and a pronoun in the possessive may either follow its noun or go before it. In Dravidian also, the adjective precedes its substantive; but the possessive pronouns are prefixed to the nouns.

These comparisons are general; those that now follow compare the Australian with the Dravidian.

9. In Gond and Tamil, the instrumental case-ending is -al. With this compare the Narrinyeri ablative in -il, and the -al of Western Australia (pp. 29, 32, 49 of Appendix).

10. The Tuda dialect alone in the Dekkan has the sound of f and the hard th of the English 'thin'; in Australia the Narrinyeri has the th of 'thin,' but there is no f anywhere.

11. The Tamil inserts a euphonic m before b; this is also exceedingly common in Australia. The Canarese dialect hardens mûru, 'three,' into mundru. Some of the dialects of Australia have a similar practice, and the Fijians do the same.

12. In Tamil, the conjunctive-ablative case has ôdu, dialect tôda, 'together with,' supposed to come from the verb to-dar, 'to join on.' The corresponding Awabakal word is katoa for kata (page 16).

13. In Dravidian, the 2nd singular of the Imperative is the crude form of the verb ; so also in Australian.

14. In Tamil, the accusative case is the same as the nominative ; so also with common nouns in Australian.

15. In Dravidian, there is no case ending for the vocative ; some sign of emphasis is used to call attention ; in Tamil, this is ê. In Awabakal, ela is used for the same purpose, and in Wiradhariya. In Samoan e is used, but it usually comes after its noun.

16. In Dravidian, there are compound case-signs. So also in Australian (see pages 16, 17, and of Appendix, pages 30, 33, 58).

17. In Dravidian, comparison is expressed by using some adverb with the adjective ; as, 'this indeed is good,' for 'this is very good.' There are no adjective terminations there to show comparison, but some Australian dialects seem to have them (see pages 45 and 51 of Appendix). Usually the Australian and the Melanesian languages are like the Dravidian in this matter.

18. In Turanian, the ma of the first pronoun often adds an obscure nasal making it something like máng. With this compare the Awabakal báng.

19. For the second pronoun, the Tamil has ây, ôy, er. With these compare the Papuan second pronoun on page xl. of this Introduction.

20. In the Dravidian pronoun nin, 'thou,' the initial n is merely a nasalisation, for it disappears in the verbal forms. With this compare my analysis of the Awabakal pronoun gintoa.

21. In Dravidian generally, the pluralising particles are added on to the pronouns ; but in Telugu these signs are prefixed, as in mi-ru. With this compare the Papuan ni-mo (page xl. of this Introduction), and the Awabakal ba-ra, nu-ra, and the like.

22. In almost all the Dravidian dialects, the first pronoun plural has both an inclusive and an exclusive form. This is so also in the Melanesian languages, especially those of the New Hebrides and Fiji.

23. The Canarese formative of adverbs is l, as in illi, alli, elli, 'here,' 'there,' 'where' ; in Gond, âlê, îlê are the verb-endings. In Awabakal, these are the formatives of verbal nouns, as I have shown in another section. Now, it is an easy thing in language for a noun to be used adverbially, and hence the Canarese and Gond formatives may really be nouns. This would bring them closer to the Awabakal.

24. In the chief Dravidian dialects, the infinitive ends in -ku, a post-preposition, 'to.' So also in Awabakal, as has been already shown. I may add here that the Zulu infinitive ends -ku.

25. The Dravidian verb may be compounded with a noun, but never with a preposition. So also the Australian verb.

26. The Dravidian verb is agglutinative; particles are added on to the stem in order to express mood, tense, causation, negation, &c., no change being made on the stem. Tulu and Gond—both uncultured dialects—are exceptionally rich in moods and tenses. All this applies to the Australian, the Ebudan, and the Fijian verbs.

27. In Dravidian, there are no relative pronouns. So in Australian; for 'this is the book which you gave me,' a native would say 'this is the book; you gave it me.'

28. In Canarese, kod u, 'to give,' is used as a permissive. In Awabakal, bùn is the permissive, and appears to be formed from ba, a root-form meaning 'to make.' In English, the conditional conjunction 'if' is for 'gif,' 'give.'

29. The Dravidian verb has no passive, nor has the Australian. For 'it was broken,' our natives would say 'broken by me (you, &c.);' a Dravida would say, 'it became broken through me.'

30. In Dravidian there are two futures—(1) a conditional future, and (2) a sort of indeterminate aorist future. For the latter, the Malayalam adds -um to the verbal noun which is the base of the future. In Awabakal there are three futures; the third is an aorist future and adds -nùn to the verbal stem in -illi (see pages 25, 28 ad finem). This -nùn is probably equivalent to a formative -ùn with n interposed between the vowels to prevent hiatus. In Tamil also n (for d) is similarly inserted in verbs; as, padi(n)an, 'I sang.'

XI. THE ORIGIN OF THE AUSTRALIAN RACE.

From these analogies and from the general scope of my argument in this Introduction, the reader perceives that I wish to prove a kinship between the Dravidian race and the Australian. This opinion I expressed in print more than ten years ago when it was not so generally held as it is now. Some of the very highest authorities have formed the same opinion from evidence other than that of language. But a theory and arguments thereon must be shown to be antecedently possible or even probable before it can be accepted; and to furnish such a basis of acceptance, one must go to the domain of history. This I now do.

In my opinion the ultimate home of origin of the negroid population of Australia is Babylonia. There, as history tells us, mankind first began to congregate in great numbers, and among them the Hamites, the progenitors of the negro races. It seems to have been those Hamites who were the first to try to break down the love-law of universal brotherhood and equality; for Nimrod was of their race, and wished to establish dominion over his fellows, and to raise an everlasting memorial of his power, like those which his kindred afterwards reared in Egypt. This attempt was frustrated by the 'Confusion of tongues,' at Babel; and here begins, as I think, the first movement of the negro race towards India and consequently towards Australia. Here comes in also the 'Tôldoth Benê Noah' of Genesis x.

Accordingly, the position of the Hamite or black races at the opening of history is, in Genesis x. 6, indicated ethnically by the names Kush and Mizraim and Phut and Canaan, which geographically are the countries we call Ethiopia and Egypt and Nubia and Palestine. The Kushites, however, were not confined to Africa, but were spread in force along the whole northern shores of the Arabian sea; they were specially numerous on the lower courses of the Euphrates and Tigris, their original seats, and there formed the first germ whence came the great empire of Babylonia. The Akkadians were Turanian in speech, and, it may be, black in 'colour.' In this sense, the later Greek tradition (Odyssey I-23-24) speaks of both an eastern and a western nation of Ethiopians. And Herodotus tells us (VII-70) that in the army of Xerxes, when he invaded Greece, "the Ethiopians from the sun-rise (for two kinds served in the expedition) were marshalled with the Indians, and did not at all differ from the others in appearance, but only in their language and their hair. For the eastern Ethiopians are straight-haired, but those of Libya have hair more curly than that of any other people."

It is clear, therefore, that the black races, many centuries before the Trojan war, had spread themselves from the banks of the Indus on the east right across to the shores of the Mediterranean, while towards the south-west they occupied the whole of Egypt and the Abyssinian highlands. Thus they held two noble coigns of vantage, likely to give them a commanding influence in the making of the history of mankind—the valley of the Nile, which, through all these ages to the present hour, has never lost its importance—and the luxuriant flat lands of Mesopotamia. A mighty destiny seemed to await them, and already it had begun to show itself; for the Kushites not only made the earliest advances towards civilisation, but under Nimrod, 'that mighty hunter,' smitten with the love of dominion, they threatened at one time to establish a universal empire with Babel as its chief seat. And not without reason; for the Kushite tribes were stalwart in stature and physique, in disposition vigorous and energetic, eager for war and conquest, and with a capacity and lust for great things both in peace and war. But a time of disaster came which carried them into the remotest parts of the earth—into Central Africa, into the mountains of Southern India, whence, after a while, another impulse sent them onwards towards our own island-continent; hither they came, as I think, many centuries before the Christian era, pressed on and on from their original seats by the waves of tribal migration which were so common in those early days. Similar was the experience of the Kelts, a very ancient tribe; soon after their first arrival in Europe, we find them occupying Thrace and the countries about the mouth of the Danube; but fresh immigration from the Caucasus plateau pushed them up the Danube, then into Belgium and France, thence into Britain, and last of all the invading Saxons drove them westwards into Ireland, and into the mountains of Wales and Scotland. So the successive steps of the Kushite displacement, in my opinion, were these:—first into the valley of the Ganges, where they were the original inhabitants, then into the Dekkan and into Further India, then into Ceylon, the Andaman Islands, and the Sunda Islands, and thence into Australia. These stages I will examine presently more in detail.

But, meanwhile, let us look at the old Babylonian kingdom. Its ethnic basis was Kushite; its ruling dynasty continued to be Kushite probably down to the time of the birth of Abraham, about 2000 B.C. But before that date, the Babylonian population had been materially changed. Nimrod had conquered Erech and Accad and Calneh in the land of Shinar; an Akkadian or Turanian element was thus incorporated with his empire; he had built Nineveh and Rehoboth and Calah and Resen (Genesis x. 11); a Shemite element was thus or in some other way superadded; other Turanians and Shemites and Japhetian Aryans too, perhaps attracted by the easy luxuriance of life on these fertile plains, had all assembled in Chaldæa and Babyionia. In consequence, we find that, about twenty centuries B.C., the Kushite kingdom had become a mixed conglomerate of four essentially different races—Hamite, Turanian, Shemite, and Japhetian—which on the inscriptions are called Kiprat-arbat, ‘the four quarters.’ Then, as the Babylonian worship of Mulitta demanded free intercourse as a religious duty, a strange mixture of physical types must have been developed among the children of these races, the Ethiopian, Scythic, Shemitic, and Iranian all blending—a rare study to the eye of a physiologist, who would have seen sometimes the one type sometimes the other predominating in the child. This Chaldæan monarchy—the first of the five great monarchies of ancient history—was overthrown by an irruption of Arab (Shemitic) tribes about the year 1500 B.C. And now, as I think, another wave of population began to move towards our shores; for these Arabs were pure monotheists, and in their religious zeal must have dashed to pieces the polytheistic and sensual fabric which the Babylonian conquests had extended from the confines of India westwards to the Mediterranean (cf. Chedorlaomer’s expedition, Genesis xiv. 9). Those portions of the Chaldæo-Babylonian people that were unable to escape from the dominion of the Arabs were absorbed in the new empire, just as many of the Keltic Britons were in the sixth and seventh centuries merged in the newly-formed Saxon kingdoms. But the rupture of the Babylonian State and the proscription of its worship must have been so complete as to drive forth from their native seats thousands of the people of the four tongues and force them westwards into Africa, or eastwards through the mountain passes into the tableland of Pánjâb, and thence into the Gangetic Plain. Here, I imagine, were already located the pure Hamites of the Dispersion; but finding these to be guilty of a skin not exactly coloured like their own, and not understanding their language, these latter Kushites of mixed extraction regarded them as enemies and drove them before them into the mountains of the Dekkan, where, to this hour, the Dravidians and Kolarians are black-skinned and savage races. Ere long, these Babylonian Kushites were themselves displaced and ejected from the Ganges valley by a fair-skinned race, the Aryans, another and the last ethnic stream of invaders from the north-west. These Aryans, in religion and habits irreconcilably opposed to the earlier races of India, waged on them a relentless war. Hemmed up in the triangle of southern India, the earlier Hamites could escape only by sea; the Babylonian Kushites, on the other hand, could not seek safety in the mountains of the Dekkan, as these were already occupied; they must therefore have been pushed down the Ganges into Further India and the Malayan peninsula; thence they passed at a later time into Borneo, and the Sunda Islands, and Papua, and afterwards across the sea of Timor into Australia, or eastwards into Melanesia, driven onwards now by the Turanian tribes, which had come down from Central Asia into China and the Peninsula and islands of the East Indies.

Many arguments could be advanced in favour of this view of the origin of the Australian race, but the discussion would be a lengthy one, and this is scarcely the place for it. I may, however, be permitted to add here a simple incident in my own experience. A few months ago, I was staying for a while with a friend in the bush, far from the main roads of the colony and from towns and villages. One day, when out of doors and alone, I saw a black man approaching; his curly hair, his features, his colour, and his general physique, all said that he was an Australian, but his gait did not correspond. I was on the point of addressing him as he drew near, but he anticipated me and spoke first; the tones of his voice showed me that I was mistaken. I at once suspected him to be a Kalinga from the Presidency of Madras. And he was a Kalinga. This incident tells its own tale. In short, it appears to me that the Dravidians and some tribes among the Himalayas are the representatives of the ancient Dasyus, who resisted the Aryan invasion of India, and whom the Puranas describe as akin to beasts. The existence, also, of cyclopean remains in Ponape of the Caroline Islands, and elsewhere onward through the Pacific Ocean, even as far as Easter

sians to be the work of a previous race, which tradition, in various parts, declares to have been black—points out one of the routes by which the black race spread itself abroad into the eastern isles; while the presence of Negrillo tribes in detached portions nearer to India—like islands left uncovered by the floods of stronger races pouring in—the Mincopies in the Andaman Islands, the Samangs in the Malay Peninsula, and the Aëtas in the interior of Borneo, with the wild remnants of a black race in the heart of many of the larger islands of the Malay Archipelago—all this seems to me to show that the primitive Dasyus, driven from India, passed into Further India and thence—being still impelled by race movements—into our own continent and into the islands to the north and east of it. But this question must be left for separate investigation.

Thus, in my view, our island first received its native population, in two different streams, the one from the north, and the other from the north-west. Many known facts favour this view:—

(1.) Ethnologists recognise two pre-Aryan races in India. The earlier had not attained to the use of metals and used only polished flint axes and implements of stone; the later had no written records, and made grave mounds over their dead. The Vedas call them 'noseless,' 'gross feeders on flesh,' 'raw eaters,' 'not sacrificing,' 'without gods,' 'without rites'; they adorned the bodies of the dead with gifts and raiment and ornaments. All this suits our aboriginals; they are noseless, for they have very flat and depressed noses, as contrasted with the straight and prominent noses of the Vedic Aryans; they have no gods and no religious rites such as the Vedas demand.

(2.) The Kolarian and Dravidian languages have inclusive and exclusive forms for the plural of the first person. So also have many of the languages of Melanesia and Polynesia.

(3.) The native boomerang of Australia is used on the southeast of India, and can be traced to Egypt—both of them Hamite regions.

(4.) In the Kamalarai dialect, the four class-names form their feminines in -tha; as, Kubbi (masc.), Kubbi-tha (fem.); and that is a Shemitic formative. So also in the Hamitic Babylonian, Mul (masc.) gives Muli-tta (fem.), and Enu (masc.), Enu-ta (fem.). Although this formative is not common in the Australian languages, yet its unmistakable presence in Kamalarai may mean that our native population has in it the same mixed elements as existed in the old Babylonian empire. To the same effect is the fact that some tribes practise circumcision, while contiguous tribes do not; in many places the natives, in considerable numbers, have distinctly Shemite features; some have as regular Caucasian features as any of us; others, again, are purely negroid.

(5.) In Chaldaea, the dead were not interred; they were laid on mats in a brick vault or on a platform of sun-dried bricks, and over this a huge earthenware dish-cover, or in a long earthen jar in two pieces fitting into each other. Our blackfellows also, even when they do inter, are careful not to let the body touch the earth; in some places, they erect stages for the dead—the Parsee “towers of silence”; elsewhere, they place the dead body in a hollow tree; in South Australia, the corpse is desiccated by fire and smoke, then carried about for a while, and finally exposed on a stage. All this corresponds with the Persian religious belief in the sacredness of the earth, which must not be contaminated by so foul a thing as a putrifying human body. And it shows also how diverse are our tribal customs in important matters.

(6.) The Dravidian tribes, though homogeneous, have twelve varying dialects. The Australian dialects are a parallel to that.

(7.) There is nothing improbable in the supposition that the first inhabitants of Australia came from the north-west, that is, from Hindostan or from Further India. For the native traditions of the Polynesians all point to the west or north-west as the quarter from which their ancestors first came. So also the Indians are to the north-west of our island.

(8.) I now quote Dr. Caldwell; in diverse places, he says:—

“The Puranas speak of the Nishadas as ‘beings of the complexion of a charred stick, with flattened features, and of dwarfish tature’; ‘as black as a crow’; ‘having projecting chin, broad and flat nose, red eyes, and tawny hair, wide mouth, large ears, and a protuberant belly.’ These Nishadas are the Kolarian tribes, such as the Kols and the Santals. But the Dravidians of the South have always been called Kalingas and Pandyas, not Nishadas.”

“The Tudas of the Dekkan are a fine, manly, athletic race, with European features, Roman noses, hazel eyes, and great physical strength; they have wavy or curly hair, while the people of the plains are straight haired, have black eyes, and aquiline noses. The skin of the Tudas, although they are mountaineers, is darker than that of the natives of the Malabar coast. The physical type of the Gonds is Mongolian, that of the other Dravidians is Aryan.”

“In Shamanism, there is no regular priesthood. The father of the family is the priest and magician; but the office can be taken by any one who pleases, and laid aside; so also in Southern India. The Shamanites acknowledge a Supreme God, but offer him no worship, for he is too good to do them harm. So also the Dravidian demonolators. Neither the Shamanites nor the Dravidians believe in metempsychosis. The Shamanites worship only cruel demons, with bloody sacrifices and wild dances. The Tudas exclude women from worship, even from the temples; they perform their rites in the deep gloom of groves. They have a supreme god, Usuru Swâmi; his manifestation is ‘light,’ not ‘fire.’ They have no circumcision. They have no forms of prayer. They believe in witchcraft and the work of demons. After the death of the body, the soul still lives and requires food.”

“Dr. Logan thought that the Dravidians have a strong Melanesian or Indo-African element, and says that a negro race overspread India before both the Scythians and the Aryans. De Quatrefages agrees with him, and says that, long before the historical period, India was inhabited by a black race resembling the Australians, and also, before history began, a yellow race came from the north-east. Of the Tamilians Dr. Logan says:—‘Some are exceedingly Iranian, more are Semitic-Iranian; some are Semitic, others Australian; some remind us of Egyptians, while others again have Malayo-Polynesian and even Semang and Papuan features.’ Professor Max Müller found in the Gonds and other non-Aryan Dravidians traces of a race closely resembling the negro. Sir George Campbell thinks that the race in occupation of India before the Aryans was Negrito. Even in the seventh century of our era, a Brahman grammarian calls the Tamil and Telugu people Mlêchhas, that is, aboriginals. Dr. Muir thinks that the Aryan wave of conquest must have been broken on the Vindhya mountains, the northern barrier of the Dekkan.”

CONCLUSION.

In this discussion, I have endeavoured to show the origin of our Australian numerals, the composition and derivation of the chief personal pronouns, and of a number of typical words for common things, and of these many more could be cited and examined in the same way. I have shown, so far as I can, that these pronouns, and numerals, and test-words, and, incidentally, one of the postpositions, are connected with root-words, which must be as old as the origin of the language; for such ideas as ‘before,’ ‘begin,’ ‘first,’ ‘another,’ ‘follow,’ ‘change,’ ‘many,’ seem to be essential to the existence of any language. I think I may safely say the same thing about the root-words for ‘water,’ ‘dumb,’ and ‘eye.’ It thus appears, from the present investigation, that our Australians have a common heritage, along with the rest of the world, in these root-words; for, if these blacks are a separate creation and so have no kindred elsewhere, or were never in contact with the other races of mankind, I cannot conceive how they have come to possess primitive words so like those in use over a very wide area of the globe. I therefore argue that they are an integral portion of the human race. If so, what is their origin? On this point, our present discussion may have thrown some light.

THE AUTHOR'S PREFACE.

IN the year 1826, the writer printed a few copies entitled "Specimens of a dialect of the Aborigines of New South Wales," in which the English sounds of the vowels were adopted. Subsequently it was found that many inconveniences arose in the orthography, which could only be overcome by adopting another system. Many plans were proposed and attempted, but none appeared so well adapted to meet the numerous difficulties which arose, as the one in use for many years in the Islands of the South Seas,* wherein the elementary sounds of the vowels do not accord with the English pronunciation. This, however, does not meet all the difficulties, because there is a material difference in the idioms of the languages. For instance, in the Tahitian dialect, the vowels always retain their elementary sound, because a consonant never ends a syllable or word; in the Australian language, a consonant often ends a syllable or a word, and therefore its coalition with the sound of the vowels affects that sound and consequently shortens it; while, in many instances, the elementary sound of the vowel is retained when closed by a consonant, as well as when the syllable or word is ended by the vowel. To meet this, an accent will be placed over the vowel when the elementary sound is retained, but without such accent the sound is to be shortened. For example, the Australian words bun, bún, tin, tín, will be sounded as the English bun, boon, tin, teen.

A set of characters cast expressly for the various sounds of the vowels would be the most complete in forming speech into a written language, but in the present instance that could not be accomplished. The present orthography is therefore adopted, not because it is considered perfect, but from the following reasons, viz. :—

1. It appears, upon consideration, impossible so to express the sounds of any language to the eye, as to enable a stranger to pronounce it without oral instruction. The principal object, therefore, is to aim at simplicity, so far as may be consistent with clearness.

2. There appears to be a certain propriety in adopting universally, if possible, the same character to express the same sounds used in countries which are adjacent, as Polynesia and Australia, even though the languages be not akin; especially when those characters have been adopted upon mature consideration, and confirmed by actual experience in the Islands of the South Seas.

* Mr. Threlkeld was, for a time, a missionary at Raiatea, in the Society Islands.—ED.

Having resided for many years in the island of Raiatea, and having been in the constant habit of conversing with and preaching to the natives in their own tongue, I am enabled to trace the similarity of languages used in the South Seas, one with another, proving they are but different dialects, although the natives themselves, and we also, at the first interview, could not understand the people of neighbouring islands, who speak radically the same tongue!

In the Australian tongues there appears to exist a very great similarity of idiom, as respects the dual number and the use of the form expressive of negation; and yet it is observed by a writer in the article on 'Greek language,' Rees's Cyclopædia, that, "The dual number is by no means necessary in language, though it may enable the Greek to express the number 'two' or 'pair' with more emphasis and precision." But this assertion is not at all borne out by facts; because, in this part of the hemisphere, all the languages of the South Seas, in common with New South Wales, possess a dual number, and so essential is it to the languages that conversation could not be carried on, if they had it not. There is, however, a peculiarity in the dual of the Australian tongue which does not exist in the islands, namely, a conjoined case in the dual pronouns, by which the nominative and accusative are blended, as shown in the pronouns*, whilst the verb sustains no change, excepting when reflexive, or reciprocal, or continuative. But in the Islands there are dual verbs. The modes of interrogation and replication are very much alike in the idiom of both languages, and so peculiar as hardly possible to be illustrated in the English language; for they scarcely ever give a direct answer, but in such a manner as leaves much to be implied. The aborigines of this colony are far more definite in the use of the tenses than the Islanders, who have nothing peculiar in the use of the tenses. The subject of tenses caused me much perplexity and diligent examination. Nor did the observations of eminent writers on the theory of language tend to elucidate the matter; because the facts existing in the language of the aborigines of New Holland are in direct contradiction to a note to the article 'Grammar' in the Encyclopædia Britannica†, where certain tenses are represented as "peculiar to the Greek, and have nothing corresponding to them in other tongues, we need not scruple to overlook them as superfluous." Now, our aborigines use the tenses of the verb and the participle variously, to denote time past in general; or time past in particular, as, 'this morning only;' or time past remote, that is, at some former period, as, 'when I was in England,' or, 'when I was a boy.' The future time of the verb and of the participle is also modified in a similar manner, specifically, either now, or to-morrow morning, or generally as in futurity; and besides this, there is another curious fact opposed to the conclusion of the writer's note, which reads thus: "Of the paulo-post-futurum of the Greeks, we have taken no notice, because it is found only in the passive voice; to which if it were necessary, it is obvious that it would be necessary in all voices, as a man may be about to act, as well as to suffer, immediately." Now, such is the very idiom of this language, as will be seen in the conjugation of the participle; for the pronoun, being used either objectively or nominatively, will place the phrase either in the one sense or the other, such change in the pronoun constituting the equivalent to the passive voice or the active voice. The most particular attention is necessary to the tense of the participle as well as that of the verb, each tense being confined to its own particular period, as shown in the conjugation of the verbs. The various dialects of the blacks may yet prove, as is already ascertained in the Islands, to be a difficulty more apparent than real; but when one dialect becomes known, it will assist materially in obtaining a speedier knowledge of any other that may be attempted, than if no such assistance had been rendered.

† Of that day.—ED.

Although tribes within 100 miles do not, at the first interview, understand each other, yet I have observed that after a very short space of time they are able to converse freely, which could not be the case were the language, as many suppose it to be, radically distinct. The number of different names for one substantive may occasion this idea. For instance, 'water' has at least five names, and 'fire' has more; the 'moon' has four names, according to her phases, and the kangaroo has distinct names for either sex, or according to size, or different places of haunt; so that two persons would seldom obtain the same name for a kangaroo, if met wild in the woods, unless every circumstantial was precisely alike to both inquirers.* The quality of a thing is another source from which a name is given, as well as its habit or manner of operation. Thus, one man would call a musket 'a thing that strikes fire;' another would describe it as 'a thing that strikes,' because it hits an object; whilst a third would name it 'a thing that makes a loud noise;' and a fourth would designate it 'a piercer,' if the bayonet was fixed. Hence arises the difficulty to persons unacquainted with the language in obtaining the correct name of that which is desired. For instance, a visitor one day requested the name of a native cat from M'Gill, my aboriginal, who replied minnaring; the person was about to write down the word minnaring, 'a native cat,' when I prevented the naturalist, observing that the word was not the name of the native cat, but a question, namely,

* There are other reasons for this diversity of language.—ED.

'What' (is it you say? being understood), the blackman not understanding what was asked. Thus arise many of the mistakes in vocabularies published by transient visitors from foreign parts.*

In a "Description of the Natives of King George's Sound (Swan River Colony)," which was written by Mr. Scott Nind, communicated by R. Brown, Esq., F.R.S., and read before the Royal Geographical Society, &c., 14th February, 1831, there is an interesting account of the natives, and also a vocabulary, not one word of which appears to be used or understood by the natives in this district; and yet, from a passage at page 24, the following circumstance leads to the supposition that the language is formed on the same principles, and is perhaps radically the same tongue; the writer observes: "It once occurred to me to be out shooting, accompanied by Maweurrie, the native spoken of, and five or six of his tribe, when we heard the cry, coowhie, coowhieécá, upon which my companion stopped short, and said that strange blackmen were coming." Now in this part of the colony, under the same circumstances, a party of blacks would halloo, kaai, kaai, kai, kai; which, allowing for the difference in orthography, would convey nearly, if not precisely, the same sound; the meaning is 'halloo, halloo, approach, approach.' Also, at page 20, the same word, used by the natives here in hunting and dancing, is mentioned as spoken by those aborigines in the same sort of sports, viz., wow, which in this work is spelt wua; it means 'move.' Also, at page 28, the phrase 'absent, at a distance' is rendered bócun, and 'let us go away' by bócun oola, or wat oola; here the natives would say waita wolla; see the locomotive verb, in the conjugation of which a similarity of use will be perceived. At Wellington Valley, the names of the things are the same in many instances with those of this part, although 300 miles distant; and, in a small vocabulary with which I was favoured, the very barbarisms are marked as such, whilst mistaken names are written, the natural result of partial knowledge; for instance, kiwung is put down as the 'moon,' whereas it means the 'new moon,' yellenna being the 'moon.' In the higher districts of Hunter's River, my son was lately conversing with a tribe, but only one man could reply; and he, it appears, had a few years back been in this part, and thus acquired the dialect. Time and intercourse will hereafter ascertain the facts of the case.

* Many mistakes of this kind have been made by collectors of vocabularies; even the word 'kangaroo,' which has now established itself in Australasia, does not seem to be native; it is not found in any of the early lists of words. The settlers in Western Australia, when they first came into contact with the blacks there, tried to conciliate them by offering them bread, saying it was 'very good.' So, for a long time there, 'very good' was the blackman's name for bread!—Ed.

The arrangement of the grammar now adopted is formed on the natural principles of the language, and not constrained to accord with any known grammar of the dead or living languages, the peculiarities of its structure being such as totally to prevent the adoption of any one of these as a model. There is much of the Hebrew form in the conjugation; it has also the dual of the Greek and the deponent of the Latin. However, these terms are not introduced, excepting the dual, the various modifications of the verb and participle exemplifying the sense in which they are used.

The peculiarity of the reciprocal dual may be illustrated by reference to a custom of the aborigines; when a company meet to dance, each lady and gentleman sit down opposite to one another, and reciprocally paint each other's cheek with a red pigment; or, if there is not a sufficiency of females, the males perform the reciprocal operation. Also, in duelling, a practice they have in common with other barbarous nations, the challenge is expressed in the reciprocal form. The terms I have adopted to characterise the various modifications of the verb may not ultimately prove the best adapted to convey the various ideas contained in the respective forms, but at present it is presumed they are sufficiently explicit. Many are the difficulties which have been encountered, arising, principally, from the want of association with the blacks, whose wandering habits, in search of game, prevent the advantages enjoyed in the Islands of being surrounded by the natives in daily conversation. It would be the highest presumption to offer the present work as perfect, but, so far as opportunity and pains could conduce to render it complete, exertion has not been spared.

BARBARISMS.

It is necessary to notice certain barbarisms which have crept into use, introduced by sailors, stockmen, and others, who have paid no attention to the aboriginal tongue, in the use of which both blacks and whites labour under the mistaken idea that each one is conversing in the other's language. The following list contains the most common in use in these parts:—

Barbarism.	Meaning.	Aboriginal proper word.
Boojery,*	good,	murrorong.
Bail,	no,	keawai.
Bogy,	to bathe,	nurongkilliko.
Bimble,	earth,	purrai.
Boomiring,	a weapon,	turrama [the 'boomerang'.]
Budgel,	sickness,	munni.

* Captain John Hunter (1793) gives bidgerie, "good," and Lieut-Col. Collins (1802) gives boodjerre "good," both at Port Jackson. Some of the other words condemned here as barbarisms are used in local dialects.—ED.

Cudgel,	tobacco,	kuttul, lit. ,* smoke.
Gammon,	falsehood,	nakoiyaye.
Gibber,	a stone,	tunung.
Gunmy,	a spear,	warre.
Goonyer,	a hut,	kokere.
Hillimung,	a shield,	koreil.
Jin,	a wife,	porikunbai.
Jerrund,	fear,	kinta.
Kangaroo,†	an animal,	karai, and various names.
Carbon,	large,	kauwul.
Mije,	little,	mitti ; warea.
Mogo,	axe,	baibai.
Murry,	many,	muraiai ; also, kauwul-kauwul.
Pickaninney,	child,	wounai.
Piyaller,	to speak,	wiyelliko.
Tuggerrer,	cold,	takara.
Wikky,	bread,	kunto, vegetable provisions.
Waddy,	a cudgel,	kotirra.
Wommerrer,	a weapon,	yakirri ; used to throw the spear.

CHAPTER I.

PRONUNCIATION AND ORTHOGRAPHY.

PRONUNCIATION is the right expression of the sounds of the words of a language.

Words are composed of syllables, and syllables of letters. The letters of the language of the aborigines of New South Wales are these:—*

A B D E G I K L M N Ng O P R T U W Y.

Note.—It is very doubtful if d belongs to their alphabet; the natives generally use the t.

VOWELS.

A is pronounced as in the English words ‘are,’ ‘far,’ ‘tart.’ E is pronounced as slender a in ‘fate,’ or e in ‘where.’ I is pronounced as the short i in ‘thin,’ ‘tin,’ ‘virgin,’ or e in ‘England.’ O is pronounced as in the English ‘no.’ U is pronounced as oo in the words ‘cool,’ ‘cuckoo.’

When two vowels meet together they must be pronounced distinctly; as, noa, niuwoa, the pronoun ‘he’; bountoa, ‘she;’ so also when double vowels are used in the word; as, wiyéen, ‘have spoken.’

A diphthong is the union of two vowels to form one sound: as,

1. ai, as in kúl-ai, ‘wood’; wai-tawán, ‘the large mullet.’
2. au, as in nau-wai, ‘a canoe’; tau-wil, ‘that...may eat.’
3. iu, as in niu-woa, the pronoun ‘he’; paipiu-wil, ‘that it may appear.’

Note.—ai is sounded as in the English word ‘eye’; au as in ‘cow’; iu as in ‘pew.’

CONSONANTS.

G is sounded hard, but it often has also a soft guttural sound; g and k are interchangeable, as also k and t.

Ng is peculiar to the language, and sounds as in ‘ring,’ ‘bung,’ whether at the beginning, middle, or end of a word.

R, as heard in ‘rogue,’ ‘rough’; whenever used, it cannot be pronounced too roughly; when double, each letter must be heard distinctly.

* See PHONOLOGY, page 3.—Ed.

The other consonants are sounded as in English.

Europeans often confound d with t, because of a middle sound which the natives use in speaking quickly; so also they confound t with j, from the same cause.

ACCENTS.

The language requires but one marked accent, which serves for the prolongation of the syllable; as, b ó n, 'him'; b ú n, the root of 'to smite.' The primitive sound is thus retained of the vowel, which otherwise would be affected by the closing consonant; as, b u n, the root of the verb 'to be' accidental, rhymes with the English word 'bun,' but b ú n, 'to smite,' rhymes with 'boon.'

ORTHOGRAPHY.

In forming syllables, every consonant may be taken separately and be joined to each vowel. A consonant between two vowels must go to the latter; and two consonants coming together must be divided. The only exception is Ng, which is adopted for want of another character to express the peculiar nasal sound, as heard in h a n g e r, and, consequently, is never divided. The following are general rules:—

1. A single consonant between two vowels must be joined to the latter; as, k ú - r i, 'man'; y u - r i ǵ, 'away'; w a i - t a, 'depart.'
2. Two consonants coming together must always be divided; as, t e t - t i, 'to be dead,' 'death'; b u ǵ - g a i, 'new.'
3. Two or more vowels are divided, excepting the diphthongs; as, ǵ a t o - a, 'it is I'; y u - a i p a, 'thrust out.' A hyphen is the mark when the diphthong is divided; as, k á - u w a, 'may it be' (a wish); k a - a m a, 'to collect together, to assemble.'
4. A vowel in a root-syllable must have its elementary sound; as, b ú n k i l i, 'the action of smiting'; t a, the root-form of the verb, 'to eat.'

ACCENTUATION.

In general, dissyllables and trisyllables accent the first syllable; as, p u n t i m a i, 'a messenger'; p i r i w á l, 'a chief or king.'

Compound derivative words, being descriptive nouns, have the accent universally on the last syllable; as, w i y e l i k á n, 'one who speaks,' from w i y e l i, 'the action of speaking'; so also, from the same root, w i y e l i - ǵ e l, 'a place of speaking,' such as, 'a pulpit, the stage, a reading desk.'

Verbs in the present and the past tenses have their accent on those parts of the verb which are significant of these tenses; as, t a t á n, 'eats'; w i y á n, 'speaks'; w i y á, 'hath told.' This must be particularly attended to; else a mere affirmation will become an imperative, and so on; as, k á - u w a, 'be it so, (a wish); k a - u w á, 'so it is' (an affirmation).

In the future tenses, the accent is always on the last syllable but one, whether the word consists of two syllables or of more; as, tánún, 'shall or will eat'; wiyánún, 'shall or will speak'; búnkillínún, 'shall or will be in the action of smiting'; búnnún, 'shall or will smite.' Present participles have the accent on the last syllable; as, búnkillín, 'now in the action of smiting'; wiyellín, 'now in the action of talking, speaking.' Past participles have their accent on the last syllable but one; as, búnkilliáala, 'smote and continued to smite,' which, with a pronoun added, means 'they fought.' But the participial particle, denoting the state or condition of a person or thing, has the accent on the antepenultimate; as, búntóara, 'that which is struck, smitten, beaten.' Thus, there are two accents—one the radical accent, the other the shifting one which belongs to the particles.

EMPHASIS.

The aborigines always lay particular stress upon the particles in all their various combinations, whether added to substantives to denote the cases, or to verbs to denote the moods or tenses. But, when attention is particularly commanded, the emphasis is thrown on the last syllable, often changing the termination into -oú; as, wálla-wálla, the imperative, 'move,' or 'be quick'; but to urgently command would be wálla-wáll-oú, dwelling double the time on the -oú. To emphatically charge a person with anything, the emphasis is placed on the particle of agency; as, gátóa, 'it is I;'; gíntóa, 'it is thou.'

[THE PHONOLOGY OF THE AUSTRALIAN LANGUAGES.]

Of late years increasing attention has been given to the consideration of the Australian languages, and numerous vocabularies have been collected. But it is somewhat unfortunate that these collections of words have been made, in most instances, by those who did not appreciate the principles of phonology; often the spelling of the words does not adequately represent the sounds to be conveyed. Enough, however, is now known to permit a general estimate to be made of the sounds in the languages or rather dialects, for—notwithstanding many tribal variations in vocables and grammar—the Australian language is essentially one.

GENERAL FEATURES.

Looking at the language as a whole, and examining its features, we at once observe the prominence of the long vowels, á and ú, and the frequency of the guttural and nasal sounds; the letter r with a deeper trill than in English, is also a common sound.

VOWELS.

The essential vowels are á, í, ú, all pronounced with a full and open voice; a as in the English word 'father'; i as in 'seen'; and u as oo in 'moon.' The Australian a long is, in fact, a guttural sound, and is so deceptive to the ear that in many vocabularies the syllable ba is written bah, or even bar; this a has a strong sympathy for the letter r, which is nearly a guttural in Australia, and when the two come together, as in mar, the sound of both is deepened, and so mar is pronounced something like mah-rr. This guttural combination of a and r has hitherto been represented by arr, as in the word bundarra; but, as both the sounds are normal, I prefer to write bundara, especially as the accent in such a word always falls on the penult. Our blacks also are Orientals in this respect, that, while in English there is a tendency to hurry over the open vowels in a word, they dwell on them, and say bā-bā, where we say pā-pā, or even pā-pā.

The Australian i is ee long; sometimes the sound of it is prolonged, and then resembles the sound of e in 'scene'; this sound of i is represented by í in this volume.

In Australian names and words, the sound of u long is commonly indicated by oo. This is quite unnecessary; for the sound of u, as it is in 'pull,' is its natural sound. I will, therefore, make it a rule that u, before a single consonant, stands for that sound.

There are two more long vowels, ē and ō; these come from a combination and modification of the sounds of á, í, and ú; ē comes from the union of a and i, as in the English 'sail'; ō from a and u, as in the French 'faute,' or perhaps from â direct. Wherever necessary, an accent has been placed on e and o (thus, é, ó), to show that they are the long vowels.

Besides these, there are the short vowels, ă, ĕ, ĭ, ŏ, ŭ. As a matter of convenience, it has been usual to indicate the short sound of these vowels, wherever they occur in Australian words, by doubling the consonant which follows them; thus also, in English, we have 'manner,' and, in French, 'bonne,' 'mienne.' This plan seems unobjectionable, and has been followed here; such a word, then, as bukka will have the short sound of u; and such words as bundara, where the u is followed by a hardened consonant, or by two different consonants, will have the u short, unless marked otherwise. If any one of those vowels which are usually short be followed by a single consonant, the vowel may then be pronounced long; as ĕlla, ēla; but the short sound of u, in such a position, will be marked by ŭ in this volume. In the declension of the verbs, our author writes -mulla, -kulli, and the like; this spelling I have allowed to stand, although I think that it should have been -mălla, -kălli.

Besides these ten, there is in Australian a peculiar vowel sound which appears only in a closed syllable, and chiefly before the nasal ng; it takes the short sound of either a, e, i, o, or u. For instance, we have the word for 'tongue' set down as tallang, talleng, tulling, tallun, and the word for 'hand' as mata, meta, mita; and so also with other examples. I regard these variations as proceeding from an obscure utterance of ä, the same dulled a which appears in English in the word 'vocal,' and is represented by other vowels in the English 'her,' 'sir,' 'son.' I have introduced ä as the sign for this sound; ä, therefore, as in the syllables of täläg, &c., will mean a dull, volatile sound of ä, which, in the various dialects, may have any one of the other short vowels substituted for it. In the Malay language similarly, the a—that is, the letter ain, not ghain—takes the sound of any one of the short vowels.

These six paragraphs seem to contain all that is noticeable in the long and short sounds of the vowels a, e, i, o, u.

Then, we have the diphthongs; ai, as in 'eye'; oi, as in 'coin'; au, as in 'cow'; iu, as in 'new'; but ai is apt to become oi, and sometimes, though rarely, ei.

The summary of the vowel sounds will thus be:—

Vowels—ä, î, û; í; ē, ō; ä, ë, ï, ö; ü; ä (volatile).

Semi-vowels—w, y.

Diphthongs—ai, oi, au, iu.

I have admitted w and y, because they are already established in Australian words. I consider w, as a vowel, to be entirely redundant in our alphabet; y may be useful at the end of an open syllable to represent the softened sound of i. Even when w or y stands as an initial letter in such words as wata, yuring, they are both superfluous, for wata might as well be written uata, and yuring as iuring. But in words such as wa-käl, 'one,' the w stands for an original b, and is therefore a consonant; and, similarly, in yarro, 'an egg,' the y probably represents a primitive k. In such cases, w and y are consonants.

CONSONANTS.

The gutturals are k, g, h, ng. The k is a much more frequent sound in Australian than its softer brother g; indeed, I am inclined to think that we could safely regard k as the native sound of this guttural, and set down g as merely a dialect variety of it. For the reasons given above, I discard the use of h at the end of an open syllable; as an initial, h occurs in only a few words, such as hilämän, 'a shield'; but the guttural-nasal ng is one of the distinctive sounds of the Australian alphabet, and is the same sound as the ng in the English word, 'sing.' It appears both as an initial and as a final; its use at the beginning of a syllable severs the Australian language from the Aryan family, and gives it kinship with the African.

In Samoan and in other Polynesian dialects, ng is very common as an initial, and as a final too in the whole of Melanesia. In this respect the Polynesian and the Melanesian languages are akin to the Australian. The Malay also uses ng both as an initial and as a final. Some Australian dialects nasalise the k, as in the English word 'ink'; to this there are parallels in the Melanesian languages, and there the sound is represented by k or q.

In Tamil, one of the Dravidian languages of India, with which our Australian language is supposed to be connected, one formative suffix is gu, nasalised into ngu; it is used as the initial sound of a syllable, as in nī-ngu, 'to quit'; to this extent it corresponds with our ng.

Our author, in his edition of 1834, has in some words a doubled guttural-nasal, as in bungngai. As the second of these is only a g attracted by the nasal that precedes it, I have written such words with g-g. In fact, the double sound proceeds from the one nasal, as in our English word 'finger.' Some of the Melanesian languages have this double sound both with g and with k.

But in both of its uses, initial and final, the Australian ng arises from the nasalisation of the guttural g; it is a simple sound, and should therefore be represented by only one letter, not by the digraph ng. In Sanskrit, the symbol for it as a final, for there it is never used as an initial and seldom as a final, is n̄; but, as the Australian ng comes from g, I prefer to use ḡ as its symbol. If we compare the Dravidian pag-al, 'a day,' with the Melanesian bung, 'a day,' it is clear that the ng proceeds from a g, for the original root of both words is the verb bha, 'to sine.' Further examination may, perhaps, show that our ng is, in some cases, a modification of the sound of n, as in the French 'bon,' 'bien,' or even of a final vowel, but at present that does not seem to me at all likely.

Besides ng, there are the two subdued nasal sounds of n and m—that is, n before d, and m before b; these harden the consonant that follows, and produce such sounds as nda, m̄ba. The same sounds are common in Fiji—a Melanesian region—but not in Polynesia.

Of the palatals, the language has ch, as in the English word 'church,' and j, as in 'jan': to these may be added the consonant y. The ch and the j sounds are, in some vocabularies, printed as tch and dj; that is quite unnecessary. I have adopted ê as the symbol for ch, because it is a simple sound.

The only cerebral that we have is r, although the sound of it is often so asperated as to resemble the Dravidian rough and hard r. Our r is neither the Arabic vibrating ghr, nor the Northumbrian burr, but is more like the rolled r of the Parisians.

The dentals are t, d, n, l. As in the case of the gutturals k and g, so with the dentals t and d; it is often difficult to decide whether a native, in pronouncing a word, is using the one or the other; so also with p and b in the next paragraph. The liquids n and l are really dentals, their sound being produced by the movement of the tongue on the teeth. In connection with the dentals t and d, it would be interesting to know if our natives ever cerebralise them in pronunciation; for, if they do, that would be another link to connect them with the Dravidians; but the difference of sound is too minute to be detected by an ordinary observer.

A variant of t is th, for our blacks say both Ippatha and Ippata; the th has the same sound as in the English words, 'thin,' 'breath.' It is possible that, in Australian, this th sometimes takes the place of the absent s. In the Melanesian region also this sound of th is common, and is represented often by d. Some Australian tribes have also th sonant, as in the English words 'this,' 'that'; the Melanesians have a corresponding sound which is represented in Fijian by c. If we could revive the Anglo-Saxon characters for these simple sounds, such anomalies would cease.

The labials are p, b, and m; the m, as in other languages, is only a b sound with the breathing allowed to escape through the nose. Some collectors of words have set down the sounds of f and v as existing in Queensland, but I cannot admit them without further evidence; they are not found in New South Wales; the natives here say Uëbiny for Waverley.

In addition to these elementary sounds, there are the conjunct sounds obtained by adding the aspirate h to some of the consonants. These are ph, bh, th, dh, kh, gh, and in each of them the aspirate is separated, in pronouncing it, from the consonant to which it is attached, as in Sanskrit, or as in the English words, up-hill, dog-house, &c. Some of these combined sounds I have heard distinctly from the lips of a native, and I have no doubt that the others also exist.

The sibilants have no place in Australia. One vocabulary gives stha as an initial syllable, but that must be a mistake; another gives dtha; that also must be a mistake.

It ought to be noted here that in many Australian tribes, when a young man passes through the Bora ceremonies of initiation, one or two of his upper front teeth are knocked out, and this is a portion of the accustomed rites. The loss of these teeth must have had an important influence on the utterance of the dentals and sibilants in past time, and so on the language itself.

PECULIARITIES.

In some dialects, there is a tendency to insert the sound of y after t and k; as, tyala, 'to eat,' instead of tala. So also in English we sometimes hear gyarden for garden and kyind for kina.

Some dialects say kedlu, for which the usual form would be kellu. But it is possible that the d here is radical, and so maintains its place.

In the Dieyerie tribe, near Cooper's Creek, South Australia, many words have in them the peculiar sound ndr, as m un dru, 'two,' which is also the Tamil word for 'three.' The Tamil is fond of this sound, and so is the language of Madagascar; the Fijian prefixes the sound of n to d, so that dua is pronounced ndua. The sound of ndr comes by accretions from a single r, and so the simpler forms of the Tamil mundru are mur, mudu.

The dialect of King George's Sound, Western Australia, has this peculiarity, that it delights in closed syllables; for there the wonga of the inland tribes is pronounced twonk, and katta is kat.

SUMMARY.

The consonants, then, may be thus arranged:—

Gutturals —	k	kh	g	gh	ḡ	h.
Palatals —	ć	...	ǰ	y.
Cerebrals —	ʔ	r.
Dentals —	t	th	d	dh	n	l.
Labials —	p	ph	b	bh	m	...
Liquids —	n	l.

The vowels are five in number. If we reckon the guttural-nasal g as a separate sound (which, considering its place in the language, we may justly do), but omit the nasalised k as uncommon, and count n and l as dentals only, the simple consonant sounds are fifteen in number. To these add the two sounds of th, and w and y as consonants; but omit the six aspirated consonants, for they are not simple sounds. The Australian alphabet thus consists of twenty-four simple elementary sounds.—ED.]

CHAPTER II.

THE PARTS OF SPEECH.

OF THE SUBSTITUTE FOR THE ARTICLE.

The general meaning of a noun is expressed by using its simple form; as, m a k o r o, 'a fish' or 'fishes'; t i b b i n, a 'bird' or 'birds,' in a general sense; k ù l a i, 'wood,' or 'a stick.' To make these plural, the plural pronoun would be attached; as, u n n i m a k o r o, t a r a m a k o r o, 'this fish,' 'these fishes,' meaning that they are here present; to express 'the fish' as an active agent we must say ǵ a l i m a k o r o, 'this fish,' sc., did some action. And so also with respect to all nouns, as will be explained under the head of pronouns.

OF SUBSTANTIVES.

Nouns are the 'names of persons, things, actions, and places.' They are Proper, when used as the name of any individual person or thing; Common and Collective, when denoting the names of things singly or together; as, k ù r i, 'man' or 'mankind'; k a r a i, 'kangaroo'; m a k o r o, 'fish.' A pronoun attached shows the number, whether singular or plural. Nouns which describe particular applications of the meaning of the verb are formed from the roots of their verbs; e.g., w i, the root of the verb 'speak,' gives w i y e l l i k á n, 'one who speaks,' 'a speaker'; w i y a i y é, 'one who always talks,' 'a talker,' 'chatterer.' When names of things are appropriated to a person so as to be the person's name, that name must be declined in the first declension of nouns, to show it is the name of a person and not of the thing; e.g., t i n t i ǵ 'a crab,' belongs to the third declension, and the genitive would be t i n t i ǵ - k o b a, 'belonging to a crab'; but when it is the name of a person, its genitive would be t i n t i ǵ - ú m b a, 'belonging to Crab,'—Mr. or Mrs., according to the context. There are a few terminations of gender in certain nouns, but not generally; as, p o r i - b a i, 'a husband'; p o r i k ù n - b a i, 'a wife'; y i n á l, 'a son'; y i n á l k ù n, 'a daughter'; but p i r i w á l, means a 'king' or 'queen,' according to the gender of the pronoun attached. To animals, in most instances, there are different words used for the male and for the female; as, warikál, 'a he-dog'; tinko, 'a she-dog.' Names of places are generally descriptive, as, puntéi, the 'narrow' place; búlwára, the 'high' place; tirabínba, the 'toothed' place; búnkilli-gól, 'the place for fighting,' the field of battle. Names of countries have a declension peculiar to place, and in the genitive have a feminine and a masculine termination; e.g., Englandkál, means 'Englishman,' the termination being masculine; but Englandkálin, means 'Englishwoman,' the termination being feminine; so also, untikál, 'of this place,' masculine; untikálin, 'of this place,' feminine. A noun is an adjective, a verb, or an adverb, according to the particle used with it, or the position of the word in the sentence; as, pitál, 'joy'; pitálmállí, 'to cause joy'; pitállikán, 'a joyful being'; pitálkátán, 'to exist joyfully'; murrarág, 'good'; murrarágtai, 'the good,' sc., person; murrarágumá, 'good done,' 'well done,' 'properly done.'

OF THE DECLENSION OF NOUNS, ETC.

There are seven declensions of nouns, according to which all adjectives and participles, as well as nouns, are declined.

Nouns are declined according to their use and termination. When used for the name of an individual person, they are declined in the first declension, whatever may be the termination of the word; but when used as the names of places, they follow the declension of place-names. Common nouns are declined in the second, third, fourth, fifth, and sixth declensions, according to their respective terminations.

Of the two nominative cases, the one is simply declarative, and in it the subject is inactive; as, 'this is a bird,' unni tati tibun; the second nominative is used when the subject is represented as doing something; as, tibbin to tatan, 'the bird eats'; in which case the particles ending in o are affixed, to denote the agent, according to the terminations of the respective nouns*; hence the following general rules for the use of the particles of agency:—

1. Nouns or participles ending in i or n affix -to; as,
Kikoi, 'a native cat,' kikoi-to, 'the cat' †;
Gurrulli, the active participle, or the infinitive, 'to hear, believe, obey,' gurrulli-to, 'faith, belief' .
2. Nouns ending in ng, a, e, o, u, require -ko; as,
Maiyá, 'a snake,' maiya-ko, 'the snake' ;
Kúri, 'a man,' kuri-ko, 'the man' ;
Woiyo, 'grass,' woiyo-ko, 'the grass' .
 But when r precedes o, the noun belongs to the fifth declension.

* See 'Agent-nominative case,' page 11.

† Supply here, and wherever the space occurs, some transitive predicate, as 'did, does, or will do, something.'

3. Nouns ending in l require -lo to be annexed; as,
 Punnál, 'the sun,' punnál-lo, 'the sun';
 Yinál, 'a son,' yinál-lo, 'the son'.
4. Nouns of three syllables ending in ro require the accent to be shifted to the o; as,
 Makoro, 'fish,' makor-ó, 'the fish'.
5. Nouns of three syllables ending in ra change the a into ó; as,
 Kokerá, 'a hut, house,' koker-ó, 'the house';
 Máttára, 'the hand,' máttár-ó, 'the hand'.
6. Nouns of four syllables ending in r require ró to be added; as,
 Kulmotiur, 'a woman's name,' Kulmotiur-ró.
- NOTE.—The participle form of the verb in the passive voice, when used as an agent, changes the last syllable into ró; as,
 Búntoara, 'that which is struck';
 búntoar-ó, 'that which is struck';
 Yellawaitoara, 'that which sits, squats';
 yellawaitoar-ó, 'that which sits'.

OF THE CASES OF NOUNS AND PRONOUNS.

It is by the particles that the whole progress of the mind of the speaker is shown, and only by the right use of them may we expect to render ourselves correctly intelligible to the aborigines. The following are used in the declension of nouns and pronouns, according to the terminations and cases of these:—

1. The Simple-nominative case merely declares the person or thing, or the quality, and has no particle added; as, gátoa, 'I'; kúri, 'man'; kúlai, 'wood'; kekál, 'sweet'; murrarág, 'good.' But particles are used to form nouns; as, búnkíyé, 'a smiter,' from the root bún, 'to smite'; kekálke, 'sweetness'; or, are used to transform the noun into a verb, which merely declares the abstract action; as, búnkílli, 'the action of smiting.'

2. The Agent-nominative case denotes the person who operates, and is always known by the addition of the particle o; but this particle of agency is preceded by a servile consonant, or is accented according to the last syllable of the noun. The personal and instrumental interrogatives, to? 'who?' ko? 'what thing?' are unchangeable; the particles of agency thus attached to the noun are -to, -ko, -lo, -o, -ro.

3. The Genitive case shows the relation of one thing considered as belonging, in some manner, to another; in the interrogative 'who,' and in the names of persons, it requires -úm ba; as, gánum ba? 'whose?' Threlkeld-úm ba, 'Threlkeld's'; píriwál-úm ba, 'the king's'; but things and persons require -koba; as, minaríg-koba? 'belonging to what thing?' kúri-koba, 'belonging to man.' The dual, the plural, and the singular feminine pronouns form the genitive by affixing -ba to the accusative; as, gálin-ba, 'belonging to us two'; gárun-ba, 'belonging to us,' 'ours'; bounnoun-ba, 'belonging to her,' 'hers'. The other singular pronouns add the particles to a variant form of the root-word; as, emmo-umba, 'belonging to me,' 'mine'; giro-umba, 'belonging to thee,' 'thine.' But time and place require -kál, and -kálin; as, buggai-kál, 'belonging to the present' period of time now becoming; England-kál, 'a man belonging to England,' 'an Englishman'; England-kálin, 'a woman belonging to England,' 'an Englishwoman'; untikál, 'hereof,' 'belonging to this place.'

4. The Dative case shows the ultimate object to which an action tends; as, for a person to possess and use a thing in any way; it is expressed by adding -núg to the interrogative pronoun and to names of persons only, but -ko to all other nouns, and to the abstract action, which is thereby formed into a supine or a construct infinitive; as, búnkíliko, 'for-to smite.*' But motion towards a person or thing, as opposed to motion from the place where the person or thing is, requires the following particles according to the various terminations of the nouns; viz., -takó, -kakó, -lakó, -akó, -rakó; that is, the particle -ko, preceded by a syllable, the consonant of which varies according to the termination of the noun to which it is affixed; the personal pronoun requires -kínko, and place takes -kakó; see table of declensions.

5. The Accusative case, which marks direct action on the person, not merely towards the person, is the object of a transitive verb. The personal pronouns have distinct particles; see their declension. But names of persons have the terminating particle -núg added; so also the interrogatives of person, place, and thing; as, gan-núg? 'whom?' or 'who is the direct object?' won-núg? 'where?' or 'where at?' min-núg? 'what?' or 'what object?' so also, Threlkeld-núg is the objective or accusative case. All other common substantives, not derivatives, are placed before the active verb without any change from the simple nominative; nor can error arise therefrom; because when they are used as agents, the sign of that case will be attached; as, karai búwa, 'smite the kangaroo; but karaitia búnkulla, 'the kangaroo struck me,' equivalent to, 'I was struck by the kangaroo.'

6. In the Vocative case, the particle a-la or e-la, calling for attention, is prefixed to the form of the nominative, not the agent-nominative, case; as, ala piriwál! 'O king!' equivalent to 'May it please your majesty.'

7. Ablative case. Certain postpositions are used to indicate this case; as, (1) kai, meaning 'from,' 'concerning,' 'about,' 'on account of,' used only to proper names and pronouns; but for common nouns, -tin, -lin, -in, -rin, 'from,' 'on account of,' the consonant varying according to the termination of the word to which it is attached; (2) kin-birug, meaning 'from,' used only to pronouns, is opposed to the dative of 'motion towards'; proper names, whether of persons or places, require ka-birug; but common nouns require, according to their terminations, -ta-birug, -ka-birug, -la-birug, -a-birug, -ra-birug, to mark 'motion from,' as opposed to the dative; (3) katoa, meaning to be 'with' as an agent, is affixed to personal pronouns and proper names of persons only; but persons, things, and places annex, according to their respective terminations, -toa, -koa, -loa, -oa, -roa, meaning 'by,' 'through,' 'with,' 'near'; no causative effects are implied in any of these particles; (4) ka-ba, meaning 'at' or 'on,' and kin-ba, present 'with' a person at his place, are locative.

For nouns, these postpositions are annexed mostly to the form of the simple nominative; for pronouns, commonly to the first dative form.

OF ADJECTIVES AND PARTICIPLES.

Adjectives have no distinctive endings; it depends entirely on their situation, or on the particles used, whether words are nouns, adjectives, verbs, or adverbs. For instance, if murrarag, 'good,' yarakai, 'bad,' and konéin, 'pretty,' be declined according to their terminations, with the particles of agency affixed, they would then become agents, and consequently nouns; as, murraragko, 'the good,' yarakaito, 'the bad or evil,' konéinto, 'the pretty' or 'the beauty,' respectively, . . . ;* but participles in the passive voice terminate always in the compound particle -tóara; the root of the verb is prefixed either with or without the causative particles, according to the sense required; as, from kiyu, the verb 'to roast with fire, to scorch, to broil,' comes kiyuba-tóara, 'that which is roasted'; kiyuba-tóara bag, 'I am roasted'; kiyuba-toaró, 'that which is roasted'*

Adjectives denoting abundance are often formed by a reduplication; as, murrarag, 'good'; murrarag-murrarag, 'excellent, abundance of good'; kauwal, 'great, large, big'; kauwal-kauwal, 'many, abundant.'

Adjectives denoting want are expressed by affixing a negative word; as, murraragkorien, 'worthless,' lit., 'good-not.'

Adjectives denoting resemblance require the particle -kiloa, 'like,' to be affixed; as, wonnai-kiloa, 'child-like,' 'like a child'; but, if they denote habit, the particle -kei is affixed; as, wonnai-kei, 'childish.'

* See footnote, page 10.

Adjectives denoting character, manner, or habit, are formed from the roots of verbs, and have the particles ye or kei added; e.g., bún, the root of the verb 'to smite,' gives búnkiyé, 'a smiter'; whereas búnkilli-kán would be 'one who smites'; wóǵkál 'to be a fool'; wóǵkál-kei, 'foolish'; so also ǵura-kei 'wise, skilful'; bukka-kei, 'ferocious, savage'; kekál-kei, 'sweet, nice, pleasant.' Derived forms of the verb also give nouns in -yé; as wiy-ai-yé, 'a talker.'

OF COMPARATIVES AND SUPERLATIVES.

The following are the methods used in comparison, there being no particles to express degrees of quality:—

1. The comparative of equality is formed thus:—
Kekál-kei unni yanti unnoa-kiloa, 'sweet this as that-like,' i.e., 'this is as sweet as that.'
2. The comparative of inferiority is formed by putting the negative particle korien after the adjective; thus:—
Kekál-korien unni yanti unnoa-kiloa, 'sweet-not this as that-like,' i.e., 'this is not so sweet as that.'
3. The comparative of superiority is formed by the use of the word kauwál-kauwál, a reduplication of 'great,' and the particle of negation added to that which is inferior; as:—
Kekál-kei unni kauwál-kauwál keawai unnoa, 'sweet this great-great, not that,' i.e., 'this is most sweet.'

OF WORDS DENOTING NUMBER.

Numerals are only cardinal; they are declined as nouns, so far as they extend; namely, wakál, 'one'; bula, bulóara, 'two'; ǵoro, 'three'; warán, 'four'; beyond this there are no further numbers, but the general term kauwál-kauwál, 'much or many' is used. The interrogative of quantity or number, minnán? 'which present?', means 'how many?'; the answer would be given by any of the above numbers; or by kauwál-kauwál kúri, 'many men'; or by warea kúri, 'few men.' Ordinal numbers can be expressed only by declining the noun to which they may be attached, the ordinal adjective being also subject to declension, according its own termination, independently of the termination of the noun; as:—

Purreáǵ-ka ǵoro-ka, 'the third day'; kúlai-toa ǵoro-koa, 'by, beside the third tree.' Bulóara is used in the dual, and is of the sixth declension.

There are also two other expressions which may be noticed here; namely, winta, equivalent to 'a part or portion of, some of'; also, yantin, equivalent to 'the whole or all'; as, unti-bo winta kúri, 'here be part of the men,' 'some of the men are here'; unti-bo yantin kúri, 'here be all the men,' 'all the men are here.'

OF PRONOUNS.

The personal pronouns of the first, second, and third persons singular, have two forms, the one used with the verb as a subject to it, the other used absolutely in answer to an interrogative, or with the verb for the sake of emphasis. The latter form, when used as a subject, precedes the predicate, and always calls attention to the person and not to the verb. These forms will therefore be designated Personal-nominative pronouns, and marked as such; thus, Nom. 1 means Personal-nominative; but the personal pronouns used as the nominative to verbs and never by themselves, nor in answer to interrogatives, will be marked Nom. 2, to denote Verbal-nominative, as the verb is then the prominent feature to which attention is called, and not the person; these always follow the verb. The strictest attention must be given to the use of the pronouns in all their persons, numbers, and cases; for by them the singular, dual, and plural numbers are known; by them the active, the passive, the reciprocal, and reflexive states of the verb; as will be exemplified in the conjugation of the verbs, as well as in the declension of the pronouns. The plural personal pronouns have only one nominative form to each person; so also, the singular feminine pronoun, which is only of one description. The dual number also has but one pronoun in the nominative case; but it has a case peculiar to this language—a nominative and an accusative case conjoined in one word; just as if such English pronouns as I and thee, thou and him, could become I-thee, thou-him. This will be called the Conjoined-dual form.

DECLENSION OF THE NOUNS AND PRONOUNS.

[The declension of the nouns and pronouns is effected by means of postpositions, as has been already explained in this chapter. The forms of the ablative case may be indefinitely multiplied in number by using other postpositions than those shown in the following paradigms.*—Ed.]

[* In the paradigms of the pronouns and the nouns, Nom. 1 is the nominative case in its simple form, used absolutely; Nom. 2 is the form used as the nominative of the agent or instrument; the Gen. means, as usual, 'of,' or 'belonging to'; Dat. 1 is the dative of 'possession' or 'use,' = 'for' (him, her, it), to have and to use; Dat. 2 is a sort of locative case 'towards' (him, &c.); the Acc. is the 'object' form of the word; the Voc. is used in 'calling'; Abl. 1 denotes 'from,' 'on account of,' as a cause; Abl. 2, 'from,' 'away from,' 'procession from'; Abl. 3, 'with,' 'in company with'; Abl. 4, 'being with,' 'remaining with,' 'at'; occasionally there is an Abl. 5, which means merely place where, 'at.'—Ed.]

DECLENSION OF PLACE-NAMES.

All Nouns, whatever may be their original signification, when used as proper names of places, are of this declension, if they end in a.

Mulubinba, the site of 'Newcastle.'

- Nom.* Mulubinba, the name of the place, M
- Gen.* 1 Mulubinba-koba, any thing belonging to M
 2 Mulubinba-kál, a male belonging to M
 3 Mulubinba-kálin, a female belonging to M
- Dat.* 1 Mulubinba-kako, for M . . . ,— to remain there.
 2 Mulubinba-kolağ, to M . . . , to proceed to M . . .
- Acc.* 1 Barun Mulubinba-kál, them (masc.) of M
 2 Barun Mulubinba-kálin, them (fem.) of M
 3 Barun yantín Mulubinba-kál, them all of M
- Voc.* Yapállun Mulubinba-kál, alas! people of M
- Abl.* 1 Mulubinba-tin, from, on account of M
 2 Mulubinba-kabiruğ, from, away from M
 3 Mulubinba-koa, by, by way of, through M
 4 Mulubinba-kaba, at, on, in M

NOTE 1.—To form the Acc. singular or dual here, put their pronouns in the place of barun.

2.—The interrogative pronoun signifying place is wonta? 'where is it?' and this may be substituted for Mulubinba; the example would then become interrogative; as, wontakál? 'belonging to what place?' wontakaba? 'where is it at?' 'at what place is it?' &c.

DECLENSION OF THE FIRST PERSONAL PRONOUN.

The cases of the three personal pronouns and the manner of using them are similar to those of the nouns. Thus, for the first pronoun:—

- Nom.* 1. Gatoa, I.—This form is used in answer to an interrogative of personal agency; as, Gánto wiyan? 'Who speaks?' The answer would be gatoa, 'it is I who,' the verb being understood. The next form, bağ, would simply declare what I do.
2. Bağ, I,—is used in answer to an interrogative of the act; as, Minnuğ ballin bi? 'What art thou doing now?' tatán bağ, 'I eat;' bağ must be used, and not the personal-nominative, gatoa.

- Gen.* E m m o - ú m b a, My or mine,—is used with a noun, or with a substantive verb; the noun always precedes; as, k o k e r a e m m o u m b a, ‘my house’; but e m m o u m b a t a, ‘it is mine.’
- Dat.* 1. E m m o - u ġ, For me,—personally to receive or use.
2. E m m o - u ġ - k i n - k o, To me,—to the place where I am.
- Acc.* T i - a, Me,—governed by transitive verbs. This pronoun is used to form the equivalent for the passive voice; as, b ú n t á n b a ġ, ‘I strike’; but b ú n t á n t i a, ‘I am struck,’ lit., ‘strikes me.’
- Voc.* K a - t i - o ú, —merely an exclamation; as, Oh me! Ah me!
- Abl.* 1. E m m o - u ġ - k a i, From me,—through me, about me.
2. E m m o - u ġ - k i n - b i r u ġ, From me,—away from me.
3. E m m o - u ġ - k a - t o a, With me,—in company with me.
4. E m m o - u ġ - k i n - b a, With me,—at my place.

These case-endings have the same force for the second and the third pronouns also.

DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUNS.

These are so compound in their signification as to include the demonstrative and the relative; e.g.—1. ġ a l i is equivalent to ‘this is that who or which,’—the person or thing spoken of being here present; 2. ġ a l a, ‘that is that who or which,’—being at hand; 3. ġ a l o a, ‘that is that who or which,’—being beside the person addressed, or not far off. They are thus declined:—

	Instant.	Proximate.	Remote.
Nom.	{ 1. G a - l i 2. U n - n i	G a - l a U n - n o a	G a - l o a. U n - t o a.
Gen.	G a l i - k o - b a	G a l a - k o - b a	G a l o a - k o - b a.
Dat.	{ 1. G a l i - k o 2. U n - t i - k o	G a l a - k o U n - t a - k o	G a l o a - k o. U n - t o a - k o.
Acc.	U n - n i	U n - n o a	U n - t o a.
Abl.	{ 1. G a l i - t i n 2. U n - t i - b i r u ġ	U n - t a - t i n U n - t a - b i r u ġ	G a l o a - t i n. U n - t o a - b i r u ġ.

The pronouns attached to these demonstratives determine their number, whether they are to be singular or plural; as, ġ a l i - n o a, ‘this is he who’; ġ a l i - b a r a, ‘these are they who’; ġ a l i - t a, ‘it is this that’; ġ a l i - t a r a, ‘these are they that.’ Other combinations are ġ a l i - n o a, ‘this is he who,’ as an agent; u n n i - n o a, ‘this is he,’ the subject. G a l i - k o b a b ó n, ‘this belongs to him,’ an idiom; ġ a l o a - k o b a b ó n, ‘this is that which belongs to him’; these and the other similar genitives, are always followed by the accusative case.

RECIPROCAL PRONOUNS.

Gatoa-bo, 'I myself'; gintoa-bo, 'thou thyself'; niu-woa-bo, 'he himself'; bali-bo, 'our two selves,' and so on. The bo here attached is merely an intensive particle.

POSSESSIVE PRONOUNS.

These are the genitive cases of the personal pronouns, and are used thus:—em noumba ta, 'mine it is'; unni ta em noumba kokera, 'this is my house'; unnoa ta giroumba, 'that is thine'; tararân giroumba korien, 'it is not thine,' lit., 'not thine not,' for the idiom of the language requires two negatives here.

INDEFINITE PRONOUNS.

Yiturrabúl, 'some one,' 'some person or persons', is declined like the fourth declension of nouns; tarai, 'other,' like the second declension.

ABSOLUTE PRONOUNS.

Ta, 'it is,' from the substantive verb; tara, 'they are,' is of the fifth declension; unni tara, 'these are they which,' as a subject; gali taro, 'these are they which,' as agents; yantin, 'all,' 'the whole,' is of the second declension; yantin-to, 'all who,' as agents; wakálo, 'one only,' as an agent.

INTERROGATIVE PRONOUNS.

The interrogative pronouns are,—gan, 'who?'; min (neut.), 'which? what?'; won, 'where?'; ya-koai, 'how? in what manner?'; ya-kounta, 'when? at what time?'

EXAMPLES OF THE PARTICLES USED AS AFFIXES TO THE INTERROGATIVES.

The Interrogative, Gán-? who?

- Nom.* 1 Gán-ke? who is?
2 Gán-to? who is the agent?
Gen. Gán-úmba? whose?
Dat. 1 Gán-núg? for whom?—to possess or use.
2 Gán-kin-ko? to whom?—towards whom?
Acc. Gán-núg? whom? or who is the object?
Voc.
- Abl.* 1 Gán-kai? from whom? on account of whom?
2 Gán-kin-birug? from, away from whom?
3 Gán-katoa? in company with whom?
4 Gán-kin-ba? with whom? remaining with whom?

The Interrogative, Min-? what? which?, applied to things only.

- Min-ariġ? what? as, min-ariġ ke unni? what is this?
 Min-nán? what are? i.e., how many?
 Min-ariġ-ko? what?—as the agent or instrument.
 Min-ariġ-koba? belonging to what?
 Min-ariġ-kolaġ? towards what?
 Min-nuġ? what?—the object of the verb.
 Min-ariġ-tin? from what cause? why? wherefore?
 Min-ariġ-biruġ? from what? of what? out of what?
 Min-ariġ-kiloa? like what?
 Min-ariġ-koa? with what? together with what?
 Min-ariġ-kaba? on what?

The Interrogative of place,
Won-? what place? where?

- Won-ta? where is the place? what place?—definite.
 Won-nein? where? which place?—indefinite.
 Won-ta-kál? masc., belonging to what country or place?
 Won-ta-kálin? fem., belonging to what country?
 Won-ta-kolaġ? towards what place?
 Won-tariġ? to what place? whither?
 Won-nuġ? what place? where?—the object of a verb.
 Won-ta-tinto? from what place? (causative); where at?
 Won-ta-biruġ? from what place? out of what place?
 Won-ta-koa? through what place? by what place?

Interrogative adverbs. { Yakoai? how? in what manner?
 { Yakounta? when? at what time?

All these particles are used strictly according to the meanings shown above, and cannot be used loosely like some interrogatives in English; for example, yakoai? 'how?' cannot be used to ask the question 'how many?' for it is an adverb of manner; 'how many' must be minnán.

CHAPTER III.

OF THE VERB.

THE verbs undergo no change to indicate either number or person, but the stem-forms vary in respect to the sort of agency employed, whether personal or instrumental, and also according to the manner of doing or being; as, (a) when I do anything to myself, or (b) to another; or (c) I do anything to another and he reciprocally does it to me; or (d) when I continue to be or to do; or (e) when the action is doing again, or (f) when permitted to be done by this or that agent; or (g) by another agent; or (h) when a thing acts as an agent, or (i) is used as an instrument. Verbs are reduplicated to denote an increase of the state or action. All verbs are declined by particles, each of which particles contains in its root the accident attributed to the verb in its various modifications; as, assertion, affirmation, negation, privation, tendency, existence, cause, permission, desire, purpose; thus are formed moods, tenses, and participles. The participles are formed after the manner of their respective tenses, and are declined either as verbal nouns or as verbal adjectives.

OF THE KINDS OF VERBS.

Verbs are either Transitive or Intransitive, both of which are subject to the following accidents, viz.:—

1. Active-transitive, or those which denote an action that passes from the agent to some external object; as, 'I strike him,' búntán bón bag. This constitutes the active voice, which states what an agent does to another, or, what another agent does to him, in which latter case it is equivalent to the English passive voice; e.g., búntán bón (literally, 'strikes him,') implies that some agent now strikes him, and means 'he is now struck,' the nominative pronoun being omitted in order to call attention to the object. But when this accusative or object is omitted, the attention is then called to the act which the agent performs; as, búntán bag, 'I strike,' expressed often by 'I do strike.'

2. Active-intransitive, or those which express an action which has no effect upon any external object except the agent or agents themselves; that is, the agent is also the object of his own act; consequently the verb is necessarily reflexive; as, búnkilléún bag, 'I struck myself.' This constitutes the 'reflexive' modification of the verb.

3. Active-transitive-reciprocal, or those verbs that denote an action that passes from the agent to some external object, which object returns the action to the agent who then becomes the object, and thus they act reciprocally one towards the other. Consequently the dual and plural numbers are always the subject to this form of the verb; as, búnkillán bali, 'thou and I strike' each other reciprocally; búnkillán bara, 'they strike' each one the other reciprocally, or they fight with blows. This constitutes the 'reciprocal' modification of the verb.

4. Continuative; as when the state continues, or the action is, was, or will be, continued without interruption; as, búnkillilín bağ, 'I am now continuing in the action of making blows', such as thrashing or beating. This is called the 'continuative' modification of the verb.

5. Causative (1) by permission, or, with a negative, prohibitive; as, when we do or do not permit a person to do the act, or another to do the act to him; as, búmmunbilla bón, 'let him strike,' búmmarabunbilla bón, 'cause some one to strike him,' equivalent to, 'let him be struck'; búmmarabunbi yikora bón, 'let no one strike him.'

6. Causative (2) by personal agency, denoting the exertion of personal energy to produce the effect upon the object; as tiir ta unni, 'this is broken'; tiir buğ-ga unni also means 'this is broken,' but then personal agency is understood, for the phrase is equivalent to 'some person has broken this,' or 'this is broken by some one.'

7. Causative (3) by instrumental agency, denoting an effect produced by means of some instrument; as, tiir burréa unni, 'this is broken,' sc., by means of something.

8. Effective, or those which denote an immediate effect produced by the agent on the object; as, umá bağ unni, 'I made this'; pitál bağ, 'I am glad'; pitálmá bón bağ, 'I made him glad.'

9. Neuter verbs, or those which describe the quality, state, or existence of a thing; as, kekál láğ unni, 'this is sweet'; tetti láğ unni, 'this is dead'; wonnuğ ke noa? 'where is he?' unni ta, 'this is it'; móron noa kátán, 'he is alive'; unnuğ noa ye, 'there he is.' In these the particles, láğ, ke, ta, kátán, ye, are rendered into English by the neuter verb is.

10. Reduplicate, or those which denote an increase of the state, quality, or energy; as, pitál noa, 'he is glad'; pitál-pitál noa, 'he is very glad'; tetti bara, 'they are dead'; tetti-tettéi bara, 'they are dead-dead,' or 'a great death is among them'; kauwál, 'great'; kauwál-kauwál, 'very great'; tauwa, 'eat'; tauwa-tauwa, 'eat heartily.'

11. Privative, or those which denote the absence of some property. Affirmatively, umán bağ unni, 'I make this,' or 'I do this'; upán bağ unni, 'I do this,' not directly, but with something or by means of something else; e.g., 'I write on this paper with a quill' would be upán bağ unni yiriğko wiyellikö, lit., 'I make this quill for-to speak or communicate'; whereas umán bağ unni yiriğ pen kakillikö would mean 'I make this quill for-to* be a pen.' Negatively, when it is implied that the act itself has not taken place, the expression would be umapa bağ ba, 'had I made'; again, if the act existed, but no effect produced by the action were implied, it would be expressed thus, umai-ğa bağ unni, 'I had almost done this.'

12. Imminent, or those which denote a readiness to be or to do; as piriwál katéa kun koa bağ, 'lest I should be king'; búntéa kun koa bón bağ, 'lest I should strike him.'

13. Inceptive, or those which describe the state as actually about to exist, or the action as going to put forth its energy at the time spoken of; as, kakilli kolağ bali, 'we two are now going to live reciprocally together'; búnkilli kolağ bağ, 'I am now going to strike.'

14. Iterative, or those which denote a repetition of the state or action; as, móron katéa kánun, 'shall live again'; búntéa kánun, 'will strike again.'

15. Spontaneous, or those which denote an act done of the agent's own accord; as, tíir kullin unni, 'this is breaking of its own accord'—not by external violence (cf. No. 6); pór kulléün noa, 'he has just been born,' lit., 'he has dropped himself.'

OF THE MOODS.

There are three moods, the Indicative, the Subjunctive, and the Imperative.

1. The Indicative, which simply declares a thing; as, búntán bağ, 'I strike'; unni ta, 'this is it', the subject; ğali noa 'this is he,' the agent.

2. The Subjunctive, which subjoins something to the meaning of the verb, such as a wish, a desire, a purpose; as, búwil bağ, 'I wish to strike,' búuwa bağ, 'I desire to strike,' or 'I want now to strike'; tanán ba uwá búnkillikö, 'had I come hither for-to strike.'

* This form of the verb, as will afterwards be shown, denotes purpose; our author expresses that everywhere by for-to. I have allowed that prepositional form to stand.—ED.

3. The Imperative, which expresses command; as, búw a bi, 'do thou strike'; but in búmmunbilla, 'let strike,' the person or persons addressed are desired to permit the person named to strike; in búmmarabunbilla, 'let strike,' the person addressed is desired to permit any one to strike the person named; in búntá-ka, 'strike again,' the person or persons addressed are desired to repeat the action. The imperative form is often used with the first and the third personal pronouns; in this sense it denotes the desire of the agent to do the act at the time spoken of; as, búw a banúg, 'I want to strike thee'; búw a biloa, 'he wants to strike thee.'

NOTE.—The equivalent, in many instances, to the English infinitive mood is the construct form of the verb which denotes the purpose of the subject; as, Minaríg ko unni? What is this for? búnkilikó, is the answer, 'for-to strike.'

OF THE TENSES.

1. The Present, which asserts the present existence of the action or being of the verb, at the time in which the assertion is made. The signs of this tense are the following affixed particles, of which the first consonant is varied by the terminations of the respective conjugations of the verbs, viz., -án to the simple verb, -lán to the reciprocal verb, and -lín to the participle; as, búntán, 'strikes' now; búnkállán, now 'reciprocally strike one another'; búnkállín, now 'striking'; búnkállilín, now 'continuing in the act of striking.'

2. The Perfect-definite, which asserts the act as having been completed in a past period of the present day; as, búnkéún, 'has struck,' sc., this morning; búnkálléún ba g, 'I have struck myself,' sc., this day.

3. The Perfect-past-aorist, which asserts the act as completed, without reference to any particular period in past time; as, búnkulla, 'struck.' This is not the participle.

4. The Pluperfect, which asserts the act as completed prior to some other past circumstance. It is formed by the affirmative particle, ta, affixed to the past aorist, and is equivalent only to the English pluperfect; as, búnkulla ta, 'had struck.'

5. The Future-definite, which asserts the act as taking place at a certain definite period, future to the time at which the act is spoken of; as, búnkín, 'shall or will strike,' sc., to-morrow morning.

6. The Future-aorist, which asserts the mere future existence of the act, without reference to any other circumstance, in some indefinite time to come; as, búnnún ba g, 'I shall strike'; búnnún noa, 'he will strike.'

OF THE PARTICIPLES.

1. The Present. This has already been described; but it may be necessary to mention, that the present participle can be used only with reference to present time, not to the past and future, as is the case in English; as, búnkillín, 'striking' now.

2. The Imperfect-definite, which represents the action as being in progress at some definite past period; as, búnkillikéún, 'striking,' sc., this morning.

3. The Imperfect-past-aorist, which represents the action as being in progress at any recent time; as, búnkilliela noa, 'he was striking.'

4. The Past-present-aorist, which asserts the action as having been engaged in and completed at some former period; as, bún-tállabağ, wonnai bağ ba, 'I struck when I was a child'; wiyállabağ wonnai-kiloa, wonnai bağ ba, 'I spoke as a child when I was a child.'

5. The Pluperfect, which indicates the action as having been completed prior to some other past event mentioned; as, búnkilliela ta, 'had struck,' sc., prior to something.

6. The Inceptive-future, which asserts that the action is now about to be pursued; as, búnkillikolağ bağ, 'I am going to strike,' or 'I am going a-striking'; makoro kolağ bağ, 'I am going a-fishing.'

7. Future-definite, which asserts the action as about to be engaged in at some future definite period; as, bunnkillikín bağ, 'I am going to strike,' sc., to-morrow morning.

8. The Future-aorist, which asserts that the action will exist at some future undefined period; as, bunnkillinún bağ, 'I am going to strike,' sc., at some time or other, hereafter.

[PARADIGM OF THE TENSES AND THEIR MEANINGS.

The Tenses of the verb and their meanings, as given above, may be concisely expressed thus:—

Indicative Mood and Participles.

TENSE.	MEANING.
1. Present tense,	I am or do—now.
2. Imperfect-definite,	I was or was doing—this morning.
3. First-aorist,	I was or was doing—recently.
4. Second-aorist,	I was or did—at some former period.
5. Perfect-definite,	I have been or done—this morning.
6. Pluperfect,	I had been or done—before some event.
7. Inceptive-future,	I am going to or shall, be or do—now.
8. Future-definite,	I am going to or shall, be or do—to-morrow morning.
9. Future-aorist,	I am going to or shall, be or do—at some time hereafter.

Subjunctive Mood.

Our author has four Aorists in this Mood, namely:—

- | | |
|---------------------------------------|-----------------------------------|
| 10a. Past aorist, | I had almost been or done. |
| b. Aorist of the past, | Had I been or done. |
| c. " " | I wish I had been or done. |
| d. " " negatively, | I have not been or done. |

The Moods have various mode-forms, thus:—

In the Indicative.

- | | |
|-------------------------|---|
| Reciprocal mode, | We [e.g. , strike] one another. |
| Reflexive mode, | I [strike] myself. |

In the Subjunctive.

- | | |
|---|------------------------------------|
| Iteration mode, | I [strike] again. |
| Imminence, | Lest I should [strike]. |
| Contemporary circumstance, | While I or when I [strike]. |
| Implied negation of actual becoming or of actual effect, | } See 10 a |
| Implied negation of being or action, | |

In the Participles.

- | | |
|---------------------------|-----------------------------------|
| Continuative mode, | Continuing to be or to do. |
| Reflexive mode, | Doing to one's self. |
| Reciprocal mode, | Doing to one another. |

It is clear that the native language recognises three varieties of time and place. The pronouns ǵali, ǵala, ǵaloa (q.v.) show these variations as to place; and so the principal tenses of the indicative mood, as above, mark time (1) present, (2) recent, (3) remote. English and other languages show the same distinctions in such words as here, there, yonder.—ED.]

DECLENSION OF THE VERBS.

 The reader will remember that the tense-form of the verb is always constant, and is therefore not affected by its subject. The subject shown in the declension of the verb is the pronoun baǵ, 'I,' and the direct object with a transitive verb is bón, 'him'; but any other suitable pronouns may be substituted for these; for the pronouns that are thus used as subjects, see note on next page; their objective cases are shown in the paradigm of the pronouns. Each tense may thus be declined in full, as in English, by using in succession the pronouns of the first, second, and third persons as the subject of the verb. The shades of meaning conveyed by the tenses are given in the paradigm above, and are applicable to all verbs. The numbers, affixed to the various tenses in the declension of the verbs, correspond with the numbers on that paradigm of tenses, and the T. stands for Tense.—ED.]

DECLENSION OF THE SUBSTANTIVE VERB.

Kakilliko, 'to be,' 'to exist,' 'to remain.'

* There are two negatives here, as usual, but the former of them may be omitted.

4. The verb, with an attribute of manner: yanti, 'it is so'; yanti bo ta, 'it is so itself'; imperative: yanóa, 'let be as it is'; ya-ai (used negatively), 'let it not be so.'

Example:—

Yaai, bünki yikora, 'let it not be so, strike not.'

5. The verb, expressing tendency: wal, 'is,' 'shall,' 'will' (denoting tendency of the mind or thing); imperative: wiya, 'say,' 'declare what you wish.'

Examples:—

Tiir wal unni, 'this is broken'; wiya, unni mur-raráǵ, 'say, is this good?'

6. The verb, expressing being or existence: ke, 'be,' 'is.'

Example:—

Minariġ ke unni? 'what (thing) is this?'

Yaai, 'refrain,' 'do not,' 'cease acting,' 'hold!' 'let not.'

Yari, yanoa, 'let be,' 'let alone,' 'do not.'

ADVERBS.

THE use of the word determines whether it should be called a noun, an adjective, or an adverb. A word used with the particle of agency would be considered a noun; but the same word, if attached to a noun, would be an adjective; used with a verb, it would be an adverb; as, pórrol, 'heavy'; pórrol ta unni, 'this is heavy'; pórrol noa wiyán, 'he speaks heavily.' Adverbs are classed in the following manner:—

1. Of Number.

Wakál bo ta, 'once only.'

Bulóara bo ta, 'twice only.'

Ngóro bo ta, 'thrice only.'

2. Of Order.

Bonén, 'the first to be done.'

Kurri-kurri, 'the beginning, the first.'

Gánka, 'the first,' or 'before.'

Willug, 'the last,' or 'behind.'

3. Of Place.

Unti, 'here.'

Bará-kolaġ, 'downwards.'

Unnuġ, 'there.'

Muring-kolaġ, 'forwards.'

Wonnug? 'where?'

Willug-kolaġ, 'backwards.'

Wonta-kolaġ, 'whither?'

Wonta-biruġ? 'whence? from what place?'

Unti-kolaġ, 'hither.'

Unta-biruġ, 'thence.' [time.

Unto-kolaġ, 'thither.'

Unti-biruġ, 'hence'; place or

Wokka-kolaġ, 'upwards.'

4. Of Time.

Ba, 'when; at the time that';
gai-ya, 'then,' must always be after it.

Keawai-wál, 'never, not at any time'; 'no, never.'

Buġ-gai, 'this present period, now, to-day'; 'the time now passing.'

Kúm-ba, 'yesterday' (when the verb is in a past tense); 'tomorrow' (when used with a verb in the future tense).

Buġ-gai-kál, 'of the present period; fresh, new, recently.'

Kúm-ba kén ta, 'the day after to-morrow.'

Gai-ya, 'then, at that time';
it is governed by the particle ba.

Murá-ai, 'sometimes.'

Murrin-murrin, 'often, repeatedly, frequently.'

Kabo, 'presently.'

Tága, 'before, prior to.'

Kabo ka ta, 'presently it is,'
for 'not yet.'

Tanoa-nuġ bo, 'soon.'

Toan-ta, 'afterwards.'

Unnúg bo, 'hitherto.'	Yakoun-ta? 'at what time? when?'
Wakál-wakál, 'once-once,'—an idiom for 'seldom.'	Yanti-kat-ai, 'hence forward,' 'for ever'; lit. , 'thus always.'
Yaki-ta, 'now'; at the time spoken of.	Yuki-ta, 'afterwards.'
Yaki-ta bo, 'instantly'; at the selfsame moment spoken of.	Yuraki, 'long since, formerly, long ago.'

NOTE.—Iteration is expressed by a particular form of the verb; as, Búntéa-kanun, 'will strike again.'

5. Of Quantity.

Butti, 'more'; meaning, 'continue the action.'	Minnán? 'what quantity? how much? how many?'
Kauwál-lág, 'largely, much, abundantly.'	Tantoa, 'enough, sufficiently.'
Kirun, 'all.'	Waréa-lág, 'little, sparingly.'
	Winta, 'a part, a portion.'

6. Of Quality or Manner.

Kára, 'slowly, deliberately.'	Pór-ról, 'heavily'; cf. pór-ról.
Kurra-kai, 'quickly'; also equivalent to the phrase 'make haste.'	Wir-wir, 'cheerfully, lightly'; cf. wir, as a verb, 'to fly like the down of a bird.'
Wogkál-lág, 'foolishly'; cf. wogkál, 'deaf, stupid, foolish.'

7. Of Doubt.

Mirka, 'perhaps.'	Mirka-ta, 'perhaps so, possibly.'
-------------------	-----------------------------------

8. Of Affirmation.

E-é, 'yes.'	Yanti bo ta, 'yes, just as it is.'
Kau-wá, 'yea.'	Yuna bo ta, 'verily, certainly, really'; lit. , 'there it is itself.'
Tokól bo ta, 'truly, in truth itself'; cf. tokól, 'straight.'

9. Of Negation.

Kea-wai, 'nay.'	Ta-rarán, 'it is not,' sc. , the thing affirmed.
Kea-wa-rán, 'no.'	Yikora, kora, korien, 'no, not.'

10. Of Interrogation.

Kora-koa? 'why not?'	Yako-ai? 'how?' meaning 'in what manner?' answer, yanti, 'thus.'
Minariǵ-tin? 'why? wherefore?'
Wonnén? 'how? which way?'	answer, ǵia-kai, 'this way.'

NOTE.—Other modifications will be better understood from the Illustrative sentences.

PREPOSITIONS.

- Ba, 'of'—denoting possession, when used with the personal pronouns.
- Birug, 'of, out of, from'; opposed to ko-lağ.
- Ka, 'in,' or 'at' such a period; as, tarai-ta yellâana-ka, 'in another moon.'
- Ka-ba, 'in, on, at'—a place; as, Sydney-ka-ba, 'at Sydney.'
- Kai, —the same meaning as tin; only this is used to personal pronouns, but 'tin' goes with nouns.
- Kâl, 'part of'; as, unti-kâl, 'of this, part of this, hereof.'
- Katoa, 'with, in company with,'—not instrumental.
- Ko, -lo, -o, -ro, -to,—particles denoting agency or instrumentality.*
- Ko-ba, 'of'—the same as 'ba,' but used only with nouns.
- Ko-lağ, 'to, towards, tendency towards,'—opposed to birug.
- Murrariğ, 'into.'
- Murrug, 'within.'
- Tin, 'from, on account of, for, because of, in consequence of.'
- Warrai, 'outside, without,'—opposed to 'within.'

* Expressed by with, by, for, but only when instrumental.

CONJUNCTIONS.

THE idiom of the language is such, that sentences connect with sentences without the aid of conjunctions, the subjunctive mood answering all these purposes. The dual number also does away with the necessity of using connectives to unite two expressions. The following are the principal conjunctions, viz., ğatun, 'and'; kulla, 'because, for'; ğali-tin, 'therefore, on account of this.' But the particles 'lest,' 'unless,' 'that,' and the disjunctives, are expressed by modifications of the verb in the subjunctive mood, as will be shown in the Illustrative sentences.

INTERJECTIONS.

NOTE.—The following are used under the circumstances mentioned.

- | | |
|--|-------------------------------------|
| A, 'hearken! lo! behold!' | Katio-katia, of pain, anguish. |
| Ela-beâra, of wonder, surprise, astonishment. | Wau, 'attention!' a call to attend. |
| Ginoa, of salutation at parting; as, 'farewell.' | Wi-wi, of aversion. |
| | Yapallun, of sorrow; 'alas!' |

CHAPTER IV.

VOCABULARY.

(1) MYTHOLOGY.

Gakón; kùrima; m.,* bones put through the septum of the nose for ornament.

Górró; pumeri; yonei, m., varieties of grass-tree. To form the native spears, pieces of the flower-stalks of this are cemented together at the ends by a resinous substance which exudes from the root; they are made from eight to twelve feet long; a piece of hard wood forms the last joint, on which is cemented a splinter of pointed bone, as a barb. A deadly weapon this is; thrown by means of a lever nearly four feet long, cf. 'womnára', which is held in the hand, and on it the poisoned spear.

Koin, Tippakál, Pórrág are names of an imaginary male being, who has now, and has always had, the appearance of a black; he resides in thick brushes or jungles; he is seen occasionally by day, but mostly at night. In general, he precedes the coming of the natives from distant parts, when they assemble to celebrate certain of their ceremonies, as the knocking out of tooth in the mystic ring, or when they are performing some dance. He appears painted with pipe-clay, and carries a fire-stick in his hand; but generally it is the doctors, a kind of magicians, who alone perceive him, and to whom he says, 'Fear not; come and talk.' At other times he comes when the blacks are asleep, and takes them up, as an eagle his prey, and carries them away for a time. The shout of the surrounding party often makes him drop his burden; otherwise, he conveys them to his fire-place in the bush, where, close to the fire, he deposits his load. The person carried off tries to cry out, but cannot, feeling almost choked; at daylight Koin disappears, and the black finds himself conveyed safely to his own fire-side.

Koyorówén, the name of another imaginary being, whose trill in the bush frequently alarms the blacks in the night. When he overtakes a native, he commands him to exchange cudgels, giving his own which is extremely large, and desiring the black to take a first blow at his head, which he holds down for that purpose†; after this he smites and kills the person with one blow, skewers him with the cudgel, carries him off, roasts, and then eats him.

* The m. throughout, stands for meaning.

† This is a common mode of duelling among the blacks.—Ed.

Kurriwilbán, the name of his wife; she has a long horn on each shoulder, growing upwards, with which she pierces the aborigines, and then shakes herself until they are impaled on her shoulders, when she carries them to a deep valley, roasts, and eats her victims. She does not kill the women, for they are always taken by her husband for himself. Yahó has, by some means, come to be used by the blacks as a name for this being.

Múrramai, m., the name of a round ball, about the size of a cricket-ball, which the aborigines carry in a small net suspended from their girdles of opossum yarn. The women are not allowed to see the internal part of the ball. It is used as a talisman against sickness, and it is sent from tribe to tribe for hundreds of miles, on the sea-coast and in the interior. One is now here from Moreton Bay, the interior of which a black showed me privately in my study, betraying considerable anxiety lest any female should see the contents. After he had unrolled many yards of woollen cord, made from the fur of the opossum, the contents proved to be a quartz-like substance of the size of a pigeon's egg. He allowed me to break it and retain a part. It is transparent, like white sugar-candy. The natives swallow any small crystalline particles that crumble off, as a preventive of sickness. It scratches glass, and does not effervesce with acids. From another specimen, the stone appears to be agate, of a milky hue, semi-pellucid, and it strikes fire. The vein from which it appears to have been broken off is one and a quarter inch thick. A third specimen contained a portion of carnelian partially crystallised, a fragment of chalcedony, and a fragment of a crystal of white quartz.

Murrokun, m., the name of a mysterious magical bone, which is obtained by the karákals, q.v. Three of these sleep on the grave of a recently interred corpse; in the night, during their sleep, the dead person inserts a mysterious bone into each thigh of the three 'doctors,' who feel the puncture not more severe than that of the sting of an ant. The bones remain in the flesh of the doctors, without any inconvenience to them, until they wish to kill any person, when by magical power, it is said and believed, they destroy their ill-fated victim, causing the mysterious bone to enter into his body, and so occasion death.

Nauwai, m., a canoe; pupa, m., bark, a canoe. The canoes are made of one sheet of bark, taken whole from the tree and softened with fire, and then tied up in a folded point at each end. A quantity of earth forms a hearth, on which the natives roast their bait and fish, when fishing.

- N u ġ - g ú n, m., a song. There are poets among the tribes, who compose songs ; these are sung and danced to by their own tribe in the first place, after which other tribes learn the song and dance; and so the thing itinerates from tribe to tribe throughout the country, until, from change of dialect, the very words are not understood correctly by distant blacks.
- P ó r o b u ġ, the name of a mystic ring, in which certain ceremonies of initiation are performed ; from p ó r, ‘ to drop down, to be born.’
- P u n t i m a i, m., a messenger, an ambassador. These men are generally decorated with the down of the swan or of the hawk on their heads, when on an embassy. They arrange the time, place, and manner of preparations for a battle or for the punishing of a supposed offender or real aggressor. They bring intelligence of the movements of hostile tribes, or the last new song and dance (cf. n u ġ - g u n). When they travel at night, a fire-stick is always carried by them as a protection against the powers of darkness, the evil spirits, of which they are in continual dread.
- P u t t i k a n, another imaginary being, like a horse, having a large mane and a tail sharp like a cutlass ; whenever he meets the blacks, they go towards him and draw up their lips to show that the tooth is knocked out* ; then he will not injure them ; but should the tooth be still there, he runs after them, and kills and eats them. He does not walk, but bounds like a kangaroo, and the noise of his leaps on the ground is as the report of a gun ; he calls out as he advances, ‘ P i r r o l ó ġ, P i r r o l ó ġ.’
- T i l m ú n, m., a small bird of the size of a thrush. It is supposed by the women to be the first maker of women ; or to be a woman transformed after death into the bird ; it runs up trees like a woodpecker. These birds are held in veneration by the women only. The bat, k o l u ġ - k o l u ġ, is held in veneration on the same ground by the men, who suppose the animal a mere transformation.
- T i p p a k a l i n, M a i l k u n, and B i m p ó i n, are names of the wife of K o i n, q.v. She is a much more terrific being than her husband ; him the blacks do not dread, because he does not kill them ; but this female being not only carries off the natives in a large bag-net and drags them beneath the earth, but she spears the children through the temples ; she thus kill them, and no one ever sees again those whom she obtains.
- T u r r a m a, m., an instrument of war, called by Europeans a ‘ boomerang.’ It is of a half-moon shape ; when thrown in the air it revolves on its own centre and returns, forming a curve in its orbit from and to the thrower; to effect this, it is thrown against the wind; but in war it is thrown against the ground; it then rebounds apparently with double violence, and strikes some distant object, and wounds severely with its sharpened extremities.

Yá r r o, m., an egg. But, used in a mystic sense, to the initiated ones it means 'fire or water.' And by the use of this term in asking for either element, the fraternity can discover themselves to each other. The men, after the tooth is knocked out in the Borarites, call women k u n n a i k a r á, and themselves y i r a b a i; previous to which the men are styled, k o r o m u n. The ceremony of initiation takes place every three or four years as young lads arrive at the age of puberty; mystic rings are made in the woods, and numerous ceremonies are gone through before the operation of displacing a tooth from the upper jaw; this is effected by three steady blows with a stout piece of hard wood, in shape like a punch, from the hand of the k a r á k á l; after that, the youth may seize a woman; he becomes a member of the tribe and engages in their fights.

Y u l u g, the name of the ring in which the tooth is knocked out. The trees are marked near the ring with rude representation of locusts, serpents, and other things, on the bark; these are chopped with an axe; and copies of the nests of various quadrupeds are formed on the ground near the spot. The celebrants dance for several days every morning and evening, continuing the whole of the night; no women are allowed to join in the ceremony.

(2) GEOGRAPHICAL NAMES.

- A w a b a, Lake Macquarie; the word means 'a plain surface.'
 B i w o g k u l a, the place of red ti-trees; from b i w o g, 'red ti-tree.'
 B o i k ó n ú m b a, a place of ferns; from b o i k ó n, 'fern.'
 B o u n, the site of Wallis's Plains; from a bird of that name.
 B ú l b a, an island; any place surrounded with water.
 B u l k á r a, any mountain; from b u l k a, 'the back' of a man or a beast.
 B u t t a b a, the name of a hill on the margin of the Lake.
 G a r a w a n t á r a, any plain, a flat.
 G o l o y á u w é, a point of land on the south side of the Lake.
 G ó r r ó i n b a, the female-emu place; from g ó r r o i n, 'the female emu'; 'the male emu' is k ó g k o r ó g, from his cry.
 G u r r á n b a, a place of brambles; from g u r r á n, an inferior sort of 'bramble.'
 K a i á r a b a, a place of 'sea-weeds.'
 K á r a k u n b a, a place of 'swamp-oaks,' which is a species of pine.
 K é e l - k é e l b a, a place of 'grass-tree.'

- Kintíirrabín, the name of a small extinct volcano on the sea-coast, near Red Head, north-east of Lake Macquarie.
- Koikalígba, a place of brambles; from koikalíg, a sort of 'bramble,' bearing a berry like a raspberry.
- Koiyóǵ, the site of any native camp.
- Kona-konaba, the name of the place where the stone called kona-kona is found. There are veins in the stone, which contain a yellow substance used for paint in warlike expeditions. It is the name of a large mountain, at the northern extremity of Lake Macquarie.
- Kopurraba, the name of the place from which the blacks obtain the kopurra, a yellowish earth, which they wet, mould up into balls, and then burn in a strong fire; the fire makes it change into a brilliant red, something like red ochre; the men and women paint themselves with it, after mixing it with the kidney fat of the kangaroo; this paint they use always at their dances.
- Kurrá-kurrán, the name of a place in which there is almost a forest of petrifications of wood, of various sizes, extremely well defined. It is in a bay at the north-western extremity of Lake Macquarie. The tradition of the aborigines is, that formerly it was one large rock which fell from the heavens and killed a number of blacks who were assembled there; they had gathered themselves together in that spot by command of an immense iguana, which came down from heaven for that purpose; the iguana was angry at their having killed lice by roasting them in the fire; those who had killed the vermin by cracking them, had been previously speared to death by him with a long reed from heaven! At that remote period, the moon was a man named Póntobuǵ; and hence the moon is called he to the present day; but the sun, being formerly a woman, retains the feminine pronoun she. When the iguana saw all the men were killed by the fall of the stone, he ascended up into heaven, where he is supposed to be now.
- Kuttai, the site of Sydney Light-house; any peninsula.
- Mulubinba, the name of the site of Newcastle, from an indigenous 'fern' named mulubin.
- Mulluǵ-bula, the name of two upright rocks about nine feet high, springing up from the side of a bluff head on the margin of the Lake. The blacks affirm, from tradition, that they are two women who were transformed into rocks, in consequence of their being beaten to death by a black man. Beneath the mountain on which the two pillars stand, a seam of common coal is seen, many feet thick, from which Reid obtained a cargo of coals when he mistook the entrance of this lake for Newcastle. A portion of a wharf built by him still exists at this place, which is still called Reid's Mistake; [i.e., in 1834].

- Munúg-gurraba, the place to which 'sea-snipe' resort.
- Múnukán is the name of a point, under which is a seam of cannel coal, and beneath that is a thick seam of superior common coal, and both jut into the sea betwixt three and four fathoms of water. The government mineral surveyor found, on examination, that the two veins were nearly nine feet in thickness, and the coal of excellent quality; [i.e. in 1834].
- Nikkinba, a place of coals, from nikkin, 'coal.' The whole Lake, twenty-one miles long by eight broad, abounds with coal.
- Niritiba, the name of the island at the entrance of the lake; from niriti, the 'mutton bird,' which abounds there.
- Pitoba, a place of pipe clay; from pito, 'pipe clay,' which is used at a death by the deceased's relatives to paint their whole body, in token of mourning.
- Puntei, a 'narrow' place; the name of any narrow point of land.
- Purribágbá, the 'ant's-nest place'; from within these nests a yellow dusty substance is collected, and used by the blacks as a paint for their bodies, called purribág. The ants gather the substance for some unknown purpose.
- Tirabéénba, a tooth-like point of land; from tira, 'a tooth.'
- Tulkaba, the soft ti-tree place; from tulká, 'ti-tree.'
- Tulkiriba, a place of brambles; from tulkiri, 'a bramble.'
- Tumpoaba, a clayey place; from tumpoa, 'clay.'
- Wárawállug, the name of a high mountain to the west of Lake Macquarie. This has been partly cleared of timber, by order of the Surveyor-General; as a land-mark it is seen from a considerable distance. The name is derived from wállug, the 'human head,' from its appearance.
- Wauwarán, the name of a hole of fresh water in the vicinity of Lake Macquarie, betwixt it and the mountains westerly; said by the blacks to be bottomless, and inhabited by a monster of a fish much larger than a shark, called wauwai; it frequents the contiguous swamp and kills the aborigines! There is another resort for these fish near an island in Lake Macquarie named boroyiróg, from the cliffs of which if stones be thrown down into the sea beneath, the ti-tree bark floats up, and then the monster is seen gradually arising from the deep; if any natives are at hand, he overturns their canoe, swallows the crew alive, and then the entire canoe, after which he descends to his resort in the depths below!
- Yiránálai, the name of a place near Newcastle on the sea beach, beneath a high cliff; it is said that if any persons speak there, the stones fall down from the high arched rocks above; for the crumbling state of these is such that the concussions of air from the voice cause the pieces of the loose rock to come down; this once occurred to myself when I was in company with some blacks here.

THE AUTHOR'S PREFACE.

THIS work was intended to be a paper for the Ethnological Society of London, to accompany some very interesting researches and observations made by a friend, relative to the customs and language of the aborigines of this colony. Through his making an inquiry respecting the meaning and difference of the words ba and ka, either of which can only be rendered into our language by the verb to be in some one or other of its modifications, I was led to the tracing out of the various meanings of many particles of a similar description, so that the work swelled to a size much larger than was anticipated. It was, therefore, thought advisable to print the work in its present form, especially as a public announcement asks for "A book, printed with colonial type, filled with colonial matter, and bound and ornamented with colonial materials," for presentation at the Royal National Exhibition, London, 1851.

The subject is purely colonial matter, namely, the language of the aborigines, now all but extinct; and the other conditions have been strictly attended to, as far as the circumstances of the colony would allow, the paper alone being of English manufacture. The author was the first to trace out the language of the aborigines, and to ascertain its natural rules; his "Australian Grammar" was published here in the year 1834, under the auspices of his late Majesty's Government, by the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, which generously carried the work through the press free of expense. His late Majesty King William IV. was graciously pleased to accept a copy of the book, and direct it to be placed in his library. Copies were likewise forwarded to several public institutions in England and elsewhere, where, it is presumed, they may still be found,—a testimony against the contemptible notion entertained by too many, who flatter themselves that they are of a higher order of created beings than the aborigines of this land, whom they represent as "mere baboons, having no language but that in common with the brutes!"; and who say, further, that the blacks have "an innate deficiency of intellect, and consequently are incapable of instruction." But if the glorious light of the blessed Gospel of God our Saviour had never shed its divine lustre around the British Crown, or never penetrated the hearts of the people with its vivifying power, the aborigines of Albion's shores might still have remained in the state described by the eloquent Cicero, in one of his epistles to his friend Atticus, the Roman orator; for he says, "Do not obtain your slaves from Britain, because they are so stupid and utterly incapable of being taught that they are not fit to form a part of the household of Atticus!"

Reminiscences of Biraban.

AN aboriginal of this part of the colony was my almost daily companion for many years, and to his intelligence I am principally indebted for much of my knowledge respecting the structure of the language. Biraban was his native name, meaning 'an eagle-hawk,' but the English called him M'Gill. His likeness was taken at my residence, Lake Macquarie, in 1839, by Mr. Agate, and will be found in the "Narrative of the United States' Exploring Expedition," commanded by Charles Wilkes, U.S.N. The "Narrative," vol. II, page 253, says:—"At Mr. Threlkeld's, Mr. Hale saw M'Gill, who was reputed to be one of the most intelligent natives; and his portrait was taken by Mr. Agate. His physiognomy was more agreeable than that of the other blacks, being less strongly marked with the peculiarities of his race; he was about the middle size, of a dark-chocolate colour, with fine glossy black hair and whiskers, a good forehead, eyes not deeply set, a nose that might be described as aquiline, although depressed and broad at the base. It was very evident that M'Gill was accustomed to teach his native language, for when he was asked the name of anything he pronounced the word very distinctly, syllable by syllable, so that it was impossible to mistake it. Though he is acquainted with the doctrines of Christianity and all the comforts and advantages of civilization, it was impossible for him to overcome his attachment to the customs of his people, and he is always a leader in the corroborees and other assemblies."

Both himself and Patty, his wife, were living evidences that there was no "innate deficiency of intellect" in either of them. He had been brought up from his childhood in the Military Barracks, Sydney, and he understood and spoke the English language well. He was much attached to us, and faithful to a chivalrous extreme. We never were under apprehensions of hostile attacks when M'Gill and his tribe encamped nigh our dwelling. A murderous black, named 'Bumble-foot,' from his infirmity, and 'Devil-devil,' from his propensities, had attempted to murder a European by chopping off the man's head with a tomahawk, and had nearly effected this; but the man recovered, and I had to appear at a Court of Justice as a witness; this displeased 'Bumble-foot,' and he avowed openly, in the usual manner, that he would slay me in the bush at the first opportunity; this came to the ears of M'Gill, who immediately applied to me for the loan of a fowling-piece 'to go and shoot that fellow for his threat'; this was, of course, refused. M'Gill was once present with me at the Criminal Court, Sydney, assisting as interpreter, when he was closely examined by Judges Burton and Willis, in open Court, on the trial of an aboriginal for murder, 1834, in order that M'Gill might be sworn as interpreter in the case; but, though his answers were satisfactory to the general questions proposed to him by the Judges, yet, not understanding the nature of our oath in a Court of Justice, he could not be sworn. Patty, his wife, was pleasing in her person, "black but comely," kind and affectionate in her disposition, and evidenced as strong a faculty of shrewdness in the exercise of her intellectual powers over M'Gill as many of the fairer daughters of Eve, who, without appearing to trespass on the high prerogative of their acknowledged lords, manage their husbands according to their own sovereign will; this might perhaps have arisen from the circumstance that M'Gill, once, when intoxicated, had shot at his wife, although he deeply deplored this when he became sober; the injury sustained was not much, but ever afterwards he treated her with much affection, which appeared to be reciprocal. It was a romantic scene to behold the happy pair, together

(MCGILL).

THIS PORTRAIT OF MCGILL WAS TAKEN IN PENCIL BY MR. AGATE OF THE

with many others, on a moonlight night, under the blue canopy of heaven, preparing for the midnight ball to be held on the green sward, with no other covert than a growing bush, with none other blaze than that from the numerous fires kindled around the mystic ring in which to trip the light fantastic toe. Then they might be seen reciprocally rouging each other's cheek with pigment of their own preparing, and imparting fairness to their sable skin on the neck and forehead with the purest pipeclay, until their countenances beamed with rapturous delight at each other's charms. The cumbrous garments of the day were laid aside, and in all the majesty of nature they danced as Britons did in days of old.

Our points of aboriginal honor M'Gill was exceedingly sensitive. "I must go," said he one day, "to stand my punishment as a man of honor, though I have done no wrong." The hostile message had been duly sent, and faithfully delivered by the seconds; one of these was an elderly female, who made her verbal communication with all the accustomed vituperation of daring challenge to the offended party; it was duly accepted; the weapons named, the cudgel, shield, and spear; the time was appointed, a certain day when the sun was one quarter high; the place, a plain in a certain well-known vicinity attached to our dwelling. Messengers were despatched to gather in the distant tribes, and on the mountain-tops were seen the signal-fires announcing their approach to witness the affair of honor. When the tribes had assembled, a mutual explanation ensued betwixt the parties, and the evening dance and supper of game peacefully terminated the business of the day. The course usually pursued when matters take a hostile form is this: the offending party is the first to stoop and offer his head for his antagonist to strike with his weapon; and, if not disabled or killed by the blow, he rises from his bending posture, shaking the streaming blood from his bushy hair, and then his opponent fairly and honorably bends forward his head, and presents it in return to receive his blow; and so this reciprocally continues until the assembled parties and the combatants themselves are satisfied. But should either strike dishonorably on the temple, thus showing an intention to kill, or in any other way than on the fairly offered cranium of his antagonist, a shower of well-directed spears would instantly be sent against the cowardly assailant, who should dare to be guilty of such a breach of the laws of honor. M'Gill informed me that formerly it was a custom amongst certain of the northern tribes that, when the first blow actually killed the person, the spectators would roast and eat the body of him who so nobly fell in the cause of honor, if he were a young man in good condition of body; as a matter of taste, M'Gill expressed himself dissatisfied with the custom, and stated that he thought it had fallen into desuetude, as it tended to no good purpose but to check the spirit of duelling.

Picturesque or alarming as in many instances these scenes were, all have for ever passed away, and the once numerous actors, who used to cause the woods to echo with their din, now lie mingled with the dust, save some few solitary beings who here and there still stalk abroad, soon, like their ancestors, to become as "a tale that is told."

THE KEY :

BEING

AN ANALYSIS OF THE PARTICLES USED AS AFFIXES.

At the time when my "Australian Grammar" was published in Sydney, in the year 1834, circumstances did not allow me a sufficient opportunity to test the accuracy of the supposition that every sound forms a root, and, consequently, that every character which represents those sounds becomes, likewise, a visible root, so that every letter of the alphabet of the language is in reality a root, conveying an abstract idea of certain prominent powers which are essential to it.*

My present object is, therefore, to demonstrate the correctness of this supposition by explanation and illustration, and to place on record, along with the first attempt to form the aboriginal tongue into a written language, my last remarks on the speech of tribes, which, in this portion of Australia, will soon become extinct! Death has triumphed over these aborigines; for no rising generation remains to succeed them in their place, save that generation of whom it is written, "God shall enlarge Japheth, and he shall dwell in the tents of Shem."

In attempting to show the natural structure and peculiarities of the language, I hope that the philologist may here find some assistance in his researches, as well as any others who may be endeavouring to acquire a knowledge of barbarous languages, in which there are difficulties unsuspected, because they are not commonly found in the languages of Europe.

I cannot too strongly recommend to those who are endeavouring to attain a knowledge of the language of savage nations, the necessity of dismissing from the mind the trammels of European schools, and simply to follow out the natural rules of languages which have not been sophisticated by art. The almost sovereign contempt with which the aboriginal language of New South Wales has been treated in this colony, and the indifference shown toward the attempts to gain information on the subject, are not highly indicative of the love of science in this part of the globe; for this it is difficult to account, except on the ground of that universal engagement in so many various employments incidental to a new colony, where every individual must be dependent on his own exertions for the necessaries and the comforts of life.

* I hope that, in reprinting "The Key," I shall not be held as supporting this theory.—ED.

In tracing analogies with this aboriginal language, I find that the Indians of North America have a 'transitive conjugation,' which expresses the conjoined idea both of the persons acting and acted upon; 'the form has excited much astonishment and attracted the attention of the learned in different parts of the world.' The aborigines of this colony have a similar form of expression, as is explained fully in my "Australian Grammar";* this I have denominated therein 'active-transitive-reciprocal'; with the dual and the plural number, it constitutes 'the reciprocal modification'; as, bún-kil-lán bali, 'thou and I strike one another' reciprocally, or 'we-two fight'; which phrase would be thus analysed:—bún, the root, 'to strike'; -kil, the sign of the infinitive, 'to be, to exist'; -lán denotes the present time and that the action is reciprocal; bali is the dual pronoun 'we-two.' 'I fight with him' would be expressed by bún-kil-lán bali-noa, in which the noa means 'he'; v. page 17; but to say 'he and I fight another' would be bún-tan bali-noa.

The Cherokees use no distinct word for the articles a and the; but, when required, they use a word equivalent to the numeral one, and the demonstrative pronouns this and that, agreeably to the original use and nature of the words which we call articles; so likewise the aborigines of this colony; they too use wakál for a, and for the the pronoun demonstrative both of thing and of place; as, unni, 'this here'; unnuǵ, 'that there.' The Delaware dialect, according to Mr. Du Ponceau's notes in Elliot's Grammar, possesses an article wo or m', which is used for a and the, but not frequently, because these words are sufficiently understood without it. The Tahitians possess a definite article te, used for our the; but they express a by tehoe, 'one.' The American Indians have, in common with the Tahitians, an extra plural denoting we, including the party addressed. But this peculiarity the aborigines of New South Wales have not in their language, though they have, in common with the American Indians and the Tahitians, a dual of that kind; beside which, they have an extra dual denoting the object and the agent conjoined.

The Use of the Personal Pronouns.

The following are examples of the way in which these pronouns are used in our aboriginal dialect:—

Examples:—1. Pítál balinoá kakillán, 'we-two love one another'; lit., 'he and I are joyful (i.e., live peaceably) with one another.' 2. Búnnún binuǵ, 'thou wilt beat him'; búnnún binoun, 'thou wilt beat her'; búnnún banuǵ, 'I shall beat thee.'

* See pages 23 and 32 of this volume.—Ed.

Analysis.—1. Pitál* is ‘joy, peace, delight’; bali is the dual pronoun, ‘we two’; kakillán, which is the verb ‘to be’ in state of continuation, consists of three parts—ka, the root of the verb ‘to be, to exist’; -ki, the sign of the infinitive, -lán, the sign of continuation at the present time.

The negative form of this example would be keawaran bal’pitál korien, ‘we do not love one another,’ or ‘we do not agree the one with the other.’ Here keawaran is the denial in the present tense, from keawai, the negative infinitive; the imperative negative is kora; as, pitál bán kora, ‘do not be peaceable’, where bán is the present tense of the verb ‘to be doing’; the last word, korien, in the aboriginal sentence, is the negative adverb ‘not’; thus, in this sentence there are two negatives, both of which are essential to express the negation.

2. The aboriginal phrase búnnúnbanuġ, ‘I shall smite thee,’ shows at once the similarity of construction of this Australian language with that of the Indians of America; for, though I may write it separately, as búnnún banuġ, because I know the words to be the verb and the conjoined dual pronoun, yet it is pronounced as one word, and would be so considered by a stranger. If ‘determination’ is to be expressed, the particle wal must be inserted; as, búnnún wal banuġ, ‘I shall and will smite thee’; this would be thus analysed:—bún, the root of the verb ‘to smite’; -nún, the particle denoting futurity; wal denotes determination; ba, is part of the verbal pronoun baġ, ‘I’, while the personal pronoun is ġatoa, ‘I’; bi is the verbal pronoun ‘thou’; -nuġ is the pronoun ‘him’ in the objective case; and the termination -noun in the next example is part of bounnoun, the feminine pronoun ‘her,’ in the objective case. Thus, our blacks carry out the dual beyond any known language in the world, whether ancient or modern; and they also complete their dual by carrying it out to the feminine in the conjoined dual case, which the American Indians do not in the “second personal form.”

Nuġ is pronounced núġ when applied to a person, but nuġ when applied to a thing. So likewise, bún, ‘to smite,’ is accented, and is pronounced like the English word boon, ‘a gift’; but bún, ‘to permit to be,’ is unaccented, and rhymes with the English word bun, ‘a little cake.’

Our blacks say waita bali for ‘I go with thee,’ or ‘we two go now together’; but waita baġ would mean ‘I go by myself’; waita bali noa, ‘he and I go together’; waita bali bountoa, ‘she and I go together’; to say ‘I go,’ emphatically, meaning no other but myself, would be ġatoa waita uwanún; which would be construed thus:—ġatoa is the personal pronoun ‘I’; waita is 'to go or depart'; uwánùn is the future tense of the verb of motion, 'to come' or 'to go,' according as the word waita, 'to go,' or tanan, 'to come,' is attached to it. The Tahitians have a similarity of form in the expression haere, 'to come' or 'to go,' according as the particle mai or atu is attached; thus, haere mai, 'come,' haere atu, 'go.'

Mr. Elliot, in his Grammar, shows that the Massachusetts dialect has numerous conjugations of its verbs; and Mr. Reisberger has divided the Delaware language into eight conjugations of verbs. In my Grammar, also, I have traced out eight modifications of the Australian verb as spoken at Lake Macquarie; and its tenses are not confined simply to the past, present, and future, but have various modifications of each time; for instance, they have a present with the termination -án for the verb, and -lin for the participle; as, wiy-án baġ, 'I speak' now; wiyel-lin, 'speaking' now; a definite past tense has the particle -kéún; as, wiya-kéún, 'have spoken' this morning; wiy-elli-kéún, 'have been speaking' this morning; and an indefinite past is wiya, 'told or spoke', and wiyelli-ela, 'spake,' both terminating in a. There are three varieties of the future; as, wiyelli kolaġ, 'to be about to speak'; where wiyelli is the bare form of the infinitive wiyelliko, 'to speak,' and kolaġ is 'towards'; then there is also a definite future; as, wiya-kin, 'shall or will speak' to-morrow morning; and besides, an indefinite future, wiyánùn, 'shall or will speak' some time or other. These peculiar tenses are not noticed in the Indian Grammars, and, therefore, it is presumed that they are peculiar to the languages of the aborigines of this land.

The South Sea Islanders make no change in the endings of the verb; neither do the aborigines of Australia; for each tense-form of the verb may be made available to any person, according to the pronoun substituted. The change of person is seen only in the English translation, and not in the Australian word; thus, from wiyelliko, 'to speak,' 'to communicate by speech or sound'—applied to the speech of man, the crowing of a cock, or the striking of a clock—come wiyán baġ, 'I speak'; wiyán bi, 'thou speakest'; wiyán noa, 'he speaks'; wiyán bountoa, 'she speaks'; wiyán ġali, 'this speaks'; wiyán ġéen, 'we speak'; wiyán banuġ, 'I speak to thee'; wiyán bali bulun, 'we two speak to you two'; wiyellin baġ, 'I am speaking'; wiyellin banuġ, 'I am speaking to thee'; wiyellán baġ, 'I speak and continue to speak,' 'I tell'; wiyellán banuġ, 'I tell thee'; wiyellán bali, 'we two tell one another,' 'we converse'; wiyellilin baġ, 'I am speaking and continue to speak,' 'I am talking'; wiyán ġali-ko clock-ko, 'the clock strikes.' Muk-kā-kā tibbin-to wiyán, 'the cock crows'; here muk-kāká is the nearest sound to express the cackling of fowls; literally the sentence is, 'the bird says muk-kāká.'

The affixes used in the language of the aborigines of this colony show the nature of the verb, whether causative, declarative, or active; whether personal, instrumental, self-active, or locomotive; and whether negative, affirmative, privative, apparent, or actual. It is only by a strict attention to the root-meaning of the affixes, that they can be properly applied to express the modified uses of the principal word to which they are joined, whether that principal be a verb, a proper name of a person or place, or a common substantive.

*Illustrative Sentences, to show the force of the variations of the consonants in the suffix-forms of the verb.

SUFFIXES.

1. -b-illi-ko; m., for the purpose of—the root-meaning of the verb.

Examples:—1. Gatun tunbilliela noa barun talokan, and he divided unto them the property.' 2. Túgun-billia nura, 'show yourselves.' 3. Kafirró wirri ban-billin, 'I am perishing with hunger.'

Analysis:—1. Gatun, 'and'; tun, the root of the verb 'to apportion, divide, separate, count'; -billiela, the past participle of billiko; noa, 'he,' the verbal-nominative form of the pronoun; barun, 'them'; talokan, 'property, goods.'

2. Túgun, as a verb, 'to show'; as a noun, 'a mark for a sign,' 'a chop on a tree to show the road.'

3. Kafirri, 'hunger'; the o makes the word an instrumental case; wirri is the root of the verb wirrilliko, 'for motion to act,' as an instrument; ban, 'doing, acting'; -billin is the form of the present participle of that verb.

2. -b-ulli-ko; m., to be doing effectively what the verb implies.

Ex.:—Minnug ballin bi? 'what object art thou effecting? what are you doing? what are you about?' Tetti ballin bag, 'I am dying.'

* I have here omitted twelve pages of "The Key"; in them our author sets forth his theory that the vowels and consonants of the suffix-forms of verbs and pronouns have each of them a determinate and essential meaning; a portion of this theory appears in the headings of the twenty sections of "Illustrative Sentences" which now follow. These Illustrative Sentences I print for the sake of the examples of analysis which they contain; and yet I do not think that that analysis is in every instance correct.—ED.

-p-ulli-ko; m., to be doing what the verb implies, without the idea of effect.

Ex.:—Up-ullin bağ yirriğko wiyelliko, 'I am writing'; lit., 'I am using the quill for-to * communicate, speak, say.'

Anal.:—Yirriğ, 'a quill'; yirriğko, 'the quill as an agent'; um-ullin bağ yirriğko pen kakilliko, 'I am making a pen'; lit., 'I am causing the quill to become a pen.'

3. -k-illi-ko; m., to become, to come to be in some state.

Ex.:—1. Tetti kakulla noa, wonto ba yakita moron noa katéa kan, 'he was dead, whereas now he is alive again.' 2. Wunál unni kakillin, 'this is summer season,' or 'this is-becoming (now) warm.'

Anal.:—1. Tetti, 'dead, or death'; kakulla, 'was' in that state; noa, the inseparable verbal pronoun 'he'; wonto ba, 'whereas it is'; yakita, 'at this time'; moron, 'alive'; katéa-kan, 'one who exists again'; tetti kaba noa, 'he is actually dead'; lit., 'he (died and so he) is in a state of death.'

2. Wunál means 'warm'; the aborigines have no word for time in the abstract; unni, 'this'; kakillin, 'a state of being,' the present participle form of the verb kakilliko, q.v. Wunál unni kakullin, 'the summer is now coming'; lit., 'the warmth is of its own power becoming to be in the present state'; a reduplicate form of the participle kakullin, 'becoming,' is kakullilin, 'becoming and continuing to become'; cf. next paragraph for the difference in meaning between kakillan and kakullin.

4. -k-ulli-ko; m., to bring into being any act done by one's own power.

Ex.:—1. Bouğ-kulléun yuna bo ta Piriwál to, gátun pai-kulléun Thimon-kin, 'the Lord hath risen indeed, and hath appeared unto Simon.' Each of these acts is of the Lord's own power. 2. Punnál ba poloğ-kulli-ğél, is 'the west'. 3. Por-kullitoara means 'that which is born'; lit., 'that which has dropped itself of its own power,' 'that which has fallen of itself.' 4. Poai-kulléun ba, 'as soon as it sprung up.' 5. Pai-kullinün bara ba, 'when they will shoot forth.'

Anal.:—2. Punnál, 'the sun'; ba, 'is being', a verbal particle; poloğ, 'to sink'; -kulli, 'of his own power'; -ğél, 'the place of the action.' This phrase then means 'the place of the sun's sinking of his own power.'

4. Poai, 'to shoot up, to grow up, to spring up as grass'; -kulléun, 'has... of its own power'; ba, equivalent to 'when.'

5. Pai, 'appear'; -kullinün, 'will of their own power'; bara, 'they'; ba, equivalent to 'when.'

* Occasionally I still allow this phrase to stand.—See note, page 24.—ED.

5. -l-iko; m., for the purpose of initiating the action of the verb.

Ex.—Tetti kolağ bağ, 'I am about to die'; waita kolağ bağ, 'I am about to depart'; piriwál kolağ noa, 'he is about to be king'; worowai kolağ bara, 'they are about to fight'; tanan bağ wiyelliko, 'I come to speak,' 'I am come for the purpose of speaking'; tanan bağ wiya-uwil koa bannú, 'I am come in order to speak to thee,' 'I am come that I may speak to thee'; wiya-uwil koa banú, 'I wish to speak to thee'; ġurrulli ta, 'it is the act of hearing'; ġurrulliko, 'for the purpose of the act of hearing'; 'to hear, to hearken.'

6. -m-illi-ko; m., for the purpose of the initiation of the act of causation.

Ex.—Kai, umillia tia, 'come and help me'; lit., 'come exercise causative power on me'; umillia bi tia, 'help thou me, assist me'; i.e., 'cause the exercise of power to me.'

7. -m-ulli-ko; m., for causation and effective power.

Ex.—Tariğ ka-mulliko, 'to mix'; lit., 'for-to cause to be across and across'; ġurra-mulla bon, 'cause him to hear or know'; ka-mullala noa yantin-biruğ umulli-biruğ, 'he rested from all the work'; lit., 'he caused himself to be from all, from the act of causation and effective power.'

Uma noa yantin tara, 'he made all things'; umán bağ unni, 'I make this'; nu-mulliko, 'to make a personal effort, to try, to attempt'; pirral-mulla bon, 'urge him, constrain him'; lit., 'be hard at him'; pirral umulla bon, 'make him hard, cause him to be hard'; pirral-mullin bon, 'strengthening him'; na-múnbilliko tia umulla, 'cause me to be permitted to see'; kámúnbilla bin nakilliko, 'let it be permitted to cause thee to see'; equivalent to, 'receive thy sight.'

8. -n; m., present time.

Ex.—Unni, 'this' present; unnoa, 'that' present; untoa, 'that other' present; unnuğ, 'that,' as an object, present there; unti, 'this present place' here; unta, 'that place' spoken of; pitál kánun bi, 'thou wilt be joyful'; pitál banun bi, 'thou wilt rejoice.'

9. -g-ulli-ko; m., for one to act with effective power.

Ex.—Buğ-buğ-gulla, 'kiss,' that is, 'effect a kiss'; buğ-buğ-kámúnbilla bon, 'let him kiss'; buğ-buğ ġatoa, 'it is I who kiss'; buğ-buğ-gan bağ, 'I kiss'; buğ-buğ-gatoara, 'that which is kissed'; tetti buğ-gulliko, 'to effect death by personal power'; 'to kill'; tetti buğ-ga bon, 'he is killed'; lit., 'some person hath killed him'; tetti buğ-ga bon bağ, 'I have killed him.'

10. -p-illi-ko; m., to act, excluding the idea of causation.

Ex.—Up-illiko, 'to exercise personal power,' without causation; up-ai-ğa, 'to exercise personal power,' without completion; pai-pilliko, 'to seem,' 'to appear'; pai-pilliko maraito, 'for the spirit to appear'; pai-péa noa Eliath, 'Elias he appeared'; pai-péa bon ağelo, 'an angel appeared to him.'

11. -p-ulli-ko; m., to exercise power, but excluding the idea of effect.

Ex.—1. Up-ulliko, 'to exercise personal power,' exclusive of effect; upán bağ unni, 'I do this'; upán bağ ğali-ko, 'I use this'; upullin bağ ğali-ko broom-ko, 'I am sweeping with the broom'; lit., 'I am exercising personal power with the broom,' exclusive of effect; in ğali-ko broom-ko upullin murrârâğ, 'the broom is sweeping well,' the broom is the instrumental agent; upullin bağ ğatoa-bo kipai-to, 'I am anointing myself with ointment'; lit., 'I am doing myself with grease,' or 'I am greasing myself.' 2. Upulla binoun kopurró konéin kakilliko, 'paint her with red to be pretty.' 3. Konéin ta upatoara bountoa, 'she is prettily done'; lit., 'she is pretty that which is done.' 4. Kabo-kabo ğalitin upatoarin kopurrin, 'stay, stay, on account of the painting red.'

Anal.:—2. Upulla, the imperative, 'do'; binoun, the conjoined dual pronoun, 'thou-her'; kopurró, 'red,' with the instrumental sign o affixed; konéin, 'pretty'; kakilliko, the verb 'to be,' 'for the purpose of being.' The sentence then means, 'do thou her with red, that she may be pretty.'

3. Konéin ta, 'it is pretty'; upatoara is a compound of the verb, and means 'that which is done'; bountoa, the emphatic personal pronoun, 'she it is who,' 'she who' is emphatically so.

4. Kabo-kabo, equivalent to 'stay'; ğali-tin and the two words following it are all in the ablative case and mean, 'on account of this, on account of the doing, on account of the red.'

12. -r; m., negation.

Ex.—Murrârâğ ta unni, 'this is good'; keawai, murrârâğ korien, 'no, it is not good'; kipai ta unni, 'this is actually fat'; tararan, 'it is not'; this is used as the negation of a thing, but not of a quality. Keawaran bağ murrârâğ korien, 'I am not comfortable.'

Anal.:—Keawaran, the present tense of the verb 'to be,' in the state of negation; bağ, the verbal pronoun 'I'; murrârâğ 'good'; korien, the aorist of negation of the verb 'to be not.' The sentence thus means, 'I am not in a state of being good.' The two negatives here are essential and govern one another; they do not destroy each other, as in English; this arises from the very nature of the language, which can express actuality, negation of actuality, and negation absolutely;

hence the variety of the forms of verbs 'to be'; for instance, natán bağ means 'I see'; na korien bağ, 'I see not'; nakulla bağ, 'I saw'; na pa korien bağ, 'I saw not.' This last cannot be written nakulla korien bağ, 'I saw not,' because the -kulla would affirm that the agent actually of his own power did whatsoever the root affirms; and the root-form na implies that the thing is actually seen, while the -kulla added makes the meaning to be that it presents itself before you, and you must see it, unless you are blind or do not exercise the faculty of sight; hence the privative affix, pa, must be used instead, to show that, although the object spoken of was there, I could not see it, because it was not presented to my sight.

Ex.—Yanoa, na-mai-ğa yikora. This is a peculiar but common phraseology throughout all verbs, and is hardly translatable into English; the nearest phrase would be 'do not be seeing and yet perceive not,' or 'do not in your manner be looking without causing yourself to exercise your faculty of sight.' In this there is an affirmation of the abstract action performed by the agent, but a suspension of effect; the whole is something similar to the phrase 'you look but you will not see', that is, 'you are determined not to see.' But, on the other hand, yanoa, naki yikora means 'do not look'; yanoa, nakilli-ban yikora, 'do not thou be looking'; and yari bi nanün, 'thou must not look'; -nün is the sign of the future tense, for prohibition requires the future.

Gan ke unnoa kùri? 'who is that man?' to this, ğannug? is the answer, if you do not know the person; lit., 'whom?' a question in reply. To express 'I do not know,' would be ğurra korien bağ; but this would really mean 'I do not know what is said,' or 'I do not perceive by the ear what is spoken.' To know personally anyone is ğimilli; thus, ğimilli bon bağ, 'I know him personally'; keawaran bağ nurun ğimilli korien, 'I personally know you not.' To deny that you have the knowledge of a person whom you really do know is expressed by the peculiar form ğan? 'who?' thus ğan-bulliko means 'to be who-ing' interrogatively, that is, asking who the person is when he is already known, with the intention of denying a knowledge of the person. Wonto ba niuwoa ğan-bullinün tia emmouğ mikan-ta kùri-ka, ğan-bullinün wal bon mikan-ta ağelo-ka Eloï-koba-ka; 'whereas he who will be 'who-ing' of me in the presence of men, certainly I will be 'who-ing' of him in the presence of angels belonging to Eloï,' i.e., God; this is an aboriginal translation of the words "But he that denieth me before men, shall be denied before the angels of God." Emmouğ means 'concerning me,' whilst tia means 'me,' the object; the passive form of the English verb is always expressed by the active form of the Australian.

13. -r-illi-ko; m., for instrumentality to be in some act.

Ex.—Gatun wélkorinùn wal bara bon, gátun tetti wal bon wirrinùn, ‘and they shall scourge him and put him to death.’

Anal.—Gatun, ‘and’; wélkorinùn, ‘will instrumentally wale’ him. The wél is from the English word wale, ‘a mark in the flesh’; -ko is the usual affix of agency; -ri-nùn is the future tense of instrumental action; wal is the certainty thereof; bara, ‘they’; bon, ‘him’; tetti, ‘death’; wirrinùn, the future tense of instrumental violence; cf. wirrin wibbi-ko, the ‘wind moves,’ sc., it.

14. -r-ulli-ko; m., for instrumentality to act of itself.

Ex.—1. Turullin tia topig-ko, ‘the mosquito is stinging, piercing me’; tura bon warai-to, ‘the spear speared, pierced, him’; turánùn banug lancet-o, ‘I will pierce thee with the lancet’; turánùn, ‘will pierce’; banug, conjoined dual case, ‘I-thee’; lancet-o, the English word ‘lancet’ with o the affix of agency. 2. Niuwoa ba gurréug-kan gurrulliko, gurrabúnbilla bon, ‘he who hath ears to hear, let him hear.’ Here the ear is the instrument that perceives of its own power.

Anal.—2. Niuwoa, the emphatic personal pronoun, ‘he’; ba, a particle; gurréug, ‘the ear’; -kan, a personal particle; gurréugkan therefore means ‘a person who is eared, who has ears’; gurrabúnbilla, the imperative, ‘permit to hear’; bon, ‘him’; gurrulliko, ‘to hear’.

15. -t-illi-ko; m., for the thing to act, as a verbal noun.

Ex.—Poai-búntinùn koiwon to, ‘the rain will cause it to grow’.

Anal.—Poai, the bare form of the verb ‘to grow’; bün, is the active permissive form of the verb ‘to suffer or permit the act,’ ‘to let actively’; -tinùn, the future-tense form of the verb; koiwon, ‘rain’; -to, an affix, to show that the word to which it is affixed is the agent that purposes to act. In the sentence koiwon-to ba tin, ‘it rains,’ the ba is the aorist of the verb ‘to be doing’ some act; tin, is the present tense of tilliko, and when used as a preposition means ‘from, on account of it’; e.g., tetti-tin, ‘on account of death’; gali-tin, ‘on account of this’; but ‘from, i.e., out of,’ is birug; as, Thydney-birug, ‘from Sydney’; London-birug, ‘from London’.

16. -t-elli-ko; m., to indicate itself, as a verbal noun.

Ex.—1. Yantin bara piriwál búntelliko, ‘for all who exalt themselves.’ 2. Moron ta katéa-kánùn tetti kabirug, ‘the resurrection from the dead.’

Anal.—1. Yantin, ‘all’; bara, ‘they’; piriwál, ‘chief’; bün, ‘to permit’ actively; telliko, ‘for it to be’ as indicated. Moron,

'life'; ta, 'it is'; ka, 'is'; -téa, the past tense of telliko, 'it actually was' as indicated; ká-nún, 'will be' in the state mentioned; tetti, 'death'; ka, 'is'; birug, 'from, out of.' The sentence thus means 'the future becoming alive again from the dead'; cf. yanoa, tetti katéa kún, 'let be, lest it become dead'; yanoa, tetti burréa kún, 'let be, lest it die.' Yanoa is prohibitory of the manner of being.

17. -w-illi-ko; m., to be in motion to; to tend towards; to incline towards.

Ex.:—U wil koa bağ, 'I wish to move, I tend towards, I incline towards'; ta-uwil koa bağ, 'I wish to eat'; ta is from ta-killiko, 'for-to eat'; waita wa-uwil koa bağ, 'I now wish to depart'; 'I intend to depart'; tanan bi wolla waita, koa bağ uwa-uwil, 'I wish to go'; lit., 'approach thou or come, in order that I may depart'; wiya-uwil koa bon bağ, 'I wish to tell him'; wiya is from wiyelliko, 'to speak, to utter a sound,' &c.

18. -wir-rilli-ko; m., to act with instrumental motion; as, to knock with anything; to whip or flog with anything; to smite with the fist; to stir with a stick; to do any act of motion by any instrumental means.

Ex.:—Wirrilléün bara wapara, 'they smote their breasts'; wirrilliánún wirrillikanné-to, 'will sweep with the sweeper', 'will swab with a swab'; lit., 'will knock away with that which knocks away'; because, when the blacks sweep, they knock the ground with boughs, and so remove the rubbish.

19. -w-olli-ko; m., to act and move of purpose.

Ex.:—U wolliko, 'to come, to go, to move away'; lit., 'to be in a state of motion and action,' with power of purpose to effect change of place; waita wá-nún bağ England kolağ, 'I will depart and will go to England'; tanan noa uwollin England kabirug, 'he approaches coming from England'; 'he is coming from England'; uwéa kánún bağ, 'I will come again' (tanan, understood); uwéa kánún bağ, 'I will go again' (waita, understood); yanoa, uwa yikora, 'do not go'; uwolli ban kora, 'do not be moving away,' sc., hither or thither.

20. -y-elli-ko; m., to be in a certain manner of action.

Ex.:—1. Gakoiyelliko, 'to act in a certain manner of personification'; 'to feign to be another person'; gakoiyellikan, 'one who feigns to be another'; 'a spy, a deceiver'; wonta noa ba gurra gakoiya barunba, 'but he perceived their craftiness'; lit., 'whereas he knew their deception,' their feigning to be just men; yanti bi wiyella, 'thou shalt say thus', in this manner; yanti bağ wiya, 'I said so'; yakoai bin wiyan, 'how, i.e., in what manner, is it told to thee?' giakai bağ wiya bon yanti, 'this is that which I actually told him'; lit., 'thus I told him thus'; mupai kaiyelliko, 'to be silent'; lit., 'for-to be in manner dumb'; 'to be really dumb' would be mupai-kan, 'one who is dumb.'

Ex.:—2. Kaiyelléün clock-ko wiyelli-biruğ, 'the clock has ceased to strike'; lit., 'the clock has' been and continues in the state and manner of being now 'ceased' from a certain manner of motion, i.e., 'from talking'; wiyelli-kan, 'one who speaks'; wiyai-yé, 'a talker,' one in the habit of talking, one whose manner is to continue to speak; wiyelliko, 'to utter a sound'; 'to speak'; wiya-bünbilliko, 'to permit to speak'; wiyai-yelliko, 'to say on, to reply, to answer'; wiya-yimulliko, 'to make accusation, to accuse'; wiya-pai-yelliko, 'to demand'; wiyella bon, 'speak to him'; wiyellin noa, 'he is talking'; wiyellán bali, 'we two are conversing'; wiyán bağ, 'I speak'; wiyán clock-ko, 'the clock strikes'; wiya, 'say'; this is used to ask a person if he will be or do; e.g., wiya, bali wiyellinün? 'say, shall we two converse?'

The Formation of Words.

Yarr is a word which the aborigines now use in imitation of the sound made by a saw in sawing; with the verbal formative-affix -bulliko, it becomes yarr-bulliko, 'to be in the act of causing by its own act the sound of yarr'; or, in English, 'to saw.' Yağ is another introduced word, formed from the imitation of the sound of the sharpening of a saw.

From these roots come the following derivatives:—Yarr-bulliko, 'to saw'; yarr-bulli kolağ, 'to be about to saw'; yarr-bulli korien, 'not to saw'; yarr-bulli yikora, 'saw not'; yarr-bulli ban kora, 'be not sawing'; yarr-bulli-kan, 'one who does sawing'; 'a sawyer'; yarr-bulli-kanné, 'that which saws'; 'a saw'; yarr-bulli-ğél, 'the sawing-place'; 'a saw-pit'; yarr-ba-toara, 'that which is sawn'; 'a plank'; yarr-ba-uwa, 'saw' (optative), 'dosaw'; yarr-bulla, 'saw (mandatory), 'do saw'; yarr-bulli-buğ-gulla, 'compel to saw'; yarr-bulli-buğ-gulliko, 'to compel to saw'; this last form may undergo all the changes given above for yarr-bulliko; and so of every verb in the infinitive form.

Yağ-ko-bulliko, 'to sharpen a saw'; yağ-ko-bulli-ta, 'the sharpening of the saw'; yağ-ko-bulli-kan, 'one who sharpens the saw'; yağ-ko-bulli-kanné, 'that which sharpens the saw'; 'a file'; and so on.

[The common root-words of the language also give forth verbal derivatives in a similar way. If we take the verb 'to strike' as an example, the formatives and their meanings may be arranged thus, a verbal suffix always intervening between the root and the formative :—

	Root + Suff. + Formative.			Meaning.
1.	”	”	yé	a continual striker.
2.	”	”	to-ara	the person or thing that is struck.
3.	”	”	kán	the person who strikes.
4.	”	”	kan-né	the thing which strikes.
5.	”	”	to	the action, as an agent.
6.	”	”	ta	the action, as a subject.
7.	”	”	gél	the place where the action is done.

Root.—Bún, 'strike.'

1. Bún-ki-yé, 'a fighting man.'
2. Bún-to-ara, 'a wounded man.'
3. Bún-killi-kán, 'a striker.'
4. Bún-killi-kan-né, 'a cudgel.'
5. Bún-killi-to, 'the stroke.'
6. Bún-killi-ta, 'the striking.'
7. Bún-killi-gél, 'a pugilistic ring.'

Root.—Um-a, 'make.'

1. Um-ai-yé, 'a tradesman.'
2. Um-ulli-to-ara, 'anything made.'
3. Um-ulli-kán, 'a worker.'
4. Um-ulli-kan-né, 'a tool.'
5. Um-ulli-to, 'the work.'
6. Um-ulli-ta, 'the working.'
7. Um-ulli-gél, 'a workshop.'

Root.—Up-a, 'do, use in action.'

1. Up-ai-yé, 'a cobbler, a mason,' &c.
2. Up-ulli-to-ara, 'a piece of work.'
3. Up-ulli-kán, 'a worker.'
4. Up-ulli-kan-né, 'a spade, an awl.'
5. Up-ulli-to, 'the operation.'
6. Up-ulli-ta, 'the operating.'
7. Up-ulli-gél, 'a operating-room.'

The difference in the use of the fifth and sixth forms may be illustrated by such sentences in English, as,—The stroke killed him; the striking of the iron heats it; the work was done, but the working of the machine went on; the operation did no harm, for the operating was in skilful hands.]

Analysis of the name Biraban.

1. Declension of 'Biraban,' as a common noun.

The word is formed from bira, the cry of the bird which we call the 'eagle-hawk.' The -ban postfixed denotes the one who does the action. As applied to M'Gill, the name may have been given to him from some circumstance in his infancy, perhaps his infantile cry.*

- Nom.* 1. Konéin ta biraban ta, 'the hawk is pretty.'
 2. Biraban to wiyan, 'the hawk cries,' lit., speaks.
- Gen.* Yarro unni biraban koba, 'this egg is the hawk's.'
- Dat.* 1. Unni ta biraban ko takilliko, 'this is for the hawk to eat.'
 2. Waita bağ biraban tako, 'I depart to the hawk,' i.e., to where the hawk is.
- Acc.* Tura bon biraban unnuğ, 'spear him, the hawk there.'
- Voc.* Ala or ela biraban! 'O hawk!'
- Abl.* 1. Minariğ tin tetti noa? biraban tin; 'from what cause is he dead?' 'from the hawk,' as a cause.
 2. Tul-bulléün noa tibbin biraban ka tabirug, 'he, the bird, hath escaped from the hawk.'
 3. Buloara bula biraban toa, 'the two are in company with the hawk.'
 4. Tibbin ta biraban taba, 'the bird is with the hawk.'
 5. Wonnug ke noa katan? biraban kinba, 'where does he exist?' 'at the hawk's place.'
- Minariğ unnoa tibbin? 'what is that bird?' tibbin ta unnoa bukka-kan, 'it is a savage bird that.'
- Yakoai unnoa ta yitara wiyá? 'how is that such-a-one spoken?' equivalent to 'what is its name?' giakai unnoa yitara biraban wiyá, 'this way, that such-a-one is spoken or called biraban.'
- Minariğ tin yitara biraban wiyá? 'from-what-cause is such-a-one spoken or called biraban?' gali tin wiyelli tin bira-bira tin, 'from this, from speaking, from bira-bira'; i.e., because he says 'bira.'

2. Declension of 'Biraban,' as a proper name.

- Nom.* 1. Gan ke bi? gatoa Biraban, 'who art thou?' 'it is I, Biraban'; yakoai bi yitara wiyá? giakai bağ yitara Biraban, 'in what manner art thou such-a-one spoken?' 'thus am I such-a-one, Biraban,' sc., called.

* 'Eagle-hawk' may have been his totem or family name; or, as our blackfellows name their children from some trivial incident at the time of birth, he may have been called Biraban, because an 'eagle-hawk' was seen or heard then.—Ed.

2. Ganto bon tura? Biraban to bon tura, 'who did spear him'? 'Biraban speared him.'
- Gen.* Gan-úmba unni wonnai? Biraban-úmba unni wonnai, 'whose child is this?' 'Biraban's, this child.'
- Dat.* 1. Gannug unni? Birabannug, 'for whom this?' (i.e., who is to have this?) 'for Biraban' to have personally or to use.
2. Kurrilla unni Biraban kinko, 'carry this to Biraban,' locally.
- Acc.* Gannug tura? Birabannug, 'whom speared?' (meaning, who is speared?) 'Biraban.'
- Voc.* Ala Biraban gurrulla! 'O Biraban, hearken.'
- Abl.* 1. Gan kai kaokillai bara? Biraban kai, 'concerning whom are they quarrelling?' 'about Biraban.'
2. Wonta birug bi? Biraban kabirug, 'whence dost thou come?' 'from Biraban.'
3. Gan katoa bountoa? Biraban katoa, 'with whom is she?' 'with Biraban'; that is, in company with him.
4. Gan kinba? Biraban kinba, 'with whom is she?' 'with Biraban'; that is, living with him.
- Wontakál noa Biraban? Mulubinbakál, 'of what place is he, Biraban?' 'Of Newcastle.*'
- Wontakálin bountoa Patty? Mulubinbakálin, 'of what place is she, Patty?' 'Of Newcastle.'

† As the suffix-forms of the nouns, verbs, and other parts of speech have been fully shown in the previous part of this volume by the use of hyphens, I do not think it so necessary now to continue that aid. All postpositions will now be detached from their nouns and pronouns, and every compound postposition will be printed as one word. Those suffix particles which are used as enclitics, and the inseparable case-endings, will be attached to their words. The tense-forms of the verbs will be printed as shown on pages 28 to 41, but without the use of the hyphens. In the Analysis of the selections which now follow, the hyphens are sometimes retained to show the composition of the words.—Ed.

The preceding eight Wintas or 'Portions,' are taken from an "Australian Spelling Book, in the Language spoken by the Aborigines," published by the author in 1826. In the following translation, the Section figures are those of the paragraphs in the Wintas, and the words, as they become translated and explained, are not again referred to.

Analysis of the foregoing Wintas.

WINTA 1.—PART 1.

Section 1.

Winta, 'a part, a portion.'

Eloi, 'God,' a word taken from Elohim, is introduced into the language of the aborigines, because Koin, the name of the being whom they dread, is a word of an equivocal character.*

Yantin, 'all, every,' is singular or plural, according to the number of the noun or pronoun used with it.

Kokera, 'a covert, shelter, habitation, hut, house, palace, temple.'

Wittima, 'built'; hence wittimulliko, 'to build' in any way; to prepare a place for habitation by removing obstacles; to put up a shelter of bushes or bark.

* See page 47.—ED.

Tarai, 'some one, another, other', is singular; but tara, 'others,' is plural.

Taraito is tarai, with the particle of agency postfixed.

Kûri, 'man, men,' according to the singular or plural idea expressed or understood in the context.

Kûriko is kûri, with the particle of agency postfixed.

Wonto ba, 'whereas,' a compound phrase; from won, 'where?' the interrogative adverb of place.

Wonto ba-ba, 'is as'; the ba is a particle which verbalizes the word to which it is affixed.

Noa, the inseparable verbal pronoun, 'he'; the separable emphatic pronoun 'he' is niuwoa.

Eloi ta; for Eloi, see above; ta is the substantive verb, 'it is actually'; this phrase affirms that it is God who is the agent.

Section 2.

Wakâl, 'one'; buloara, 'two'; goro, 'three'; wara, 'four'; beyond which the aborigines have no word to express higher numbers. For 'five' they hold up one hand and say yantin, 'all,' i.e., all the five fingers; or both hands with a part of the fingers up to describe the numbers 6, 7, 8, 9; for 10 they hold all the fingers up and say yantin; or they double both hands and say kauwâl-kauwâl, a 'great many,' and repeat the same as often as required, to give some idea of the greatness of the number.

Section 3.

Pitâl, 'joy, peace, gladness, happiness, love.'

Marai, 'spirit'; not the 'ghost' of a departed person, which is mamuya.

Section 4.

Gearun, 'us'; géen, 'we'; gearunba, 'our,' 'belonging to us'; see pronouns.

Winulli, 'to burn,' to consume by fire only, and not in any other way; hence winulliko, 'to consume,' 'to burn.'

Winullikan means 'one who consumes or burns.' The particle -kan means 'the person who,' and is equivalent to the English particle -er, affixed to verbs to form the substantive person, as lover, consumer. To express the thing, the particle -né is postfixed; as, winullikanné, 'the burning thing which consumes.'

Koiyug, 'fire'; the particle -kan, in the text, is affixed to show that the 'fire' is to be construed with the preceding word, by which it is thus connected and governed.

Section 5.

Unnuğ, 'there.' Bo ta, 'only,' a compound of bo, 'self,' and ta, 'it is'; meaning it is 'that self same thing only' to which it is affixed; as, wakol bo ta, 'one only, one by itself, one alone.'

Section 6.

Keawai is the verb 'to be' in the negative form, with korien, understood; it is equivalent to 'there be not,' a universal denial; wal positively affirms the assertion whether negative or affirmative; keawai wal wakál, 'there be certainly not one.'

Murrarág, 'good, well.'

Section 7.

Gatun, 'and.'

Biyúg-bai, 'father.' The address to a father or elderly person is biyúg; to a brother or equal, bi g-gai.

Gikouǵ, 'him,' the separable emphatic pronoun; the objective pronoun is bon, 'him.'

Gikouǵ kai, 'on account of him, for him.'

Géen, 'we,' v. page 17. There is only this one form in the nominative case plural; ǵearun, 'us,' is the objective case, from which all the oblique cases are formed by the addition of particles; as, ǵearun-ba, 'ours'; ǵearun kai, 'on account of us'; ǵéen-bo is 'we ourselves.'

Gikouǵ-kinba, 'with him'; 'remaining with him.'

Piriwál, 'chief, lord, king.'

Birúg, 'from, out of'; tin, 'from, on account of.'

WINTA 2.—PART 2.

Section 8.

Kaibuǵ, 'light,' as opposed to darkness.

Tokoi, 'darkness, night,' as opposed to day.

Section 9.

Na, 'see'; hence na-killiko, 'to see,' 'to perceive by the eye.'

The negative of this is formed by affixing the negative particle, korien, to the principal verb, divested of the verbal affix -killiko; as, na-korien, 'see not.'

Bon, 'him,' is the verbal pronoun in the objective case; ǵikouǵ is the emphatic form, 'him,' when governed by particles; -nuǵ is the suffixed particle that denotes the object, as, Eloi-nuǵ. Eloi is here the object spoken of, and so is in the objective case along with the pronoun, to show that both are under the same government of the verb na-korien.

Section 10.

Túgun-billéun, 'was manifested, shown'; from túgun-billiko, 'to show as a mark shows'; 'to manifest of itself or of oneself.'

Puttára-kan, 'a flesh-being,' one who is flesh; from puttára, 'flesh.'

Section 11.

Niuwara, 'anger'; cf. bukka, 'wrath, rage, fury.'
 Kátan, 'is,' the present tense of kakilliko, 'to be' in a state.
 Purreáǵ, 'day.'
 Yarakai, 'evil, bad'; opposed to murráráǵ, 'good.'
 Yarakai kinko, 'on account of the wicked.'

Section 12.

Kauwál, 'great'; kauwál-kauwál, 'very great.' The comparison is drawn always by what the one is and the other is not; hence, kauwál kan noa, 'he is great'; Eloi ta, 'God is'; waréa ta ġearunba bulbul, 'little it is our hearts.'
 Waréa, 'little,' in size.
 Bulbul, 'heart' of animals and man; not 'heart' of oak or the like.
 Gurran, 'knows'; the present tense of ġurrulliko, 'to know, to perceive by the ear, to understand,' but not in any other sense; to know a person by sight is ġi-milliko; to know a thing by sight, na-killiko; to know carnally, boi-bulliko; and to know by the touch, nu-mulliko.
 Minnuǵ, as a question, means 'what thing' is the object? The reduplication, with the particle bo affixed, means 'everything itself' as an object.

Section 13.

Kaiyu, 'able, powerful, mighty'; kaiyu-kan, 'one who is able'; noa, 'he'; Eloi ta, 'God is'; yanti-ko, 'for all'; minnuǵ-bo minnuǵ-bo-ko, 'for every thing.'

WINTA 3.—PART 3.

Section 2.

Yantin koba, 'of all'; koba is the genitive particle used with things, while -úmba is used with person; as, ġan-úmba? 'whose'? 'belonging to what person'? minariǵ koba? 'belonging to what thing'? makoro koba, 'belonging to the fish'; emmo-úmba, 'mine', 'belonging to me'; Threlkeld-úmba, 'belonging to Threlkeld.'

Section 4.

Ġurrulla, imperative, 'know, hearken, listen.'
 Nura, the personal plural nominative pronoun, 'ye'; the objective case is nurun, 'you'; nurunba, 'belonging to you.'
 Yanti, 'thus, in this manner.'
 Niuwoa, the emphatic separable personal pronoun, 'he,' 'it is he'; the inseparable verbal pronoun is noa, 'he'; the inseparable verbal pronoun in the objective is bon, 'him', and the separable oblique case is ġikouǵ, 'him'; ġikouǵ ko means 'for him'; ġikouǵ kai, 'on account of him.'

- Gearun, 'us,' the objective case of g'éen, 'we.'
- Uma, 'made,' the aorist of the verb 'to make'; hence umulliko, 'to make, create, do'; 'to cause power, to effect.' In this sentence the use of the two forms of the pronoun, 'he,' is seen; niuwoa ta, 'it is he,' emphatically; noa, he,' verbally; gearun, 'us'; uma, 'made'; the whole means, 'it is he, he us made.'
- Keawai-wal, a universal, absolute denial.
- Géen-bo, 'we ourselves.'
- Umulli-pa, 'made,' excluding reality of effect; this is expressed by the particle, pa, postfixed, along with the negative keawai-wal.
- Giko-umba, 'his,' 'belonging to him.'
- Kùri, 'man,' individually or collectively, or 'people,' according as the pronoun with it is singular, dual, or plural; gáli kùri, 'this man,' as an agent; unni kùri, 'this man,' as a subject; bara kùri, 'they the men,' 'they the people'; buloara kùri, 'the two men.'
- Çipu, an adopted word, from the English, 'sheep.'
- Takilli, the act of 'eating'; hence takilliko, 'to be in the act of eating'; 'to eat.'
- Gél, the inseparable verbal particle denoting place, 'the place of'; takilligél, 'the pasture, the eating-place, the feeding-place'; gikoumba, 'belonging to him,' 'his.'

Section 5.

- Gintoa, the emphatic separable personal nominative pronoun, 'thou,' 'it is thou who'; ta, 'it is.'
- Gintoa ta, 'it is thou who dost, didst, wilt do,' according to the tense of the verb, which in this case is uma, and that, being a past aorist, renders it 'didst make,' without reference to any particular past time.
- Moroko, 'heaven,' the visible Heavens, the sky, the space above our heads.
- Purrai, 'the earth, the land, the ground.'
- Wombul, 'the sea.'
- Yantin gáli koba, 'all belonging to these'; yantin, 'all,' pluralizes the emphatic demonstrative pronoun gáli, 'this'; yantin gáli, 'all these'; yantin gala, 'all those.'

Section 8.

- Guraki, 'skilful, wise.'
- Upin, the present tense of upilliko, 'to exert power,' exclusive of the idea of effect upon the object; as, to put a thing anywhere.
- Tin, 'from, on account of'; 'therefore' as a cause, 'because of'; umulli tin, 'on account of doing'; gearunba tin, 'on account of our.'

WINTA 4.—PART 4.

Section 9.

- Tuloa, 'straight,' opposed to crooked'; 'upright' as to character; 'truth' as to expression, opposed to falsehood; tuloa kan ta, 'one who is straight, upright, true.'
- Moron, 'life,' opposed to death; animal, not vegetable, life.
- Kakilli-kan ta, 'it is one who remains, who is, who exists'; kakilli from kakilliko, 'to be' in some state.
- Kauwâl, 'great'; piriwâl kauwâl, 'lord or king,' lit., 'great chief'; kauwâl-kauwâl, 'great-great,' 'very great.'
- Yanti katai kakilliko, 'thus to be always,' 'to be for ever.'
- Pulul-pulul, 'trembling, shaking.' Kânùn, 'will be.'
- Bukka, 'wrath, rage, fury'; bukka tin, 'on account of wrath'.
gikoumba tin, 'on account of his.'
- Konara, 'a flock, herd, an assembly, a mob, a nation'; yantin bara konara, 'all they, the assemblies or nations.'
- Niu warin, the causative case of niu wara, 'anger'; niu warin, 'because of anger'; 'from or on account of anger,' as a cause.

Section 10.

- Bapai, 'nigh at hand, close to'; bapai ta ba, 'it is nigh to.'

Section 11.

- Wiyân, the present tense of wiyelliko, 'to communicate by sound, to speak, tell, say, call out'; yantinko wiyân bon ba, 'all when they call on him.' The verbalizing particle, ba, is equivalent to 'when,' or 'at the time when' the verbal act or state shall be or was, according to the tense of the verb.
- Kalog, 'afar off, distant.'
- Kakillin, 'continues to be,' 'is now being'; the present participle of the verb kakilliko, 'to be' in some state.
- Barun kai, 'from, on account of them,' sc., persons.
- Yarakai tin, 'from, on account of the evil,' sc., thing.

Section 12.

- Wirrilli; hence wirrilliko, 'to wind up as a ball of string.' The blacks do this to their long fishing-lines, and opossum-fur cords, to take care of them, to preserve them; hence the verb means 'to take care of, to preserve, to keep together, to guide,' as a flock of sheep; wirrilli-kan, 'one who takes care of' by some act of locomotion, as a watchman going his round.
- Mirrâl, 'desert, desolate, miserable'; 'a state of want'; mirrâl ta unni, 'this is a desert place'; mirrâl-lağ unni, 'this is desolate or miserable,' because in a desert there is nothing to eat or drink; mirrâl kâtan, 'is now at present in a miserable or desolate state, in a state of want'; keawai, 'not to be.'
- Keawai wal, 'certainly shall not be'; equivalent therefore to 'shall not'; mirrâl kânùn, 'shall be in want.'

Section 13.

Gurrára-kan, 'one who personally attends to'; ġurráran kan kauwál, 'one who is very pitiful.'

Gurrára-mulli-kan, 'one who causes or exercises attention,' 'one who does attend to'; the phrase means 'he is a merciful Being.'

WINTA 5.—PART 5.

Section 1.

Goro, 'three'; see page 108.

Kakilli, 'state of being'; hence kakilliko, 'to be, to exist' in some state; we cannot express 'is dead' by tetti kátan, because kátan implies existence, though we may say moron kátan, 'is alive,' because existence is implied; 'is dead' must be tetti ka ba, which means 'is in the state of the dead'; generally the blacks say kulwon, 'stiff, rigid' for 'dead'; thus tetti ka ba kulwon is equivalent to 'dead and stiff,' in opposition to 'a swoon,' which might be the meaning, unless circumstances led to another conclusion.

Wokka, an adverb, 'up,' opposed to bara, 'down'; wokka kaba moroko kaba, 'are up in heaven.'

Biyuġbai ta, 'the father it is.'

Wiyelli-kan ta, 'the one who speaks it is'; this is the form of the word when applied to a person; to a thing, it would be wiyellikanné.

Marai ta, 'the spirit it is,' in opposition to corporeal substance; but kurrábáġ is 'the body,' and mamuya is 'a ghost' murrin is another word for 'the body.'

Yirriyirri, 'sacred, reverend, holy'; not to be regarded but with awe, as is the place marked out for mystic rites; a separate place not to be profaned by common use, hence holy; a person reverend, to be held in reverence, sacred. Native heralds and messengers pass as sacred persons; they are held in reverence, and are unmolested by hostile parties, when on embassies of war or peace; yirriyirri-laġ means 'one who acts sacredly,' one who is holy, separate by privilege of being held sacred or in reverence. In the South Sea Islands, a pig devoted to the god Oro, in former times, was made sacred by having a red feather thrust through and fastened to its ear, and thus the reverend pig was privileged to feed anywhere unmolested, as being sacred; nor was he confined to a tithe of the produce if he broke through into any plantation, but was permitted to eat his fill, not, however, without a murmur at the sacred intrusion.

Unni, 'this,' as subject or object; ġali, 'this,' as agent; unni ta ġoro ta, 'this it is, the three it is'; wakál bo ta, 'one it is, one-self only it is.'

Section 2.

Yuka, 'sent'; hence yukulliko, 'to send' a person; but to send property is tiyumbilliko. Yinal, 'son.'

Kakilliko, 'for-to be'; here the infinitive form, as usual, denotes the purpose.

Miromulli-kan means 'one who keeps or takes care of'; from miromulliko, 'to keep with care'; miromullikan noa kakilliko means 'he is for-to-be one who keeps with care,' hence a 'Saviour.' From the same root, miroma also is a 'Saviour.' 'A deliverer' would be mankilli-kan, 'one who takes hold of'; but then the evil must be expressed out of which the person is taken or to be taken.

Yantin purrai ko, 'for all lands'; 'for all the earth'; 'for the whole world.'

Section 3.

Eloi-to noa, 'God he,' as a personal agent; pitál ma kauwál, 'causes great joy,' sc., towards.

Yantin kúri, 'all men.'

Ġukulla ta noa, 'it is he gave'; from ġukilliko, 'to give'; the ta, 'it is,' affirms the act.

Wakál bo ta, 'only one'; lit., 'one-self only.'

Gali ko, 'for this purpose'; ġali, the emphatic pronoun, 'this'; ġala, 'that'; ġaloa, 'the other'; the demonstrative pronouns are unni, 'this'; unnoa, 'that'; untoa, 'the other.'

Yantin-to ba, 'that all who'; the particle, to, denotes agency, and ba verbalizes.

Ġurran, 'believe,' the present tense of ġurrilliko, 'to hear, to believe.'

Ġikouġ kin, 'on account of him,' as a cause; for, if he speaks, you hear; he is therefore the cause of your hearing, and if you assent to that which he says, you continue to hear; if not, you do not hearken to him, or else you only pretend to hear him; the verbal objective pronoun 'him' is bon; ġurran bon is the present tense, 'hear him,' but has no reference to the effect of that hearing, whereas the use of the other pronoun ġikouġ kin implies that they hear him so as to attend to what he says and believe.

Keawai wal bara tetti kánún, 'they certainly shall not be in a state of death.'

Kulla wal, 'but certainly' shall, or 'because certainly' they shall.

Yanti katai, 'in this manner always.'

Barunba, 'belonging to them,' 'theirs.'

Kakillinún, 'will be and continue to be'; from kakilliko, 'to be, to exist' in some state.

Moron, 'life'; kakillinún moron means 'a future state of being, and continuing to be, alive.'

Section 4.

Pulli, 'voice.'

Upéa, 'put forth'; from upilliko, 'to exert power.'

Ithárael-úmba; Israel is the proper name, introduced; -úmba, the particle denoting 'belonging to' a person only; 'belonging to' a thing is koba; 'belonging to a place' is -kál (masc.), -kálin (fem.).

Wiyelliko, 'to speak.'

Pitál-mullikó, 'to cause peace, joy, gladness.'

Iéthu-ko Kriht-ko, 'Jesus Christ,' as the agent; the particle ko, denoting agency, must be added to each word, to show that both are in the same relation to the verb.

Niuwoa-bo, 'himself it is who is,' emphatic.

Section 6.

Gearunba kátan, 'is belonging to us' and remains so; equivalent to, 'for we have.'

Wiyelli-kan, 'one who speaks'; 'an advocate.'

Biyúgbai toa ba kátan, 'it remains with the Father.'

WINTA 6.—PART 6.

Section 10.

Murrin, 'body' of a person; murrin nurunba, 'your body.'

Kokera yirriyirri ta, 'it is a sacred house,' 'a temple.'

Marai yirriyirri koba, 'belonging to the sacred Spirit.'

Wakálla murrin, 'one body is.'

Section 11.

Yanti nurun wiya, 'in the manner as called you'; equivalent to, 'you are called'; nurun is in the objective case.

Kotelli ta, 'in the thinking.'

Nurunba, 'belonging to you,' 'your'; 'of you.'

Wiyatoara, 'that which is said.'

Wakálla Piriwál, 'one Lord is'; wakálla Marai, 'one Spirit is.'

Wakálla gurrulliko, 'one is for-to hear or obey.'

Wakálla kurrimulliko, 'one is for-to cleanse' with water.

Wakálla Eloí ta, 'one is God it is.'

Biyugbai ta yantin koba, 'father it is of all.'

Wokka-kaba noa yantin ko, 'up above he is for all.'

Gatun noa yantin koa, 'and he all with.'

Gatun murruǵ kaba nurun kinba, 'and within you,' sc., all; murruǵ, 'within, inside.'

Section 12.

Yantin barun yemmaman marai-to Eloí koba ko, 'all them lead the spirit does, belonging-to-God does,' equivalent to the passive; the to and ko are only signs of agency and not the verb 'to do'; in the translation the verb 'does' is only used to show the effect of the particles; no reason can be assigned why the particles may not be used indiscriminately the one for the other, excepting euphony, because the agency is in the o, which denotes purpose.

Yemmamulliko, 'to lead as by the hand'; the to in the text is added to Marai, because that is the subject of the verb, and the ko (=to) is added to Eloi koba, because that, too, is an essential portion of the subject.

Wonnai ta bara Eloi koba, 'children it is they of God.'

Section 13.

Niuwara bug-ga kora bon, 'angry purposely cause not him.'
Marai yirriyirri-lağ Eloi koba, 'Spirit sacred of God.'

Section 14.

Gan-to ba yarakai wiyânùn ġikouğ, 'whosoever-there-be evil will-speak concerning him.'

Yinal kùri koba, 'the son belonging-to man'; 'the son of man.'
Kâmünbinùn wal bon, 'suffered-to-be shall-certainly-be he.'*

Wonta noa ba yarakai wiyânùn ġikouğ marai yirriyirri-lağ, 'whereas he evil will-speak concerning-him, the spirit sacred.'

Keawai wal bon kâmünbinùn, 'not certainly he shall-be-suffered-to-be,' or remain, or exist; according to the idea of punishment which the speaker wishes to convey.*

WINTA 7.—PART 7.

LUKE, ii. 9-14.

Verse 9.

Gatun noa ağelo Yehóa-úmba, 'and he the angel belonging-to-Jehovah.'

Tanan uwanoa barun-kin, 'approached them'; 'came to them.'

Gatun killiburra Yehóa-úmba, 'and shining belonging-to-Jehovah'; from killibinbiu, 'to be bright; for the verbal form burra, see page 37.

Kakulla barun katoa, 'was them with.'

Kinta ġaiya bara kakulla, 'fear then they were-in-a-state-of.'

Verse 10.

Gatun ağeloko noa wiya barun, 'and he the angel told them.'
Kinta kora, 'fear not.'

Kulla nurun bağ wiyân, 'because you I tell.'

Totoğ murrarag kakilliko pitalko, 'news good, for-to-be joy-for.'

Kakilliko yantin ko kùri ko, 'to-be all-for men-for.'

* Bon is here in the objective; for the reason why, see pages 22 and 30.

Verse 11.

Kulla nurunba porkulléün unni purreäg, 'because belonging-to-you born-of-itself-is this day.'
 Kokerá Dabid-úmba ka, 'house-at belonging-to-David-at'; the -rá of kokerá is an ablative form; see page 16.
 Golomullikan ta noa, Kriht ta Piriwál ta, 'one-who-saves (by personal causation) it-is he, Christ it-is, the Chief or Lord it-is.'

Verse 12.

Gatun unni túga kánun nurunba, 'and this mark will-be yours.'
 Nanun nura boboğnuğ, 'see-will ye the-babe.'
 Gamatoara kirrikin taba, 'that-which-is-wrapped in-the garment,' i.e., 'soft raiment.'
 Kakillin ba takilligél laba, 'remaining-at-the-eating-place-at.'

Verse 13.

Gatun tanoa-kal-bo, 'and at-that-self-same-instant.'
 Paipéa konara moroko-kal ġikouğ katoa aġelo katoa, 'appeared host Heaven-of him-with angel-with.'
 Murraräg wiyellin bon Eloinuğ ġiakai, 'good, telling him, God (the object), thus'; equivalent to, 'praising God, and saying.'

Verse 14.

Wiyabünbilla bon murraräg Eloinuğ, 'let him speak well God' (the object); i.e., 'let persons speak good or well of God.' This is the native way of expressing our passive voice, 'let God be praised'.
 Wokka kaba moroko kaba, 'up-in Heaven-in.'
 Gatun kámünbilla pitál purrai tako, 'and let-there-be-caused-to-be peace earth for.'
 Murraräg umatoara kúri ko, 'good what-is-done men-for.'

WINTA 8.—PART 8.

Section 1.

Eloi-to noa ġurrára-ma korien barun aġelo yarakai umullikan, 'God he regarded not them angels evil who-do.'
 Wonto ba wareka noa barun bara koiyuğ kako tartaro kako, 'whereas cast-away he them down fire for tartarus for'; 'tartarus' is a word introduced.

Section 2.

Wiyatoara ta yantin kúri-ko wakálla tetti bulliko, 'that-which-is-said it-is all men-for once dead to become.'
 Gatun yukita ġaiya ġurrulliko, 'and afterwards then to-perceive-by-the ear,' sc., the sentence.

Section 3.

Yakoai-kan bağ moron kânùn? 'in-what-manner-of-being
'I life will-be-in-a-state-of?' i.e., 'how can I be alive.'

Gurrulla bon Piriwálnug, Iethunug Krihtnug, 'hear him, the Lord Jesus Christ.'

Moron ġaiya bi kânùn, 'life then thou wilt-be-in-a-state-of.'
Ġatun kirrikin ta tempel kako, 'and the-veil it-is the temple-at.'

Yiir-kulléün bulwa koa, 'rent-of-its-own-power in-the-midst, in-order-to-be.'

Wokka-kabirug unta-ko baran-tako, 'from the top thence to the bottom'; lit., 'up-from there-to down-to.'

The peculiarity of the verbal form of yiir, 'a rent,'—so called from the noise of a piece of cloth when tearing,—is shewn in the following specimen:—

Yiir-kulléün, 'rent,' 'has rent' of itself, of its own power.

Yiir-buğ-ga, 'rent,' some person has.

Yiir-burréa, 'rent,' some instrument has.

Yiir-lağ, 'rent,' is declaratively.

Yiir-wirréa, 'rent,' some motion has rent; as when a flag, or a sail of a ship flapping in the wind, is rent.

Thus, without a clear idea of the nature of the roots of the affixes, no one could understand the difference of the five kinds of 'rending.'

Compound Words.

Like the North American Indians, although to a less extent, our aborigines have long composite words in their language.
For instance, to express the abstract idea contained in the English word 'lust,' they would say kotilliyarakaiğearúnba, 'our evil thinking'; and for the contrary idea, kotillimurraráğ-gearúnba, 'our good thinking.' Now, either of these words, when pronounced, appears to be but one word, whereas each contains three words combined, namely:—

(1.) Kotilli (from simple root kot), 'the act of thinking';
(2.) ġearúnba, 'belonging to us'; (3.) yarakai, 'evil'; mur-raráğ, 'good.' From the root kot come the forms, kotilliko, infin., 'to think,' kotan, pres. indie., kotinùn, fut. indie., kotta, past indie., kotillin, pres. part., kotilliela, past participle.

Again, such a word as iirburréabünbilliko, 'to permit to be torn,' is made up of tiir, a root which expresses the idea of tearing, -burréa, the verbal particle of instrumental agency,
-bün, 'permit,' -illi, the formative of a verbal noun, and -ko, for the purpose of.' And so also with other examples.

The Author trusts that he has now placed on permanent record the language of the aborigines of this part of the colony, before the speakers themselves become totally extinct; and if, in his endeavour to aid the purpose of scientific enquiry, his work may seem to fall short, and so disappoint the expectations of those who take an interest in ethnological pursuits, he can only state that, in the midst of attention to manifold engagements in other paramount duties, no pains have been spared on the subject, and therefore his only apology is, that with slender means he has done his best.

THE AUTHOR'S PREFACE.

It is a matter of fact that the aborigines of these colonies and of the numerous islands of the Pacific Ocean are rapidly becoming extinct. The cause of their extinction is mysterious. Does it arise from the iniquity of this portion of the human race having become full?—or, that the times of these Gentiles are fulfilled?—or, is it but the natural effects of iniquity producing its consequent ruin to the workers thereof in accordance with the natural order of God's government of the universe? Whatever may be the result of speculative theories in answer to these queries, there remains one grand question incontrovertible, "Shall not the Judge of all the Earth do right?"

The providence of God has permitted ancient nations, together with their languages, and numerous tribes, with their various tongues, to pass away and others to take possession of and dwell in their tents, just as we in New South Wales and the neighbouring colonies now do, in the place of the original inhabitants of the land.

The numbers of the aborigines, both in Australia and the South Sea Islands, have always been overrated, and the efforts that have been made, on Christian principles, to ameliorate their condition, have been more abundant in proportion to the number of these aborigines, than have ever been any similar efforts towards the hundreds of millions of heathens in other parts of the world.

My own attempt in favour of the aborigines of New South Wales was commenced in the year 1824, under the auspices of the London Missionary Society, at the request of the deputation from that Institution sent out for the purpose of establishing Missions in the East, and urged likewise by the solicitations of the local Government of this colony. The British Government sanctioned the project by authorizing a grant of 10,000 acres of land, at Lake Macquarie, in trust for the said purpose, at the recommendation of Sir Thomas Brisbane, the then Governor of the Australian Colonies.

In 1839, the London Missionary Society abandoned the mission, broke faith with me, and left me to seek such resources as the providence of God might provide, after fifteen years' service in their employ. The Colonial Government, being perfectly acquainted with all the circumstances of the case, stepped in and enabled me to continue in my attempt to obtain a knowledge of the aboriginal language, and the British Government subsequently confirmed the new arrangement.

Circumstances, which no human power could control, brought the mission to a final termination on December 31, 1841, when the mission ceased, not from any want of support from the Government, nor from any inclination on my own part to retire from the work, but solely from the sad fact that the aborigines themselves had then become almost extinct, for I had actually outlived a very large majority of the blacks, more especially of those with whom I had been associated for seventeen years. The extinction of the aborigines is still progressing throughout these colonies. The last man of the tribe which formerly occupied the site of Sydney may now be seen sitting by the way side, a paralytic, soliciting alms from passers by, and this he does from choice, rather than enter the Benevolent Asylum. Those who drive by in their carriages along the South Head Road often throw him a sixpence or so, and thus he is bountifully provided for in his native and beloved state of freedom.

Under such circumstances, the translation of the Gospel by St. Luke can only be now a work of curiosity,*—a record of the language of a tribe that once existed, and would have, otherwise, been numbered with those nations and their forgotten languages, and peoples with their unknown tongues, who have passed away from this globe and are buried in oblivion.

Elliot, the missionary to the North American Indians, made a translation of the Scriptures into their language, which has recently been published; but only one Indian now remains who knows that dialect.

This translation of the Gospel of Luke into the language of the aborigines, was made by me with the assistance of the intelligent aboriginal, M'Gill, whose history is attached.† Thrice I wrote it, and he and I went through it sentence by sentence, and word for word, while I explained to him carefully the meaning as we proceeded. M'Gill spoke the English language fluently. The third revisal was completed in 1831. I then proceeded with the Gospel of Mark, a selection of prayers from the Book of Common Prayer, with which to commence public worship with the few surviving blacks; I prepared a Spelling book; I had also commenced the Gospel of Matthew, when the mission was brought to its final close.

Not long ago, I accidentally found at a book-stall a copy of the first specimens of an Australian language, which I published some time in 1826 ; this was done to satisfy my friends of the impropriety of introducing the English sound of the vowels instead of those of the Continent, which are also in use in the South Sea Islands.

* Our author did not know that his Awabakal blacks were only a sub-tribe, and that their brethren, for some hundreds of miles along the coast to the north and south of Lake Macquarie, spoke a language which is essentially the same. Northwards from the Hunter River to the Macleay, this language is still spoken.—Ed.

† See page 88.—Ed.

This present copy of the Gospel by Luke is the fourth re-written revisal of the work, and yet it is not offered as a perfect translation ; it can only be regarded by posterity as a specimen of the language of the aborigines of New Holland, or, as a simple monumental tablet, on which might be truthfully inscribed, as regards the unprofitable servant who attempted to ameliorate the pitiable condition of the aborigines and attain a knowledge of their language :—" He has done what he could."

NOW FOR THE FIRST TIME PRINTED.

CHARLES POTTER, GOVERNMENT PRINTER.

1892.

THE AUTHOR'S PREFACE.

It was during the year 1827, being the third year after the commencement of my mission to the aborigines, that the first work of this kind was produced—the result of my researches, assisted by M'Gill. The work was entitled “Specimens of the Language of the Aborigines of New South Wales,” and was printed in Sydney, the only attempt that had then been made by anyone to obtain a thorough grammatical knowledge of the aboriginal language of Australia, in any of its various dialects, and to render it into a written form.

In 1834, on the recommendation of the Rev. W. G. Broughton, the then Arch-Deacon of New South Wales, the Colonial Government, and the Society for the Promotion of Christian Knowledge, London, conjointly advanced sufficient funds to enable me to publish a small edition, now out of print, of “An Australian Grammar of the Language as spoken by the Aborigines in the Vicinity of Lake Macquarie, New South Wales.” In 1850, I published, on my own account, “A Key to the Structure of the Aboriginal Language, being an Analysis of the Particles used as Affixes, to form the various modifications of the Verbs, showing the essential powers, abstract roots, and other peculiarities of the language.” Both of these works were presented to, and exhibited at, the Royal National Exhibition, London, 1851.

This Lexicon will contain only those words which are used in the Gospel by Saint Luke. For the exemplification of such tenses and cases as may not be used therein, reference must be made to the “Australian Grammar,” and to the “Key to the Structure of the Aboriginal Language.”

A few illustrative sentences will be found at the end of the Lexicon, showing the mode in which certain forms of English phraseology are expressed in the aboriginal language.

As a tribute of respect to the departed worth of M'Gill, the intelligent aboriginal, whose valuable assistance enabled me to overcome very many difficulties in the language much sooner than otherwise could have been accomplished, his likeness is also attached to this work.

AN
 TO THE
 GOSPEL ACCORDING TO SAINT LUKE.

THE letters in the English alphabet, with some modifications, are here used to convey the sounds of letters and words in the aboriginal language. The meaning of the verb is given in the third person singular only, but it should be remembered that the verb, when rendered into English, must be made to agree with its subject, whether singular, plural, or dual—first, second, or third person, as the case may require; for example,—búntán, ‘smites,’ may have to be translated ‘I smite,’ ‘thou smitest,’ ‘he, she, or it smites,’ ‘we, ye, or they (dual and plural) smite’; cf. Grammar, p. 31. So likewise with respect to nouns; for they are singular, dual, or plural, according to the particle attached to show the number; as, kúri, ‘man’; kúri ta, ‘the man’; kúri tara, ‘the men’; yantin kúri, ‘all manner of men’; ‘all men’; ‘all people’; ‘all mankind.’

[Hyphens are used to show the composition of some of the words.—ED.]

THE APPENDIX.

APPENDIX.

(A.)

A SHORT GRAMMAR AND VOCABULARY OF THE DIALECT SPOKEN BY THE MINYUG PEOPLE, on the north-east coast of New South Wales. (By the Rev. H. Livingstone, Wimmera, Victoria.*)

I. THE GRAMMAR.

The Minyug dialect is spoken at Byron Bay and on the Brunswick River. The natives on the Richmond River have a sister dialect called the Nyug; those on the Tweed call their own Gando or Gandowal, but the Minyug they call Gendo. The words minyug and nyug mean 'what?' or 'something,' for they are used either interrogatively or assertively. Similarly, the words gando and gendo mean 'who?' or 'somebody.' These three dialects are so closely related that they may be regarded as one language; it is understood from the Clarence River in New South Wales northward to the Logan in Queensland. For this language the aborigines have no general name.

It is well known that the Australian dialects are agglutinative, everything in the nature of inflection being obtained by suffixes. To this, the Minyug is no exception; so that, if I give an account of its suffixes, that is nearly equivalent to giving an exposition of its grammar. It will, therefore, be convenient to take, first, such suffixes as are used with the noun and its equivalents, and, afterwards, those that may be regarded as verbal suffixes. The words that take what may be called the noun-suffixes are (1) Nouns, (2) Adjectives, and (3) Pronouns.

NOUNS and ADJECTIVES.

As the same general principles apply to both nouns and adjectives, these may be examined together as to (1) Classification, (2) Number, (3) Gender, (4) Suffixes.

*Written for this volume at my request.—ED.

1. CLASSIFICATION.

Nouns in Minyuġ may be arranged thus:—

Life-nouns.

- (1.) Persons (masc.); all proper and common names of males.
- (2.) Persons (fem.); all proper and common names of females.
- (3.) Animals; all other living creatures.

Non-life nouns.

- (1.) Names of things.
- (2.) Names of places.

I divide them into life-nouns or nouns denoting living beings, and non-life nouns or names of things and places, because the former often join the suffixes to lengthened forms of the nouns, while the non-life nouns have the suffixes attached to the simple nominative form. Again, subordinate divisions of both of these classes is necessary, because the adjectives and pronouns often vary in form according as they are used to qualify names of human beings, or animals, or things.

A few examples will make this plainer. If a man who speaks Minyuġ is asked what is the native word for 'big' or 'large,' he replies, kumai. This kumai is the plain or vocabulary form, which may be used on all occasions to qualify any kind of word. But if a native is speaking of a 'large spear,' he will usually say kuminna éuan. Either kumai or kuminna will suit, but the longer form is more common; kuminna is used only to qualify such things as spears, canoes, and logs, and never to qualify persons and places. If a native is speaking of a 'big man,' while he might say kumai paigál, the usual form is kumai-bin, which is then a noun; but since all nouns can also be used as adjectives, the longer form kumai-bin paigál is also correct. To express, in Minyuġ, 'that boy is big,' we might say either kully kumai-bin éubbo, or éubbo kumai. The feminine form of kumai is kumai-na-gun, which is only the suffix -gun added to the form in -na; like kumai-bin, this is either a noun, when it means 'a big woman,' or an adjective used to qualify a feminine noun. The suffix -gun is sometimes added to the plain form; as, mobi, 'blind,' mobi-gun, fem.; sometimes to the masculine form; as, balig-gál, 'new,' 'young,' balig-gál-gun, fem.; and sometimes to the form in -na; as, kumai-na-gun. Some adjectives have only two forms, while others have three, four, and even five. In some cases different words are used, instead of different forms of the same word. The principal suffixes used for the masculine are, -bin, -gin, -jára, -rim, -ri, -li, -gári, -gál. The table given below, for ordinary adjectives, adjective pronouns, and numerals, illustrates these uses. Forms rarely used have a † after them.

EXAMPLES of the SUFFIXES of ADJECTIVES.

Plain form, qualifying any noun.	Masculine form or masculine noun.	Feminine form or feminine noun.	Form qualifying animals and pieces.	Form in -n or -na qualifying things.
Pronouns. Kully, kullai†, 'this here'; 'he (she, it) here.' Mully, mullai†, 'that there'; 'he (she, it) there.' Kaiby, 'another.'	Kully. Mully. Kaibi-jara.	Kulla-na-gun. Mulla-na-gun†. Kaibi-jara-gun.	Kully. Mully. Kaiby.	Konno. Monno. Kaibi-na.
Numerals. Yaburu, 'one.' Bula, bulai†, 'two.'	Yaburu-gin. Bulaiy†.	Yaburu-gin-gun. Bulaiy-gun†.	Yaburu. Bula.	Yaburon. Bula-na.

The adjective dukkai, 'dead,' takes numerous forms; thus:—
2. dukkai, dukkai-bin†; 3. touara-gun, dukkai-gun†, dukkai-bin-gun†, dukkai-gun-bin†; 4. dukkai, dukkai-bin†.

2. NUMBER.

Nouns and adjectives do not change their form to denote number. The word paigál may mean one 'man,' or any number of 'men.' With regard to the pronouns, some of them are singular, some dual, some plural, and some of them indefinite so far as number is concerned. The number of a noun is generally known by the use in the same sentence, or in the context, of a singular, dual, or plural pronoun, or by the scope of the sentence or other surrounding circumstances.

3. GENDER.

There are two ways by which the feminine is distinguished from the masculine—either by a different word or by adding the termination -gún, of which the u is always short; as:—

Masculine.	Feminine.
Mobi, 'a blind man.'	Mobi-gun, 'a blind woman.'
Yérubilgin, 'a male singer.'	Yérubilgin-gun, 'a female singer.'
Kiéom, 'old man.'	Merrug, 'old woman.'
Ćubbo, 'boy.'	Yagári, 'girl.'
Koroman, male 'kangaroo.'	Imarra, female 'kangaroo.'

PRONOUNS.

These are:—(1) Personal pronouns, (2) Demonstratives, (3) Indefinite pronouns, (4) Numerals, and (5) Interrogatives.

Personal pronouns.

Singular. Gai, 'I.'	Wé, 'thou.'	Nyuly, 'he'; nyan, 'she.'
Plural. Gully, 'we.'	Buly, 'you.'	Ćannáby, 'they.'

The Minyuğ has no simple dual, although there are compound terms and phrases denoting the dual number; such as, ġulliwé, ġullibula, 'we two'; wé ġerriğ, 'you two,' 'you and another.' The personal forms of bula are sometimes used as dual pronouns; as, bulaily, 'they two,' masc., and bulaili-gun, 'they two,' fem.; and even such phrases as wé ġerriğ bulaily and wé ġerriğ bulaili-gun, 'you two,' are used.

Demonstratives.

Besides these, there is a peculiar class of words, which may be called demonstratives. When used as predicates, they have the general meaning of 'here,' 'there,' or 'yonder.' They are often used as demonstrative adjectives, and then mean 'this,' 'that 'these,' 'those.' As such, they usually agree in form with the nouns which they qualify, that is, they take similar suffixes. Often, however, the noun is omitted, and then they become true personal pronouns, retaining whatever suffix they would have if the noun were used. For example, the word kully, used as a predicate, means 'here'; as, paigal kully, 'a man is here'; but paigal kully yilyul means 'this man is sick'; and, omitting paigal, kully yilyul means 'he is sick'; kully thus means 'here'; 'this'; 'the'; 'he here'; 'she here'; and 'it here.'

Such words are real demonstratives, and must be carefully distinguished from ordinary adverbs of place; for, often an adverb of place is, as it were, promoted to the rank of a demonstrative, and in this way it may come to take the place of a personal pronoun. This may account for the fact that the third personal pronouns are so numerous, and have little or no etymological connection in Australian dialects. These demonstratives are kully, mully, killy, kunde, kanyo, mùn, kam, kaka, ka, and kaba. As these are sometimes doubled or reduplicated and have some other variations in form, the following scheme may be convenient:—

Singular.	Plural.
I.— Kully , kù-kully , 'this'; 'the'; 'he (she, it) here'; 'this here.'	} Mùnyo ; sometimes mùn.
II.— Kulla-na-gun , 'this'; 'she here.'
III.— Konno , ko-konno , 'this'; 'it here.'
IV.— Kùlly , kù-kully ; kùkai ; kullai , kù-kullai ; 'here.'
I.— Mully mù-mully , 'that'; 'the'; 'he (she, it) there.'	} Kámo , ka-kámo ; sometimes kám,
II.— Mulla-na-gun , 'that'; 'she there.'
III.— Monno , 'it there.'
IV.— Mully , mù-mully ; mullai , mù-mullai ; 'there.'
I.— Killy , ki-killy , 'yon'; 'he'; 'he (she, it) yonder.'	} Kaka.
II.— Killa-na-gun , 'yon'; 'she yonder.'
III.— Kundy , 'it there'; 'it.' Kanyo , ka-kanyo , 'this'; 'it near.'
IV.— Kanyo , ka-kanyo , 'here.'

I. is the common masculine form used as an adjective or pronoun. II. is the feminine form so used. III. is the neuter form so used. IV. is used as a predicate for masculine, feminine, and neuter.

Demonstratives used either as singular or plural are—ka, 'it'; plu., 'they in that place there'; kaba, 'it'; plu., 'they there.'

The Nyug dialect, instead of kully and mully, has muġga and kuġga; thus:—

Singular.		Plural.
Masculine.	Feminine.
Muġga.	Muġgun.	Maka.
Kuġga.	Kuġgun.	Kaka.

Kaka is thus a recent addition to the Minyug dialect. It is at present almost exclusively used instead of éannaby. Maka is sometimes used for mully, but always as a singular. Kuġga is used in the sense of 'he out there.' So it is evident that ka is the root form of all the demonstratives beginning with k, and ma of those beginning with m. Most of the plural demonstratives are formed from ka and ma; thus, kama consists of ka + ma, maka of ma + ka, and kaka of ka + ka; yet there are many doubled forms that are singular. Ma, however, is used, but not as a demonstrative. Ka, ma, ly, ba, and nyo are all root-forms.

Indefinite pronouns.

There are four indefinite pronouns:—Kurrálbo, 'all'; kaiby, 'another'; undúru, unduru-gun, unduru-na, 'some'; and ġerriġ, 'both'; to these may be added the adjective kumai, which is sometimes used in the sense of 'much' or 'many.'

Kurrálbo has but one form, viz., kurrál, but it is never used without the addition of the ornamental particles, -bo or -juġ. The four forms of kaiby have been given already. Ġerriġ has but one form.

Numerals.

Strictly speaking, the language has only two words, yaburu and bula, that can be called numerals. Yet, by doubling and repeating these, counting can be carried on to a limited extent; as,

Yabúru, 'one.'	Bula-bula, 'four.'
Bula, 'two.'	Bula-bulai-yaburu, 'five.'
Bulai-yaburu, 'three.'	Bula-bula-bula, 'six'; &c.

Yabúruġin, and yaburu-ġin-gun are sometimes used for the singular personal pronouns, and bulaily and bulaili-gun for the dual. Other uses of these numerals may be seen in—yaburugin yúnbully, 'go alone' (said to a male); yaburuginun yúnbully, 'go alone' (said to a female); yaburu-min-ba, 'at once,' or 'with one blow,' 'with one act'; bula-nden, 'halves'; bula-ndai, bula-ndai-gun, 'twins.'

Interrogatives.

In Minyug the difference between an interrogative sentence and an assertive one consists, not in any different arrangement of the words, but simply in the tone of the voice. Therefore the words which we call interrogatives have also assertive meanings. For example, the expression ġen ku ġgallen, taken as an assertive, means 'somebody calling,' but, as an interrogation, 'who is calling'? thus, ġen represents 'who'? or 'somebody'; it is used like the life-nouns and personal pronouns. In the same way, minyā, minyūġ, minyūġbo, mean 'what'? or 'something.' There is also inji, winjiġ, which means 'where'? or 'somewhere.' Another word of the same kind is yilly, 'in what place'? and 'in some place.' Such words are the connecting links between the nouns and the verbs.

4 (a). SUFFIXES TO NOUNS.

The suffixes used with nouns are the following :—

1. -o.

This is usually said to be the sign of the agent-nominative case, but it also denotes an instrumental case; e.g., buman ġaio wanye murrunduġġo, 'I will beat you with-a-club.' Here the words for I and for the club both have this suffix. Yogūm ġai yuġġan bumbumbo, 'I cannot go with-swollen-feet.' Here the word, 'swollen feet,' has this form.

2. -nye, -ne, -e, -ġe.

This may be called the accusative suffix. It usually follows the use of such transitive verbs as buma, 'beat'; na, 'see'; iġġa, 'bite'; wia, 'give to'; bura, 'take out.' As a general rule, only life-nouns and personal pronouns take this suffix. Non-life nouns retain their plain nominative form. Since adjectives and adjective pronouns agree in form with the nouns they qualify, it follows that they have a twofold declension. The accusative form of 'that man' is mullanye paigānye; of 'that tomahawk,' the accusative is mully bundan.

Examples of its use are :—Mullaio ġunye yilyulman, 'he will make me sick.' Wanye yilyulman mullaio, 'he will make thee sick.' Ġaio mullanye yilyulman, 'I will make him sick.'

Sometimes either the form in -o or in -nye is omitted.

3. -na, -a.

This is used to denote the genitives; as, paigānna koġġāra, 'a man's head'; taicūmma jennuġ, 'a boy's foot.' This form in -na belongs only to life-nouns and words connected with them. It is the same that is used with adjectives qualifying things; so that unduruna ġuan may mean either 'some spear' or 'somebody's spear.' There are also other forms to denote possession. When followed by this case, the interrogative minyūġ takes the sense of 'how many'? as, minyūġbo kittomma nogūm? 'how many dogs has the old man?'

4. -go, -go-by, -gai.

The meaning of these is 'to, of, for.' The by may be taken as a variation of bo, and, like bo, very little more than an ornament of speech. Go is suffixed to all kinds of nouns to denote 'to,' -go-by and sometimes -go to non-life nouns, in the sense of 'for,' and gai to life-nouns, in the same sense.

Examples of its use are:—Yilly ébbulgun killagóby kundalgóby, 'where is the paddle of that canoe?' Gaio kindan junaġ bundango, 'I will make a handle for the tomahawk.' Gaio éuan kinan ébbogai biaġgai ġerriġgai, 'I will make spears for both the boy and the father.'

5. -gál, -jil, -gál-lo, -na-gál, -na-jil.

The suffixes -go and -gál correspond to one another in the sense of 'to' and 'from.' Inji-go wé means 'where are you going to?' inji-gál wé is 'where are you coming from?' gai kamgál, 'I come from there.' Jil is a variant-form seldom used. The life-nouns add -gál or -jil to the form in -na; as, paigánna-gál, 'from the man.' Sometimes -gál takes the form gál-lo, and then has the meaning, of 'in coming' or 'when coming.' This is apparently the agent-nominative added to a strengthened form in -gál.

6. -ba.

Ba is simply a locative form. Probably there is some connection between it and -bo and -by, which may be regarded as little more than ornaments. It is sometimes found as a termination to names of places. Its principal use as a noun-suffix is to strengthen the simple forms of life-nouns, and thus form a new base for the addition of the suffixes.

7. -ma, -bai-ma.

Ma is rarely used as a noun-suffix, but, when so used, it has the meaning of 'in'; e.g., walo dulbaġga ballunma, 'you jump in the river'; the longer form is used with life-nouns; as, warré paigál-baima konno, 'carry this with the man.'

8. -a, -bai-a.

This takes the meaning of 'from,' 'out of.' Examples of its use:—bura junaġ bundanda, 'pull the handle out of the tomahawk'; bura monno éuan pagálbaia, 'pull that spear out of the man.' It often denotes possession; as, gaíabaia éuan, 'I have a spear.'

9. -e, -ai, -ji, -bai

This is the converse of the particle -a; it means 'into.' Ji is used with nouns ending in -in; as, umbin -ji, 'in the house.' Bai has the i added to the strengthening suffix ba; as, pagálbai, 'in the man.'

10. -no, -ba-no.

This is used after certain verbs of motion; as, koroally wé bon-no, 'go round the camp'; but koroally paigál-bano, 'go round the man.' It is also used in such sentences as kaḡga kúg ballunno, 'carry water from the river.' Its meaning may be given as 'from,' 'around,' 'apart,' and the like.

11. -urrugan.

This means 'with.' It may be regarded as a kind of possessive; e.g., yilly nogúm-urrugan paigál may be translated, 'where is the dog's master?' or 'where is the man with the dog?' There is a phrase walugára, 'you also,' which has some connection with this; the ḡ is intrusive between vowels to prevent hiatus.

12. -jüm.

Jüm means 'without.' Yilly nogúm jüm paigál? 'where is the dog without a master?' This is one of the verbal suffixes.

13. -gerry.

The peculiarity of this suffix is that, whilst it follows the rules of the noun-suffixes, it has a verbal meaning. For instance, kwáḡ-gerry ḡai, 'I wish it would rain'; nyan minyuḡ-gerry kúg, 'she wants some water'; ḡai killa-gerry umbin-gerry, 'I would like to have that house'; yogúm ḡai mulla-gerry éulgun-gerry, 'I do not like that woman.'

Many of these are merely additions to the simple nominative case, and are not used for inflection. To these may be added the suffix -bil, which is used to turn some nouns into adjectives; aš, woram, 'sleep,' woram-bil, 'sleepy.' All terms for relatives are usually strengthened by -jára and -jár-gun; e.g.,

Yirabúḡ	} a 'malecousin.'	Yirabúḡ-gun	} a 'female cousin.'
Yirabúḡ-jára		Yirabúḡ-jár-gun

Adjectives generally agree in termination with the nouns they qualify; but it should be noticed they do not follow any hard and fast rule. The suffix may be dropped from the adjective; more frequently it is dropped from the noun and retained with the adjective; and rarely, when the sentence can be understood without it, it is dropped from them both. On the other hand, this rule is carried out to an extent that surprises us. For instance, nubúḡ and nubúḡ-gun mean 'husband' and 'wife,' but the longer form of nubúḡ-gun is nubúḡ-jár-gun. Now, Kibbinbaia means 'Kibbin has,' and to say 'Kibbin has a wife,' would usually be Kibbinbaiagun nubúḡjargun. Again, bura jin ḡaiabaia mia would mean 'take the speck out of my eye'; where ḡaiabaia and mia agree in termination, yet mia has the shorter non-life form and ḡaiabaia has the longer life form.

Suffixes as Verbal Interrogatives.

The interrogatives seem to be the connecting link between the nouns and the verbs. This arises from the fact that they take both the noun and the verbal suffixes. For instance, while inji 'when?' takes, at times, the forms inji-go and inji-gâl, it also becomes inji-gun and inji-gun-ga, and these last terminations are verbal suffixes. The word minyuġ 'what?' may also take such forms as these:—minyuġallela! 'what are you doing?' minyuġen? 'what is the matter?' minyuġoro? 'what is done?' In form, there is really no distinction between interrogative and assertive sentences; hence any interrogative may have also an assertive meaning; minyuġallela ġai, therefore, may mean 'I am doing something.' In this dialect, there is a grammatical distinction between the imperative, the affirmative, and the negative forms of speech; but all these forms may be made interrogative by the tone of the voice.

Suffix-postpositions used with Nouns and Pronouns.

It may be as well to ask, at this stage, if there are any prepositions in Minyuġ. There is a large number of words denoting place; most of them are simple adverbs, and some of them demonstratives, and some occasionally have such a relationship to the noun that they can only be regarded as fulfilling the office of prepositions. They are not always placed before the noun, the Minyuġ having the greatest freedom with respect to the collocation of words. The word kam, which is among the demonstratives, may also be regarded at times as a preposition. When a native says walo kam kubbâl kyua, which is, literally, 'you to scrub go,' why should not kam be called a preposition? In the same way, kaġga kubbâl means 'out to the scrub.'

There are a few words of this kind that have a limited inflection; e.g., balli or ballia means 'under'; juy, jua, junno are 'down,' 'into'; bundagâl, bundagâllly, bundagâlla, 'near.' Of these, the particular form used is that which agrees in termination with the noun qualified.

Every word in Minyuġ ends either with a vowel or a liquid, and there are certain euphonic rules to be followed in connecting the suffixes with each kind of ending. In the following tables examples will be given of each kind. In Table I., all the inflecting suffixes will be joined to mully. In Table II. will be found the singular personal pronouns, which contain some irregularities, and a life-noun ending in l, m, n, ng, ra, or o. It will, however, be unnecessary to give in full the declension of these.

In Table III., four non-life nouns are chosen, ending in -l, -n, -in, and -ra, and the terminations given are those numbered 1, 8, 9. From these examples, all other forms can be understood.

EXAMPLES of the USE of SUFFIXES.

VERBS.

4 (b). SUFFIXES TO VERBS.

Imperative and Affirmative Forms.

The imperative, in the Minyug dialect, is the simplest form of the verb; it will therefore be quoted as the stem of the verb. In true verbs, it ends in -a or -e; as, kulga, 'cut,' buġge, 'fall.' If the -a or -e is cut off, there remains the root of the verb, and to it the verbal suffixes are attached. These are very numerous, and appear, at first sight, to be very complicated; but the whole may be simplified by taking them in the following order:—(1) Final suffixes; (2) Internal strengthening particles or letters; and (3) Separable demonstrative particles. The usual final suffixes are:—

1. -a, -e, used in giving a command or in expressing a wish.
2. -ala, -ela, denoting present action.
3. -an, denoting future action.
4. -anne, -inne, -unne, denoting unfinished past action.
5. -oro, denoting finished action.
6. -en, the historical past tense; often an aorist participle.
7. -inna, used, but rarely, as a participle.
8. -ian, past time; with passive sense, when required.
9. -ia, -ē, -aia, when used with a leading verb, has a future meaning, but it is generally the infinitive or noun form to express verbal action.
10. -ai, may be called the subjunctive, but the verb does not take this form in all positions where we might expect a subjunctive to be used.
11. -enden, -unden, -anden, is probably derived from kinda, the sixth form of which is kinden. It adds the idea of 'made' or 'did' to the root idea of the verb. It is sometimes equivalent to the passive, and at times it becomes the foundation of another verb, so that there are such forms -endene, -endeloro, &c. It sometimes takes, between it and the root, the strengthening particles of the next paragraph.
12. The internal strengthening particles are (1) le, l, r, re, (2) g, ng-g, ing-g, and (3) b. These are inserted between the root and the final suffix, and are sometimes compounded together, so that there are such form as galle and balle. These particles add but little to the meaning. It may be that le or re gives a sense of continuance to the action, so that while ala is a simple present, while alela may be a progressive present. This, however, is very doubtful. In fact, it may be stated, once for all, that while there is an abundance of forms, the aborigines do not seem to make very exact distinctions in meaning between one form and another.

If it is desired to give emphasis to the idea that the action is continuative, a separate word is used to denote this. Thus alen, which is the strengthened form of en, is purely a participle without distinction of time. The forms in r, re are simple variations of le, and seldom used. The forms in y, ny-y, are from ga, 'to go on,' and those in l from ba, 'to make,' 'cause to be.' The following table will show the various possible forms in which a verb may be found. The separable demonstrative particles inserted in the table are:—be, bo†, yun, de, ji. Bo and be seem to add nothing to the meaning; yun means 'there'; di or ji means 'to' or 'at.'

The Suffixes as attached to the root-form of Verbs.

To the forms in italics, the separable demonstrative particles are added.

7. -inna; 8. -ian; 9. -ia, -aia, -ē; compound, -alia; 10. -ai; compound, -bāi; 11. -enden; compound, -genden, -ḡgenden; -bunden.

*The numbers indicate the Moods and Tenses; thus, 1 is the Imperative Mood; 2, The Present Tense; 3, The Future Tense; 4, The Past (unfinished); 5, The Past (finished); 6, A Participle form (often past); 7, A Participle form (generally present); 8, A Participle form (often passive); 9, A Noun form of Verbal action (the infinitive); 10, The Subjunctive, i.e., the form which the verb takes when compounded with Auxiliary Verbs; 11, A Participle form (generally passive.) 2, 3, 4, and 5 are of the Indicative Mood.

Besides these, there are some other compound verbal suffixes which are formed from inda and ma, and from b and ba, as shown below. These are sometimes attached, not to the simple stem-form of the verb, but to specially lengthened forms.

Kinda, 'make.'

This, as a principal verb, has all the forms of the simple suffixes except No. 11, and many of the compound ones; as, kinda-bulela, kinda-galoroby, &c. It sometimes takes the form, though rarely, of kiǵge, and, as such, enters into composition with other verbs; but the usual method of compounding it with verbs is to omit the z, and use only the terminations; as, bo-alé, 'be great,' bo-indalé, 'be made great.' In the Minyug dialect, when two words are brought together, it is common for the second to lose its initial consonant. Kinda itself is a derivative from da, which is in use to turn nouns and adjectives into verbs; as, umbin, 'a house,' umbin-da, 'make a house.'

Ba, 'cause to be.'

Ba, as a locative, is also a noun-suffix, but, like da, it helps to convert other words into verbs; as, kirriba, 'awake.' As already noticed, it enters into composition with verbs, lengthening their forms, at times, without adding to or altering their meaning. As part of a principal verb, it generally has the meaning of 'cause to be'; as, nyarry, 'a name,' nyarri-ba, 'give a name' or 'cause to have a name.' It is also attached to the past tense, and is often used when a secondary verb is in a sentence; e.g., monno wébà ro kunjillinneban nobo, 'that fire will be lighted' (made to burn) to-morrow.'

Ma, 'make,' 'cause to be there,' 'cause' generally.

This is one of the most important verbal suffixes in the language. As a noun-suffix, it has the sense of 'in,' and many of its derivative words have the idea of 'rest in a place,' and not of causation. Maia means 'in a place,' while kaia means 'go to a place.' Waimaia means 'it is above'; waikaia, 'go above.' It is evident that ma originally meant both 'there' and 'cause to be' generally. But, after all, there is nothing strange in this. Even now, with all the variation of forms, a good deal of the meaning of a speaker depends upon the tone of the voice or the gesture of the hand. We can conceive of a demonstrative as meaning (1) 'there,' (2) 'go there,' (3) 'be there,' (4) 'cause to be there,' according to the tone of voice and the subject of conversation. Any adjective can take this suffix; as, yilyúl, 'sick,' yilyúl-ma, 'cause to be sick'; dukkaï, 'dead,' dukkaï-ma, 'to kill.' It enters into composition with adverbs of place as well; as, with wai, 'above,' and kully, kundy, q.v., it gives waikalkullima, 'put crosswise,' waikundima, 'put on.'

It sometimes follows adjectives; as, bunyarra-ma yerrúbil, 'make a good song'; and sometimes pronouns; as, kaibi-ma junag, 'make another handle.' With verbs, it is sometimes attached to the imperative form; as, kory, 'run,' kori-ma, 'make to run'; sometimes it takes the particle bin between it and the root form or the imperative form; as, duḡbin-ma, 'cause to lie down.' Very often it is attached to a form in -illi; as, duḡgilli-ma, 'make to cry,' minjilli-ma, 'make to laugh.' Sometimes it is attached to two words; as, bunyarra-ma warrim-ma, 'to make well by doctoring,' and each of these can take all the forms in agreement; as, (future) bunyarra-man warrimman; (past) bunyarra-munne warrim-munne.

Gerry, 'wish,' 'like to.'

This was placed amongst the noun-suffixes, because, although it has a verbal meaning, it follows the rules of the noun-suffixes. It also has a place as a verbal-suffix. It never changes its form, and is always the final suffix. It is generally attached to the subjunctive; as, yunai-gerry ḡai, 'I should like to lie down'; often to the form in -bai; as, yūnbai-gerry ḡai, 'I should like to go on'; and sometimes it is attached to the form in -illi; as, kunjilli-gerry, 'desire to burn.'

Negation.—Jum, 'without.'

Jum is another of the noun-suffixes, and is used in negative sentences. It is often attached to the imperative form, sometimes to the simple subjunctive form, and sometimes to the subjunctive form in -bai. It is the negative of the present. Wanye kunlela ḡai means 'I know you'; but wanye kunlejum ḡai, 'I do not know you,' or 'I am without knowledge of you.' Na is 'look'; naijum ḡai or nabaijum ḡai is 'I do not see.'

Yogum is another negative. It is a word distinct from jum, and its use turns any sentence into a negation. Yogum and jum, when both are used, do not cancel one another; on the contrary, they strengthen the negation. Wana is the negative of the imperative. It means 'leave it alone'; e.g., wana yūnbai, 'do not go.' It has all the usual forms of a verb; as, ḡai wanalen, 'I left it alone.' Kingilga, 'that will do,' kingilanna, 'go away, numoé,' 'stop,' also help to form negations.

SOME IDIOMS IN THE MINYUNG DIALECT.

The following sentences show some of the aboriginal idioms:—

1. Rest in a place.

Kūkully ḡai, 'I am here'; mūmully wé, 'you are there'; kūkaibo, 'stay here'; kokouno, 'it is here'; yilly nyan? 'where is she'; mully nyan, 'she is there'; killy Kibbin, 'there is Kibbin'; webena killy wai, 'the camp is above'; killy juy webena 'the camp is below.'

These sentences illustrate the use of the demonstratives as predicates. We can either say that they are used without the verb

'to be' as a copula, or that they themselves are used as neuter verbs in the present tense. The latter view is more in accordance with the idiom of the language. There is, however, in the language, a general absence of connecting words; there is no word for 'and,' the nearest word to it being urru or urrugan, 'with,' which is sometimes attached to words used as personal pronouns in the sense of 'also'; as, mullagurru, 'he also.' There are no relative pronouns, and we may almost say there is no verb 'to be,' used as a copula.

2. Adjectives as predicates.

Adjectives follow the same rules as demonstratives; for instance, yilyul gai, 'I am sick'; killy dukkai, 'he over there is dead'; monno bundan bunyarra, 'this tomahawk is good.'

3. The use of yūna.

But we can say kūkulliyen gai, for 'I was here'; and killy dukkaien, 'he was dead.' We can also say dukkaiānna, 'may you die,' or 'may you go to death'; dukkaiyuġgan gai, 'I will kill myself,' or 'I will go to death.' These endings are from the verb yūna, which means 'to go.' The rule may be expressed thus:—Any word which is an adjective may be used in its plain form as a predicate in the present tense, and may, by adding the forms of the verb yūna, be turned into a true verb with all the tense-forms of a verb. The y of yūna is often omitted, and the forms ungan, unna are used; also en or yen, as if the original root was ya. Yuna means not only 'to go,' but 'to live,' 'to move,' and 'to be.' The language has three verbs closely allied in form, yūna 'to go,' yūna 'to lie down,' and yana 'to sit down.' The first of these has the derived forms yuġga, yūnbalé; the second, yūnalé; and the third, yangalé.

4. Verbs of Motion and Adverbs of Place.

Verbs of motion are very numerous, and so are adverbs of place; thus, speakers of the Minyuġ can be very exact in directing others to go here or there. Bukkora goa, 'go past'; bundagal boa, 'go near'; duloa, 'go down'; wande, 'go up'; kaie, 'go in'; wombin kwé, 'come here'; kaga, 'come down'; dukkan kyua, 'go over'; kankyua junimba, 'keep to the right'; kankyua worrembil, 'keep to the left.'

5. Time.

The language can be very exact in the expression of time. Nungerry is 'daylight'; karamba, 'mid-day'; yán, 'sunset'; nobo, 'yesterday' or 'to-morrow.' The particles -bo and -juġ are also used to distinguish former time from latter; so that nobo-bo is 'yesterday,' and nobo-juġ 'to-morrow.'

6. Manner.

There is a class of words that fulfil the duty of qualifying action as adverbs of manner, but they have the forms of verbs; so that they may be called qualifying verbs. They agree in final termination with the verbs they qualify. Karaia or karoé is 'to do anything in a great manner.' In the participial form it is used thus:—gibbum karandallen, 'full moon'; karandallen kwog, 'heavy rain'; karandallen wibara, 'the fire is hot'; karaggen wurri, 'very cold.' With verbs it is used in a different form; as, wemully karaielly, 'speak loudly.'

Gumoé is 'in a small way'; as, gumundallen gibbum, 'little moon'; wemully gumoelly, 'speak gently.' Magoé means 'to continue'; as, magolé wemully, 'continue speaking.' Boé is 'to speak by oneself'; as, boelly wemully, 'speak by yourself,' or 'speak alone.' Others are,—karaharaielly dugga, 'cry very loudly'; nunnoelly dugga, 'cry very gently'; nugummanna dugga, 'cry quickly'; niganna dugga 'stop crying.'

7. Affections of the mind.

'Doubt' is expressed by wunye, which sometimes takes the form of bunye. Gaio wanye human, nobo wunye, 'I will beat you, perhaps to-morrow.' 'Hope' is expressed by jùn; as, mullaijùn kulgai wibara, 'it is hoped that he will cut wood.' 'Fear' is expressed by the word twin; as, gaio twiggalla wébara kulgai, 'I am afraid to cut wood.' 'Pity' and 'sympathy' are often expressed by idioms meaning literally, 'smelling a bad or a good smell'; e.g., gai mullagai kunlunny bogon, 'I for him smell a bad smell,' or 'I pity him.'

8. The use of bunyarra.

Bunyarra, 'good,' means not only 'good,' but anything 'great.' It sometimes means 'very'; as bunyarra jug, 'very bad.'

9. The use of karaban.

Reciprocal action is expressed by karaban; e.g., gully karaban bummallé, 'let us paint one another.'

10. Comparison.

Gai koren karaialen, wunnanden wanye, 'I run fast, you slowly'; that is, 'I am faster than you'; gai wanye gulu paigal, 'I am a man before you'; that is, 'I am older than you.' The pronoun (wanye or any other) is always in the accusative.

11. Government of Verbs.

Sometimes the infinitive form in -ia, and sometimes the form in -bai or -ai, which may be called the subjunctive, is used to show dependence on another verb; but often the two verbs agree in having the same final suffix. Examples are:—wana yunbai, or wana yuna, 'do not go'; wana éubai, 'do not eat'; wana mullanye ćubbinmai, 'do not feed him'; yūna ġully ćullum kaġgale means 'let us go to catch fish'; lit., 'let us go, let us catch fish'; both verbs are in the imperative. Kia mullanye bumalia, 'ask him to fight'; this is the more common form; but walo kia mullanye wébāra kundia, or walo mullanye kia wébāra kunjeba, 'you ask him to light a fire'; here the endings of the verbs will agree in all the tenses; as, (imper.) kia kunjeba; (past) kianne kunjebunne; (fut.) kian kunjeban.

EXAMPLES OF THE FORMATION OF THE TENSES OF VERBS.

The numbers here are the Tenses as on page 16 of this Appendix.

Buma, 'to fight, beat, kill.'

1. Buma, bumalé, bunga, bungalé; 2. Bumala, bumalela, bumgala, bumgalela; 3. Buman, bumgan; 4. Bumanné, bumalinne, bumganne, buminne; 5. Bumaloro, bungaloro, bumaloroby; 6. Bumen, bumallen, bumgallen; 7. Buminna; 8. Bumian, bumalian; 9. Bumalia; 10. Bumai; 11. Bumenden. Compound forms are :—

Bumaigerry, 'wish to fight'; bumeĵum (imper. neg.), 'fight not'; karaban bumalé (imper. reciprocal), 'fight one another'; bumille-ma, 'cause to fight,' which also, as above, may change ma into -mala, -malela, -man; -munne, -men; -ma-ia, &c.

Kinda, 'make.'

1. Kinda, kindabalé; 2. Kindalela, kindabulela; 3. Kindan; 4. Kindinne; 5. Kindaloro, kindabuloro; 6. Kinden, kindabulen, &c.

Kinda does not take the forms in -ga; nor buma those in ba.

TABLE OF RELATIONSHIPS IN MINYUG.

† Whether male or female.

(4.)

A man calls his wife , his wife's sister , and some others .	nubuġgun.
„ is called by them in return	nubuġ.
A man calls his wife's father	wómen.
„ calls his wife's mother	bogai.
„ is called by them in return	wómen.

Other terms for relations-in-law are—weoġ, éumbuġ, yambúru. Such relationships are very complicated, and require to be specially investigated.

(5.)

When there is no specific term for a relationship, the terms for 'brother' and 'sister' are used; for instance—a great-grandfather is called kagoġ, 'elder brother,' and in reply to a male he says bunam, 'younger brother.'

II. THE VOCABULARY.

Words, Phrases, and Sentences used by the Minyung Tribe.

I. WORDS AND PHRASES.

(The verbs are given in their shortest form, the imperative.)

Berrin—the south, the south people; e.g., berrinba—to the south; cf. kokin—the north, the north people; e.g., kokingal—from the north. The aborigines on the Richmond River call the Clarence River ‘Berrin,’ and the Tweed ‘Kokin’; but, to those on the Tweed River, the Richmond is ‘Berrin,’ and the Logan is ‘Kokin.’

Binnuġ—an ear; e.g., binnuġma—make to hear; tell; answer.

Birra—to cast through.

Birré—fly away; e.g., birryalen ġarrig—crossed over.

Buġge—fall; it is sometimes equivalent to ‘gone away’ or ‘disappeared’; as, inji buġgeloro mibin kurrälbo wairabo? ‘where have all the blacks been this long time?’ If the imperative ends in a (as buġga), the word means ‘kick,’ ‘stamp,’ ‘leave a mark,’ as a foot-print. In the Pirripai dialect, spoken by the natives on the Hastings River, buġgen means ‘killed,’ for they say bunno butan buġgen, ‘he killed a black snake.’ In Minyuġ, nyuġga bukkoyen means ‘the sun has risen,’ nyuġga buġgen, ‘the sun has set’; but with this compare the Brisbane dialect, which says piki boġ, ‘the sun is dead.’

Buġgo—(1) a native shield; (2) the tree from which it is made.

Bujäbuyai—a swallow. Bujärebın—a daisy. Bujägun—a quiet girl. Bujäro—quiet; e.g., yiran bujäro, ‘whip-snakes (are) harmless.’

Bujärá, Bujärábo—morning.

Bujäre, Bujäro-bujäro—this morning, just before daybreak.

Buji, bujin—a little piece; bujigan—into little pieces.

Buma or bumga—strike, beat, fight, kill by fighting.

This is probably a derivative from buġge, just as wáġ, the noun for ‘work,’ becomes wamma, the verb ‘to work.’

Burre—the top of a tree; with this compare ćulle, ‘the barrel’ or ‘trunk’ of a tree; waian, ‘the root’; ćerruġ, ‘the branches’; kunyal, ‘the leaves.’ Ćulle is also a general name for a ‘tree.’ It often means ‘logs’ lying down, and ‘firewood’; e.g., kulga ćulle wébäragai, ‘cut wood for the fire.’ Ćerruġ, besides, is ‘the open palm of the hand,’ ‘a bird’s claw,’ or ‘the paw of an animal,’ and it is the name of a constellation. Kunyal, ‘leaf,’ may be allied to with kuġġal, ‘an arm’ or ‘wing.’ Waian also means ‘a road.’ When a tree is cut down, the stump is called gunun.

Dukkai—dead ; a dead man ; ‘a dead woman’ is touraragun. The word tabullen is often used to mean ‘dead,’ instead of dukkai and touraragun. It is a participle from some verb not at present used. In some dialects, duggai, probably the same word, means a kind of ‘fish’; in the Turrubul dialect it means ‘man.’ This may have given rise to the idea that some of the aborigines believe that, when they die, they become fishes.

Duggerrigai—white man ; duggerrigaigun—white woman. Perhaps this word comes from dukkai, ‘dead,’ but it does not mean ‘ghost’ or ‘spirit.’ For ‘spirit,’ there are two terms, ġuru and wágai. After a man dies, he is spoken of as ġuru wanden, ‘a spirit up above.’ All the ġuru go to waijoġ (from wai, ‘above’), where they live on murrabil, a kind of celestial food. Murrabil is from the Kamilaroi word murraba, ‘good.’ Ģuru in some dialects means ‘dark’ or ‘night,’ and a word derived from it means ‘emu.’ Dawson, in his “Australian Aborigines” (page 51), states, that, if a native “is to die from the bite of a snake, he sees his wraith in the sun ; but, in this case, it takes the form of an emu.” Wágai means ‘shadow,’ and has a more superstitious use than ġuru. When a person is ill, the warrima, ‘wizard,’ is sent for to throw on him a good spell, called bunyarama warrima. The warrima takes something like a rope out of his stomach (!), and climbs up to waijoġ to have an interview with the wágai. On his return, if the man is to recover, he says, ‘Your wágai has come back and you will soon be well’; but if he is to die, he says, ‘I could not get your wágai.’ The sick man is sure to die then. The wágai are also the spirits consulted, when anyone dies suddenly, to discover by whose means the death was brought about. Yiralle is another name used by the Nyuġ people for ‘white man’; it means, the ‘one who has come.’

Garre—dance ; cf., yerrube—sing.

Ģuluġ, ġuluġbo—first ; before ; e.g., ġai minjen ġuluġbo, ‘I laughed first,’ i.e., before you. Ģuluġ-gerry is ‘immediately’; nyuġga bukkoyen ġuluġ-gerry, ‘the sun will be up immediately’; ġuluġga wé, or wé ġuluġga búna means ‘go thou first’; waire ġurrugin, or waire ġuluġgnurrugin are those men in a tribe whom the colonists call ‘kings’; each of these gets a brass plate with a suitable inscription, to wear on his breast, as an emblem of his rank.

Gumma—teat. Gummabil—milk.

Kibbára—(1) white or yellow ; (2) a half-caste, a yellow man or woman ; whence kibbárgun, a half-caste girl ; kibbárim, a half-caste male ; (3) fig., anything young, small, or light ; as, kibbára paillela, which may either mean, ‘light rain falling,’ or ‘young lads fighting’; (4) a stringy-bark tree ; this word, in the Kamilaroi dialect, is kuburu, a ‘black-box tree’; (5) the ceremony of man-making; possibly the name bora may come from this, by dropping the initial syllable, as nyuğ is for minyuğ; or, bora may be connected with the Minyuğ word bul or bule, 'a ring'; (6) 'a made-man,' that is, one who has passed the kippàra; and in this sense it is used in many of the coast dialects. The names given to a male, at different stages of his life, are—taićum, 'a baby'; balun, balungai, 'a boy'; éubbo, éubboyl, 'a youth'; murrayon, 'a lad' who is getting whiskers and has all his berruğ or prescribed 'scars on his back'; kumban-gerry, a lad who has received his kumban or 'scars on his breast'; kibbara, 'one who had been made a man'; paigal or mibin, 'a man'; kićom or mobeg, 'an old man.'

Kuji—(1) a bee; (2) honey; (3) red; cf. kujin—red.

Kunle—know, hear, feel, smell; e.g., ġai kunlejum, 'I don't know.'

Moiim, (1) a child, a son or daughter; (2) the black cockatoo with yellow feathers in its tail. The black cockatoo with red feathers is called ġarerra, and the white cockatoo, kera.

Nyugga—(1) the regent bird; (2) the sun. Nyuggal-gerry—summer; cf. wurrig—cold; wurribil—winter.

Ća—eat; e.g., walo ći, ġai yo, 'you eat (now), I (will eat) by-and-by.'

Ćubbinma—feed. Ćukka—drink.

Wébàra—(1) a fire; (2) firewood; (3) a camp. Examples:—(1) kunji wébàra, 'light a fire'; kunji, by itself, would mean 'make it burn' (bobbinda means 'make a light'; ćulloma, 'make smoke,' i.e., 'make a fire'; palloma, 'put out the fire'); (2) kulga wébàra, 'cut firewood'; this has the same meaning as kulga ćulle; (3) ġai yunbulela wébàra 'I am going to the camp'; lit., 'I am going to the fire.' The gunyas or 'wind-shelters' are ġumbin; and a large building like a church is called kumai ġumbin, which words, however, may mean, a collection of houses, as a 'town' or 'village.' The blankets which are given to the aborigines on Queen's Birthday are called ġumbin, and so is a rag tied round the foot. A sock is ġumbin, but a boot is bonumbil. In some dialects a 'sheet of bark,' 'a gunya,' and 'a canoe' have the same name, but in the Minyuğ dialect 'a sheet of bark' is bagul, and 'a canoe' is kundal or kulgerry.

Worám—sleep; worambil—sleepy; e.g., worám buna, 'go to sleep.' A mother will say to her child, worám-worám buna, but to herself, ġai worám yunan, 'I will lie down and sleep.'

Yaraba—marry; e.g., nanna yaraba, 'marry my sister.'

Yerrube—sing; yerrubil—song; yerrubil-gin-gun—a singer (fem.).

Youara (also kirrin and wogoyia)—a 'karabari.*' Youara-ğurrugin—a maker of karabari songs.

*This I take to be the correct spelling, not 'corroboree.'—ED.

2. SENTENCES.

Minyuǵalela wé—'what are you doing?' Yogum ǵai únduru-mullela—'I am doing nothing'. Minyuǵaloro wé nobo?—'what did you do yesterday?' Gaio kaǵgaloro éullum Noǵǵuǵ-ǵai—'I caught fish for Noǵǵuǵ.'

Gaio wanye bundan wianje, kulǵa éully ǵaia—'I to you a tomahawk will give, (if) you cut down a tree for me; or, cut down a tree for me, (and) I will give you a tomahawk.' Yile bundan?—'where (is) the tomahawk?' Kunde bukkora—'over there.'

Kulǵa éulle koranna—'cut down that high tree.' Yile walo kulǵajungerry, wana—'if you do not like to cut it down, leave it alone.' Gaio kulgunne kaba éulle wia baijüm bibbo—'I cut down that tree before you came.' Gaio wanye naienue kulǵabulenne—'I saw you cutting (it).'

Gaio wanye mommo wébära ǵaia kunjilligerry—'I would like you to light that fire for me.' Walo kia mullanye kunjeba—'you ask him to light (it).' Gaio mullanye nobo kianne kunjebunne—'I asked him to light it yesterday.' Munno wébära kunjillorobo—'the fire is lighted.' Munno wébära kunjillinneban nobo—'that fire will be lighted to-morrow.'

Gen kuǵalela?—'who is calling?' Kéra kuǵalela—'a white cockatoo is calling.' Mully kéra mibin kialela—'that cockatoo speaks like a man.' Paian-juǵ ǵün—'it is warm to-day.'

Kuberry ǵai paian—'I am hungry to-day.' Wia kurlunne bogon ǵai—'I am sorry for you.' Walo éa, bunyarra-d-unda—'you eat, (you) will be all right.'

Gaio naienue kurrunebo manne, kenne; ǵaio buminne úndur-runebyu; úndurr berranne.—'I saw a number of ducks and white cockatoos; I killed some; some flew away.'

Loganda, éannabiǵy ǵaio naienue wébärobo. Éannaby yer-rubilloro wébärobo. Yaburugen ǵaiaaba kyuanne. Yaburugen ǵullawonne, 'injeo wé?' Gaio kiallen 'Brisbane-gobullen.' Gaio naienue nogumme kakaba. Éannaby bikbullen. Éannaby kowallen nogumme webänno—'On the Logan, I saw them in the camp (lit., at the fire). They were singing in the camp. One came to me. One asked me where I was going. I replied, 'Going to Brisbane.' I saw dogs there. They were barking. They called them into the camp.'

Miscellaneous.

Gaio nan éuan bowan, 'I will see (one who) will throw a spear.' Gaio nan éuan bowalen, 'I will see a spear thrown.' Gaio nan éuan bougunneban nobo, 'I will see (that) a spear shall be thrown to-morrow.' Gaio naienue yünbulela undurrunne poiolgo, 'I saw somebody going up the hill.' Gaio naienue kamy éuan warre bulenne, 'I saw him carrying spears.'

Gaio kunleoro kamy yerrúbiloroby, 'I heard them singing. Gaio kunlan kamy mendié, 'I will hear them laughing.' Gaio kunlunne kamy minjenne, 'I heard them laughing'; if the act of laughing is finished, this sentence would be, gaio kunlunne minjeloroby. Gaio kunlela wemullenyun, 'I hear speaking there.' Gaio naienne korenyun taiéumme, 'I saw children running away.' Gaio kunloigerry yerrúbil kamy, 'I like to hear them sing.' Wóg wia bunyarra, 'working is good for you.' Waǵgo wia ǵowenyen, 'working is making you tired.' Paigál wammullen wallenyun, 'the man working is gone.'

3. MYTHOLOGY.

Berrúǵen korillábo, ǵerríǵ Mommóm, Yaburóǵ.—'Berrúǵ came long long ago, with Mommóm (and) Yaburóǵ.'

Thus begins a Minyung Legend to the following effect:—

Long ago, Berrúǵ, with his two brothers, Mommóm and Yaburóǵ, came to this land. They came with their wives and children in a great canoe, from an island across the sea. As they came near the shore, a woman on the land made a song that raised a storm which broke the canoe in pieces, but all the occupants, after battling with the waves, managed to swim ashore. This is how 'the men,' the paigál black race, came to this land. The pieces of the canoe are to be seen to this day. If any one will throw a stone and strike a piece of the canoe, a storm will arise, and the voices of Berrúǵ and his boys will be heard calling to one another, amidst the roaring elements. The pieces of the canoe are certain rocks in the sea. At Ballina, Berrúǵ looked around and said, nyuǵ? and all the paigál about there say nyuǵ to the present day, that is, they speak the Nyuǵ dialect. Going north to the Brunswick, he said, minyuǵ, and the Brunswick River paigál say minyuǵ to the present day. On the Tweed he said, ǵando? and the Tweed paigál say ǵando to the present day. This is how the blacks came to have different dialects. Berrúǵ and his brothers came back to the Brunswick River, where he made a fire, and showed the paigál how to make fire. He taught them their laws about the kippára, and about marriage and food. After a time, a quarrel arose, and the brothers fought and separated, Mommóm going south, Yaburóǵ west, and Berrúǵ keeping along the coast. This is how the paigál were separated into tribes.

NOTE.—Each brother has his own 'karábari,' for there is the youára Berruǵna, the girran Mommómna, and the wogoya Yaburóǵna).

[ABSTRACT.]

GRAMMAR

OF THE LANGUAGE SPOKEN BY

THE NARRINYERI TRIBE IN S. AUSTRALIA.

(By the late Rev. G. Taplin, Aborigines' Missionary, Point Macleay, South Australia.)

[This Grammar of the Narrinyeri dialect is to be found in a book entitled "The Folklore, Manners, Customs, and Languages of the South Australian Aborigines; Adelaide, 1879." I have re-arranged and condensed the material of the Grammar, and adapted the whole to the system followed in this present volume.—Ed.]

THE Narrinyeri aborigines occupy a portion of the coast of South Australia, near Adelaide. Their territory includes the shores of Encounter Bay, Lakes Alexandrina and Albert, and the country to the east of the Murray, for about 20 miles from its mouth. The first attempt to master and commit to writing the grammar of this language was made in 1843 by the Rev. H. E. Meyer, a Lutheran Missionary. His sketch of the grammar is not free from blunders. Nor can the present effort expect to be faultless, but it is approximately correct, being founded on a practical acquaintance with the language.

1. LETTERS.

The Narrinyeri have not the sounds of f, v, s, z, but they have the sonant sound of th (here written dh), as in the English words 'this,' 'thine,' 'breathe,' and the surd th, as in 'thin,' 'breath.'

2. GENERAL PRINCIPLES.

There is no article, but the numeral 'one' is used as a sort of indefinite article. Nouns, pronouns, and adjectives are declined by the use of affixes, and have forms for the singular, dual, and plural numbers.

Number is indicated by a change of termination; for example :—

	'Man.'	'Man.'	'Eye.'	'Lip.'	'Ear.'
Sing.	May-u.	Korni.	Min-a.	Mun-a.	Yur-e.
Dual	May-ula.	Korn-égk.	Min-ula.	Mun-ágge.	Yur-illa.
Plu.	May-una.	Korn-ar.	Min-una.
		'Eye.'	'Eyebrow.'	'Trouser.'
Sing.	Pil-i.		Pi-chágge.	Yerkoán-a.
Dual	Pil-ágge.		Pi-ko.	Yerkoan-ula.

In the declension of nouns the affixes used as case-endings may be regarded as post-positions. There is no distinction of gender in nouns and adjectives, but, for some words, there is a change of termination to indicate the feminine; as, yúga, 'brother,' yúgá-ta, 'sister.' This dialect likes to end its words with a vowel, especially the short i, which is here represented by y.

3. NOUNS.

Their Declension.—There are two declensions of nouns, the one used for words denoting human relationships, and the other for all nouns else.

(a.) Common Nouns.

Their cases.—For common nouns, the case-endings of the singular number are:—

The Genitive takes the affix -ald meaning 'of,' but, with place-names, 'at,' 'in,' 'upon.' This affix is also used as a separate word, with the sense of 'belonging to.'

The Dative 1. takes -amby, which may be translated 'for,' 'for the purpose of,' 'for the use of.'

The Dative 2. takes -ağk, 'to,' 'by,' and -ağai, 'on,' 'by'; but these two terminations seem to be interchangeable. The English for this case is, 'to,' 'with,' 'by,' 'on,' 'at'—either locative or instrumental.

The Ablative 1. has the affix -il; as, kornil mempir napağk, 'the man struck his wife'; from korni, 'man,' mempin, 'striking,' napy, 'wife'. This case means 'by,' 'through,' 'because of'—either instrumental or causative.

The Ablative 2., if used to signify 'place from,' takes -anmant; as, gūk perk-anmant, 'water from the well'; but, when it relates to persons or things, it takes -inend; as, gūm-anyir-inend pilinend, 'from your eye.' The English for this case is 'from.'

Another case-ending in the singular is -anyir; this I shall call Ablative 6. It denotes 'from,' expressing a cause and a result; but with pronominal adjectives, it stands for the Genitive form.

These are the principal cases, but the number of them may be multiplied indefinitely by the use of any of the following:—

4. POST-POSITIONS.

Amby, 'for.'	Moru, 'down.'
Güğkura, 'before.'	Tarağk, 'between.'
Gurn-kwar, 'outside.'	Tepağk, 'close to.'
Loru, 'up.'	Tuntağk, 'between two.'
Mare-muntunt, 'beneath.'	Tunti, 'in the middle.'
Uğul, uğunel, uğunai, 'in front of.'

Some of these, when used as post-positions to nouns, are constant; others vary their form when affixed to the dual or the plural.

PARADIGM OF THE DECLENSION OF COMMON NOUNS.

Korni, 'a man.'

	Singular.	Dual.	Plural.
Nom. 1.*	Korn-i	Korn-eġk	Korn-ar
Gen.	Korn-ald	Korn-eġk-al	Korn-an
Dat. 2.	{ Korn-aġk	Korn-uġeġun	Korn-uġar
Acc.	Korn
Voc.	Korn-inda.	Korn-ula	Korn-una
Abl. 1.	Korn-il	Korn-eġgul	Korn-ar
	2. Korn-anmant	Korn-uġeġun	Korn-uġar
	6. Korn-anyir	Korn-uġeġun	Korn-an

Porly, 'a child.'

	Singular.	Dual.	Plural.
Nom. 1.*	Porl-y	Porl-eġk	Porl-ar
Gen.	Porl-ald	Porl-eġk-al	Porl-an
Dat. 2.	{ Porl-aġk	Porl-uġeġun	Porl-uġar
Acc.	Porl-y.
Voc.	Porl-inda	Porl-ula	Porl-una
Abl. 1.	Porl-il	Porl-eġgul.	Porl-ar
	2. Porl-inend	Porl-(en)eġguland	Porl-ánand

(b.) Nouns of Relationship.

For nouns of relationship, the case-endings are :—

Acc., Gen.	—	-yin.†
Dative 1.	'for'	-yin-amby.
Dative 2.	'to'	-yin-aġk.
Causative.	'by'	-yin-inda.
Ablative 6.	'from'	-yin-anyir.

†That is, -in or -an preceded by the euphonic y.

For nouns of this kind there are also special terminations to express the nature of the relationship, whether 'mine,' 'yours,' or 'his'; thus :—

Naġ-gai, 'father,' 'my father.'

Yiko-wally, 'his father.' Gai-uwy, 'your father.'

Naġ-ku-owy, 'mother,' 'my mother.'

Naġku-wally, 'his mother.' Naġku-uwy, 'your mother.'

Kelan-owy, 'my (elder) brother.'

Kelan-wally, 'his brother.' Kelan-uwy, 'your brother.'

*See foot note, p. 15 of appendix.

Naǵgai, 'my father,' is thus declined :—

Nom. Naǵgai, 'my father.'

Gen. Naǵgai-yin, 'of my father.'

Dat. 1. Naǵgai-yin-amby, 'for my father.'

Dat. 2. Naǵgai-yin-aǵk, 'to my father.'

Acc. Naǵgai-yin, 'my father.'

Caus. Naǵgai-yin-inda, 'by my father.'

Abl. 6. Naǵgai-yin-anyir, 'from my father.'

All the other terms of relationship, with their possessive adjuncts, may be declined by adding these case-endings. But sometimes the Genitive of relationship puts the -ald of ordinary nouns before its own ending: as, tart-ald-an, 'of my (younger) brother.'

5. DERIVATIVES FROM NOUNS, &c.

Derivatives are formed from nouns by adding to them such terminations as :—

1. -inyeri, 'belonging to'; as, kurl-inyeri, 'a hat,' from kurl, 'head'; turn-inyeri, 'a boot,' from turny, 'foot'; kurr-inyer-eǵk, 'a pair of trousers,' from kurreǵk (dual) 'the shins.' Such a derivative word, when declined, is treated as a common noun, and the post-position is added to the adjective termination; as, kurl-inyer-ald, 'of a hat,' kurr-inyer-eǵkal, 'of a pair of trousers.'

2. -urumi or -urmi, which is added to the stem of a verb to denote 'the instrument' with which the action expressed by the verb is done, or a thing which is used for some particular purpose; as, tyety-urumi, 'oil, ointment,' from tyetyin, 'anointing'; kunk-urumi, 'pills,' from kunkun, 'swallowing'; mutt-urmi, 'a drink,' from muttun, 'drinking'; kalt-urmi, 'a spade,' from kalt, 'to dig'; drek-urmi, 'a tomahawk,' from drek, 'to cut or chip.' Here also the post-position is affixed to the formative for the purposes of declension.

3. -amaldy, which is added to the stem of a verb, to denote the agent or person who does the action; as, pett-amaldy, 'a thief,' from pett, 'to steal'; yelpul-amaldy, 'a liar,' from yelpul, 'to tell a lie.' Here also the post-position is placed at the end of the word.

4. -watyeri means 'full of'; as, ploǵge-watyeri, 'possessed of sorcery'; tuni-watyeri, 'full of sand.'

5. When yandy, 'old,' 'useless,' is used with a noun, it modifies the form of the noun, and attaches the case-ending to itself; as, yandy orn (for korn), 'an old man,' yant-ald orn 'of an old man'; yandy imin (for miminy), 'an old woman,' yant-ald min, 'of an old woman.'

6. PRONOUNS.

(a.) Personal Pronouns.

The personal pronouns have two forms in the nominative, the accusative, and the causative (Abl. 1) cases, as shown in the paradigm below; the second form is used only as an affix to nouns, or in rapid speaking. The third pronoun is of all genders.

PARADIGM OF THE DECLENSION OF THE PERSONAL PRONOUNS.

Singular
	1st.	2nd.	3rd.
Nom.	Gape, ap	Ginte, inde, ind	Kitye, itye, atye
Gen.	Gan-auwe*	Gum-auwe	Kin-auwe
Dat.	1. Gan-amby	Gum-amby	Kin-amby
	2. Gan-aġk	Gum-aġk	Kin-aġk
Acc.	Gan, an	Gum, um	Kin, in, ityanian
Voc.	—	Ginta, inda	—
Abl.	1. Gaty, atty†	Ginte, inde	Kil, il
	6. Gan-anyir	Gum-anyir	Kin-anyir

Dual
	1st.	2nd.	3rd.
Nom.	Gel, aġel	Gurl, ugurl	Keġk, eġk
Gen.	Lam-auwe*	Lom-auwe	Keġgun-auwe
Dat.	1. Lam-amby	Lom-amby	Keġgun-amby
	2. Lam-aġk	Lom-aġk	Keġgun-aġk
Acc.	Lam, alam	Lom, olom	Keġgún, eg-gún
Voc.	—	Gurla, ula	—
Abl.	1. Gel, aġel†	Gurl, ugurl	Keġk, eġk
	6. Lam-anyir	Lom-anyir	Keġgun-anyir

Plural
	1st.	2nd.	3rd.
Nom.	Gurn, arn	Gun, úgún	Kar, ar
Gen.	Nam-auwe*	Nom-auwe	Kan-auwe
Dat.	1. Nam-amby	Nom-amby	Kan-amby
	2. Nam-aġk	Nom-aġk	Kan-aġk
Acc.	Nam, anam	Nom, onom	Kan, an
Voc.	—	Guna, una	—
Abl.	1. Gurn, arn†	Gun, úgún	Kar, ar
	6. Nam-anyir	Nom-anyir	Kan-anyir

*A variant for the genitive form in -auwe is -auwurle.

† This is the case which our author calls the Causative-Ablative; I have entered it in the paradigms as Abl. 1.; it is equivalent to Threlkeld's Agent-Nominative (Nom. 2), for which see page 11.—ED.

An adjective or a possessive pronoun, when used as an attribute to a noun, is declined with the noun, and has its own case-endings; thus :—

Wundi kinauwe, 'his spear.' Wundi nung-gari, 'good spear.'

Singular.

Nom.	Wundi kin-auwe (nuḡgāri)
Gen.	Wund-ald kin-anyir-ald (nuḡgār-ald).
Dat.	2. Wund-āḡk kin-anyir-āḡk (nuḡgār-uḡar).
Acc.	Wund kin-auwe (nuḡgāri).
Abl.	1. Wund-il kin-anyir-il (nuḡgār-il).
	2. Wund-inend kin-anyir-inend.

Dual.

Nom.	Wund-eḡk keḡḡun-auwurle (nuḡgār-eḡk).
Gen.	Wund-eḡḡal keḡḡun-anyir-ald (nuḡgār-eḡkal).
Dat.	2. Wund-uḡeḡun keḡḡun-anyir-āḡk (nuḡgār-uḡeḡun).
Acc.	Wund-eḡk keḡḡun-auwe (nuḡgār-eḡk).
Abl.	1. Wund-eḡḡul keḡḡun-anyir-il (nuḡgār-uḡeḡul).
	2. Wund-uḡeḡun keḡḡun-anyir-inend.

Plural.

Nom.	Wund-ar kan-auwe (nuḡgār-ar).
Gen.	Wund-an kan-anyir-ald (nuḡgār-an).
Dat.	2. Wund-uḡar kan-anyir-eḡḡun (nuḡgār-uḡar).
Acc.	Wund-ar kan-auwe (nuḡgār-ar).
Abl.	1. Wund-ar kan-anyir-il (nuḡgār-ar).
	2. Wund-uḡar kan-anyir-inend.

Kornar ngruwar, 'many men.'

Plural.

Nom.	Korn-ar ḡruwar.
Gen.	Korn-an ḡrunt-uḡar.
Dat.	Korn-uḡar ḡrunt-uḡar.
Acc.	Korn-ar ḡruwar
Voc.	Korn-una ḡrúwún.
Abl.	1. Korn-ar ḡrunt-ar.
	2. Korn-uḡar ḡrunt-inend.

Peculiarities in the syntax of the pronouns are shown in such sentences as :—ḡaty mempīr kin-anyir-āḡk (not kin-auwe) kurly, 'I struck his head'; here apparently the object of a transitive verb is in the dative case; kil pleppin keḡḡun-auwe, pilar, 'he touched the eyes of these two'; but here the accusative case is used.

(b.) Demonstrative and Interrogative Pronouns.

The demonstrative pronouns are :—hik-kai, hik-ke, 'this'; hitye-katye, 'this one' (emphatic); and nai-ye, 'that.' They are thus declined :—

	Instant.	Proximate.	Remote.
	----- Singular -----
Nom.	Hikkai	Hitye-katye	Naiye
Gen.			Orn-auwe
Dat.			Orn-aġk
Acc.	Hin	Hityene katye	Orne
Abl.	Hil
	----- Dual -----
Nom.	Heġġeġk	Heġġene-keġk	Nakak
Acc.	Heġġun
Abl.	Heġġul
	----- Plural -----
Nom.	Harar	Harnakar	Narar
Acc.	Haran		Narar
Abl.	Harar

The interrogative pronouns are ġaġke, 'who'? minye, 'what'? They are thus declined :—

	Nġang-ke, 'who'?	Minye, 'what'?
Nom.	Ġaġke	Minye
Gen.	Nauwe, nauwurle	Mek
Dat.	1. Namby	Mekimby
	2. Nak (sing.)
	Nak-an-aġk (plu.)
Abl.	1. Ġande	Menġye, 'how'?

Other forms of the interrogative minye are :—minyandai, 'how often' (lit., 'what times'?) minyurti, 'what sort'? minyai or minyarai, 'what number'? minde, 'why? for what reason'? murel, 'with what intention'?

7. VERBS.

In the Narrinyeri dialect, the form of the verb is often participial, and is closely allied to the adjective.

If we take the root-form lak, 'to spear,' as the example of a transitive verb, the moods and tenses with their meanings may be shown thus :—

Indicative Mood.

TENSE.	MEANING.
1. Present tense,	I spear him.
2. Past tense,	I speared him.
3. Remote past tense,	I did spear him.
4. First (simple) future,	I will spear him.
5. Second (intention) future,	I will (i.e. , intend to) spear him.
6. Third (predictive) future,	I will spear him.
7. Repetitive tense.	I spear again.

Reflexive Mood.

I speared myself.

Reciprocal Mood.

Let us two spear each other.

Imperative Mood.

1. Simple imperative,	Do thou spear.
2. Prohibitive imperative,	Spear not.
3. Compulsory imperative.	Thou must spear.

Optative Mood.

DECLENSION OF THE VERBS.

In the declension of the moods and tenses of the Transitive and Intransitive Verbs, five sets of modified forms of Personal Pronouns are used as the subjects to the verb. They are :—

Singular
I.	Thou.	He.
With Transitive Verbs.
1. Gate (or gaty)	kile	ginte
2. Atte (or atty)	il	inde
With Intransitive Verbs.
3. Ap	inde	itye
4. Ap	inde	itye
5. Gap	gint	kity

Dual
We (two).	You (two).	They (two).
With Transitive Verbs.
1. Gel	ğurl	keğgul
2. Ağel	uğurl	eğul
With Intransitive Verbs.
3. Gel	uğurl	egk
4. Ağel	uğurl	eğk
5. Gel	gurl	keğk
Plural
We.	You.	They.
With Transitive Verbs.
1. Gurn	ğun	kar
2. Uğurn	uğun	ar
With Intransitive Verbs.
3. Uğurn	uğune	ar
4. Arn	uğune	ar
5. Gurn	ğun	kar

DECLENSION OF A TRANSITIVE VERB.

'Lak, 'to spear.'

Example of the Declension of a Transitive Verb in the Present Tense of the Indicative Mood.

Any Tense may be declined in full in the same manner.

T. 1. Sing.	Gate*	yan lakkin	I spear him.
	Ginte	" "	Thou spearest him.
	Kile	" "	He spears him.
Dual.	Gel	" "	We two spear him.
	Gurl	" "	You two spear him.
	Keğgul	" "	They two spear him.
Plu.	Gurn	" "	We spear him.
	Gun	" "	You spear him.
	Kar	" "	They spear him.

[*NOTE.—Yan, 'him,' is for ityan, an accusative form of the pronoun itye, kitye, 'he.' Instead of yan, any pronoun or noun in the accusative case may be used as the direct object of the transitive verb; and to decline the tenses of the Indicative and other Moods, five sets of pronouns are used, as shown above; the particular set which ought to be used with each tense is indicated by the 'superior' numeral put after the subject in the following paradigm of declension. Also, T. 1, 2, 3, &c. indicates the Tenses as shown on the previous page.—Ed.]

INDICATIVE MOOD.

- T. 1. Gate¹ yan lakkin. T. 4. Gate¹ yan lak-kani.
 2. Gate¹ yan lakkir. 5. Gate¹ lak-el ityan.

OPTATIVE OR POTENTIAL MOOD.

T. 1. Gap^s inanye gai.

INFINITIVE MOOD.

Gai, 'to come.'

PARTICIPLES.

Puntin, 'coming'; puntani, 'about to come.'

8. OBSERVATIONS ON THE USE OF THE VERBS.

1. Lakkin properly signifies 'piercing'; gate lakkin itye koye means 'I make a basket,' lit., 'I pierce that basket,' by piercing through and through the rushes of which it is made; but the word is mostly used to mean the casting of any missile, as a spear, a dart, a stone.

2. The intransitive verbs take the simple nominative form of the pronouns as their subject; the transitive verbs take the causative form.

3. There appear to be two conjugations for verbs in the Narrinyeri language:—(1.) those in which the form for the present indicative is the same as the present participle; as, merippin, 'cutting,' gate yan merippin, 'I cut it'; (2.) those that have another form for the present participle; as, dretulun, 'chipping,' gate yan drekin, 'I chip it.' Of the former class are mempín, 'striking'; pempín, 'giving'; morokkin, 'seizing.' To the latter belong pornun, 'die,' pornelin, 'dying'; nampulum, 'hide,' nampundelin, 'hiding'; nyrippin, 'wash,' nyribbelin, 'washing.'

4. Some intransitive verbs become transitive by changing the sonant g into the surd k, or by adding -undun to the root; as, pigkin ap, 'I fall,' piggen atte ityan, 'I throw it down'; yelkulum ap, 'I move,' yelkundun atte ityan, 'I move it'; nampulun ap, 'I hide,' nampundun atte ityan, 'I hide it.'

5. A causative meaning is given to verbal adjectives by adding -mindin to them; as, guldumulun, 'tired,' guldumulmindin, 'causing to be tired,' 'making tired.'

6. The most common auxiliary verbs are wallin, 'being,' and warin, 'making' or 'causing.' Examples of these are:—nuḡgari, 'good,' nuḡgá-wallin, 'being good,' nungá-warín, 'making good'; piltegi, 'strong,' pilteḡ-wallin, 'being strong,' pilteḡ-warín, 'making strong'; wirraḡ-wallin, 'being bad,' wirraḡ-warín, 'making bad.'

7. Verbs may therefore be arranged in four classes:—(1.) the simple verbs as, mempín, 'striking'; takin, 'eating'; ḡoppun, 'walking'; lulun, 'breaking'; nampulun, 'hiding'; (2.) verbs ending in -wallin, 'existing'; as, tunku-wallin, 'playing'; yuntu-wallin, 'crowding'; (3.) verbs ending in -warin, 'causing,' 'making'; as, nunku-warin, 'doing right'; wirrag-warin, 'doing wrong'; wurtu-warin, 'saturating with water'; (4.) verbs ending in -mindin; as, kildei-mindin, 'fetching.'

8. The word ellin means 'being,' 'state of being,' and sometimes 'doing'; but ennin is the proper word for 'doing'; el appears to mean 'intention or tendency towards'; as, luk ap atye ellir, 'thus I it did,' 'I did so'; gate yan ellani, 'I (emphatic) will do it'; gate yan ennani, 'I will do it'; en al yan, 'do with it,' i.e., 'do it'; kunitye ellir, 'enough he has been,' i.e., 'he is dead.' The following are the meanings which belong to ellin and ennin:—ellin, 'doing'; ellir, 'done'; ellani, 'about to do'; ellin, 'having'; ellin, 'being'; ellir, 'has been'; ennin, 'doing'; ennir, 'done'; ennani, 'will do.'

9. The stem of the word warin is used with the imperatives and interrogations; as, kuḡ war, 'do hear'; nak war, 'do see'; ḡai war, 'do come'; ḡinte wara, 'get out of the way,' lit., 'do thou'; ḡint war, 'do thou' (sc., it); mant war, 'do slowly'; murrumil war, 'make haste'; yelkul war, 'do more'; mint war, 'give me a bit,' lit., 'do to me thou'; kákin wara, 'put it here'; yaḡ wari, 'where do you go.'

10. There are idiomatic expressions in which the words 'go' and 'come' are omitted; as, loldu el itye, or loru el itye, 'up will he,' i.e., 'he will go'; mare el itye, 'down will he,' i.e., 'he will come'; loldan an, 'up it,' i.e., 'fetch it'; moru an, 'down him,' i.e., 'he has gone down'; mare itye, 'down he,' i.e., 'he has come'; moru el ap, 'down will I,' i.e., 'I will go down.'

Loru and loldu both mean 'up'; mare and moru, 'down.'

9. ADJECTIVES.

(1) Simple adjectives are nuḡḡari, 'good'; wirraḡi, 'bad'; and others; some of these are declined like nouns. (2) Verbal adjectives; as, talin, 'heavy'; balpin, 'white'; kinemin, 'dirty'; kinpin, 'sweet'; prittyin, 'strong.' Some adjectives have both forms; as, balpe, balpin, 'white.'

The mode of declining adjectives has already been shown in connection with the nouns.

Adjectives have no degrees of comparison, but the diminutive particle -ol—used both with adjectives and nouns—is sometimes added to the positive; as, murralappi, 'small'; murralappi-ol, 'very small.'

The numeral adjectives are:—yammalai or yammalaitye, 'one'; niḡgeḡk, 'two'; neppaldar, 'three'; beyond that, all numbers else are ḡruwar, 'many.' Ḡunkar means 'first.' Some adjectives are formed from adverbs; as, karlo-inyeri, 'of to-day,' 'new,' from karlo, 'to-day'; kaldan-inyeri, 'old,' from kaldan, 'a long time'; koḡk-inyeri, 'alone,' 'by itself,' from koḡk, 'away.'

10. ADVERBS.

There are numerous adverbs in the language, but the most common are :—

Adverbs of Time.

Grekald, 'to-morrow.'	Palli, 'while,' 'by-and-by.'
Gurintand, 'often.'	Rauwul, 'a long time ago.'
Hik, 'now.'	Uḡunuk, 'when' (relative).
Kaldau, 'a long time.'	Wataḡgrau, 'yesterday.'
Karlo, 'to-day.'	Yaral, 'when' (interrogative).
	Yun, 'by-and-by.'

Adverbs of Negation.

Nowaiye, 'none.'	Tarnalo, 'no more'; 'never.'
Nowaiye ellin, 'no more.'	Tarno, 'no'; 'not.'
Tarnalin, 'not yet.'	Tauo, 'don't' (imperative).
	Tarno el, 'don't' (do it).

Adverbs of Place.

Aiau, 'by (at) that place.'	Yak, yauo, 'where to.'
Akhi, alye, alyikke, 'here.'	Yaḡi, 'where'?
Alyenik, 'this place here.'	Yaḡalli, 'where is he'?
Kiuau, 'where' (relative).	Yarnd, 'whence'?
Ku-un, 'far off.'	Yarnd inde, 'whence thou'?
Ondu, 'over there.'	Yarnd ande, 'whither thou'?

Examples of the use of Adverbs.

Yak al inde tantani, 'where will you sleep'; ḡurluḡ aiau, 'at-the-place-where the hill' (is); manti kiuau tantani ap, 'the hut where I shall sleep'; ḡap taḡulun ku-un, 'I stand far off'; keḡk taḡulun ku-u, 'they two stand far off'; kar taḡulun kuar-un, 'they stand far off.'

The word wunye, 'then,' usually coalesces with the pronoun or verb-sign which follows it; as, wunyap, 'then I'; wunyar, 'then they'; wunyel itye, 'then will he.'

The words uk, ukke, luk, lun, 'so,' 'thus,' denote resemblance; as, luk u or lun u, 'so,' 'thus'; luk itye yarin, 'thus he speaks'; lun ellin, 'so being,' i.e., 'like'; luk uḡge, 'like this one'; hikkai ukke, 'this way'; hil amb uk, 'for this way,' i.e., 'because'; lun uk, 'thus'; ḡo uk ap, 'I go so.'

The word amby may be translated either 'instead of' (preposition) or 'because' (conjunction); as, kaldau amb, 'for a long time'; hil amb uk, 'because'; pinyatowe ald amb anai pel-berri means 'sugar for my tea.'

11. NOTES ON SYNTAX.

1. The form of the verb is constant in its mood and tenses; only the pronoun-subjects vary.

2. The postpositional suffixes to pronouns are always attached to the accusative case ; as, kan-a-ğk, 'to them.'

3. Pronominal adjectives are always declined with their nouns ; as, kin-anyir-a-ğk taldumand-a-ğk, 'to his house'; and so also hikakai korn, 'this man,' harnakar kornar, 'these men'; orna-ğk nu-ğgu-ğai, 'in that day.'

4. The diminutive is placed after the case-ending of the noun ; as, porl-ald-ol, 'of a little child'; porl-ar-ol, 'of little children.'

5. When an adjective and its noun are declined together, the case-ending is attached only to the adjective ; nu-ğgar-ald korn, 'of a good man.'

6. The post-position -uramb, 'for the purpose of,' is always attached to any verb which is put in the infinitive by another verb ; as, pempir il ana-ğk nakkari tak-uramb, 'he gave me a duck to eat.'

12. FORMATION OF WORDS.

This is effected by adding on various terminations, some of which have already been noticed :—

(1) -wallin, 'being'; as, pilgeru-wallin, 'greedy.'

(2) -warin, 'making'; as, ko-ğk-u-warin, 'sending away from,' from ko-ğk, 'apart'; ana-ğk-warin, 'preparing,' 'getting ready' (lit., 'making towards it'), from ana-ğk, kana-ğk, ityana-ğk, the dative of the pronoun itye.

(3) -atyeri, 'belonging to'; as, lamm-atyeri, 'wood for a fire,' from lammin, 'carrying on the back.'

13. LIST OF PREPOSITIONS, ADVERBS, &c.

Other pronouns are :—Ninna, ninnea, 'this'; ninna, 'that'; thaniya, gúndru, 'those'; warana, 'who'? wurni, 'whose'? wur-oḡa, 'whom'? whi, wodau, 'what'?

NOUNS.

Nouns are declined, as usual, by affixes; after the following manner:—

Kintalo-butu	Apa - n - undru
Dog-with	Water relating-to.
Bu'cu-ali	Kurna - thulka
Blind-of	Man relating-to.
Kurna - undru	Yinkani - ku
Man relating-to.	Yours-to.

THE VERB.

The Diyéri verbs, as in other Australian languages, have their tense-forms based on the forms of the imperative and the present participle, as shown in the paradigm below. The numbers indicate the tenses quoted, which are:—1. Infinitive Present; 2. Participle Present; 3. Participle Past; 4. Participle Reciprocal; 5. Indicative, Perfect Definite; 6. Indicative, Pluperfect; 7. Indicative, Future; 8. Imperative, Singular; 9. Imperative, Plural.

	'Grow.'	'Ask.'	'Strike.'

9.			Dimarau
	'Cover, bury.'	'See.'
1.	Numpani
2.	Numpuna	Niuna
3.	Numpathuruna
4.	Numpamulluna	Niamulluna
5.	Numpanaori†	Nianaori
6.	Numpunawonhi	Nianawonhi
7.	Numpalauni
8.		Nii or nili
9.		Niamaran

*The post-position mi means 'to.' †To decline any tense, prefix the causative form of the personal pronouns as the subject.

Some adjectives are participial in their form; as, mún'curuna, 'sick'; mundathuruna, 'lazy'; kukutharkuna, 'unlevel'; kúnkuna, 'lame'; mulluna, 'alike.'

Some adjectives seem to have forms of comparison; as, wordu, 'short,' wordu-murla, 'shorter,' wordu-muthu, 'shortest'; umu, 'good, umu-murla, 'better'; nuru, 'quick,' nuru-pina, 'very quick'; moa, 'hungry,' moa-pina, 'very hungry.'

(From Dr. Moorhouse's Grammar.)

THE MURUNDI TRIBE.

From Manum to Overland Corner, on the River Murray, and thirteen miles back from the river on each side; Blanchetown is their head-quarters.

	Plural
Nom.	Gemu	Gummu	Nana
Gen.	Gemnago	Gumnaago	Nanaago
Dat.	Gemunno	Gumunno	Nanunno

NOTE.—There are no abbreviated forms of the pronouns, and no gender forms.

DECLENSION OF THE VERB.

The verbs parldkun, 'strike' and terrin, 'stand,' may be taken as examples; in form, both of these are Present Participles.

1. Present.	Parldkun	Terrin
2. Aorist 1.	Parldka	Terra
3. Aorist 2.	Parldkul
4. Future	Parllda	Terridla
5. Imperative	Parlka	Terra
6. Conditional	Parldkunna	Terrinna
7. Prohibitive	Parldkumoi	Terrinni
8. Preventive	{ Parldkulmun- nainmudl }	{ Terrulmun- nainmudl }
9. Optative	Parllda	Terridla
10. Infinitive	Parldlappa	Terrilappa
11. Past Participle	Parldkulmuḡko	Terrulmuḡko

NOTE.—The meanings are:—No. 2, 'did strike'; No. 3, 'struck'; No. 6., 'would strike'; No. 7, 'strike not'; No. 8, 'that...may not strike'; No. 9, 'may strike'; No. 10, 'for-to strike'; No. 11, 'having struck.' And similarly for the verb terrin.

THE MAROURA TRIBE.

System of kinship found amongst the Maroura tribe.

The Maroura inhabit the country at the junction of the River Darling with the River Murray, and a considerable distance up the Darling.

In the names for relationship, there are different terminations for those that are 'mine,' 'yours,' 'hers'; e.g.,

Kambiya, 'my father.'	Gammuḡiyi, 'my mother.'
Kambiyanna, 'your father.'	Gammuḡammu, 'your mother.'
Kambiyanna, 'his father.'	Kittha ḡammu, 'his mother.'

These Marouras are the tribe which descended the Darling between the years 1831 and 1836 (cf. "Mitchell's Expedition"). The Narrinyeri have a tradition that they came down the Darling and then across the desert to the head of Lake Albert.

[ABSTRACT.]

GRAMMAR

THE ABORIGINES OF WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

[This short sketch of the Grammar of the language of Western Australia is the only one that I can find anywhere. It is in "The Western Australian Almanac for 1842," and is printed there as an appendix, 'compiled by Chas. Symmons, Protector of the Aborigines, from material furnished by Mr. Francis F. Armstrong, the native interpreter.' Some portions of it are taken 'from the preface to Captain (Sir George) Grey's vocabulary.' I have abridged the material of the Grammar, and adapted it to present uses.—ED.]

I. NOUNS.

The cases are indicated by inflections, thus :—

The Genitive takes the suffix -ák, which means 'of' or 'belonging to'; some districts say -àg̃ instead of -ák. Examples.:—Kalla, 'fire,' kalla-r-ák, 'hot'; miki, 'moon,' mik-àg̃, 'moonlight'; dta, 'mouth,' dta-làg̃, 'tongue'; gabbi, 'water,' gabbi-làg̃, 'belonging to water'; budjor, 'ground,' budjor-làg̃, 'belonging to the ground'; mammarápák gidji, 'a man's spear'; yageák boka, 'a woman's cloak.'

The Dative; its sign is -àl, sometimes -ák; as, g̃adjo allija g̃ula g̃-àl yo g̃aga, 'I gave it to the child'; Perth-ák bardin, 'going to Perth.'

The Accusative ends in -in; as, g̃adjo yan-gorin g̃an-gau bru, 'I do not see the kangaroo.'

The Ablative affixes -àl to the nominative case; as, g̃adjo boat-àl Perth-ák bardàga, 'I went in a boat to Perth'; g̃alata kai-bra-àl watto bardàga, 'we went away in a ship'; balgun-àl bumaga, 'she was killed by a gun'; durda cart-àl barduk bardàga, 'the dog went away with the cart.'

The Plural number is indicated by adding the numerals, but all beyond three are bula, 'much,' 'many.' The words for human beings add -mân, or -arra, or -gârra to form the plural; mân is an abbreviated form of mân-da, 'altogether,' 'collectively.' Words ending with a vowel take -mân; those ending with a consonant take -gârra; as, kardo, 'a husband or wife,' plu., kardo-mân; yago, 'a woman,' plu., yago-mân; djuko, 'sister,' plu., djuko-mân; mammul, 'son,' plu., mammul-gârra; gûlag, 'a child,' plu., gûlag-gârra.

DECLENSION OF A NOUN.

		Yago, 'a woman.'
		Singular.	Plural.
Nom.	Yago		Yago-mân
Gen.	Yago-ik		Yago-mân-ak
Dat.	Yag-ol or Yago-âl		Yago-mân-âl
Acc.	Yago-in		Yago-mân-in
Abl.	Yago-âl		Yago-mân-âl

The Ablative means 'with,' 'by means of.'

Examples:—Yago maiak-âl yugau bardâga, 'a woman came to the house'; n'yagga yago-ak wanna, 'that is a woman's staff'; gadjo marain yago-âl yogâga, 'I gave flour to a woman'; gadjo yago-in djinnâg-ga, 'I saw a woman'; budjor yago-âl bianâga, 'the ground was dug by a woman.'

The commonest and most useful nouns are :—

Time, Weather, &c.	Elements.

Stick (wood)—garba.	„ (stream)—gabbi gurjait.
„ (fire)—kalla-matta.	Young (animal)—noba.

2. ADJECTIVES.

The adjectives most commonly in use are:—

Alive—won-gin, dordäk	Hot—kallag.
Angry—g'arrağ	Like (similar)—mogin.
Arm (left)—n'yarlo.	Little—n'yu-map.
„ (right)—g'un-man.	Long, length—walaiadi.
Bad—djul.	Low—gar-däk.
Big—gomon.	Narrow—nulu.
Bitter—djallam.	Near—barduk.
Black—moän.	Old—windo.
Clear (as water)—karrail.	Red—wilgiläg.
Cold—nagga.	Short—gorad (-da).
Dead—wonnaga.	Sick—mendaik.
Dry (not wet)—ilar.	Slow—däbbäk.
Far away—urar.	Soft—g'unyak.
Fat—boain-gadäk.	Sweet—mulyit.
Fresh—milgar.	Tall—urri.
Good—gwabba.	Thin—kotyellarra.
Green—gerip-gerip.	True—bundo.
Hard—murdoen.	Wet—balyan.
Health (in)—barra-barra.	White—wilban.
High—iragan.	Wild—waii-waii.

A substantive acquires an adjective meaning by taking such suffixes as -gadäk, 'having, possessing,' -bru, 'without,' which corresponds to the English suffix 'less'; as, jigala-gadäk, 'having horns,' 'a cow'; kardo-gadäk, 'having a husband or wife,' 'married'; boka-bru, 'cloak-less'; gabbi-bru, 'without water.'

Comparison of Adjectives.

Some adjectives add jin for the comparative; as, from däbbäk, 'slow,' däbbäk-jin, 'slower'; gwidjir, 'sharp,' gwidjir-jin 'sharper'; yerräk, 'high,' yerräk-jin, 'higher.' But usually a reduplication makes the comparative, and -jil is added to the base for the superlative; as, gwabba, 'good,' gwabba-gwabba, 'better'; gwabba-jil, 'best.' This intensive particle -jil, equivalent to 'verily,' may be added to other parts of speech; as, kardo-jil, 'one who is in the direct line for marrying with another'; dadja-jil, 'it is certainly meat'; kannah-jil, 'is it indeed so?' The English 'very' is rendered by a reduplication; as, mulyit-mulyit, 'very sweet.'

Numerals.

'One,' gain; 'two,' gudjal; 'three,' warh-raġ; 'four,' gudjal-gudjal; 'five' is marh-jin bāga, 'half the hands'; 'ten' is belli-belli-marhjin bāga, 'the hand on either side.'

In reckoning time the natives say 'sleeps' for days, and 'summers and winters' for years. There is no Article.

3. PRONOUNS.

The pronouns must be carefully used, for a very slight change in the termination of any one of them will alter altogether the force and meaning of a sentence.

The personal pronouns are :—

Singular.	Plural.
Gadjo or ġanya, 'I.'	Gala-ta, 'we.'
N'yundo or ġinni, 'thou.'	N'yuraġ, 'ye.'
Bal, 'he, she, it.'	Balgun, 'they.'

They are thus declined :—

		Singular.
		1st.	2nd.	3rd.
Nom.	{	Gadjo	{ N'yundo	} Bal
		Ġanya	{ Ġinni
Gen.		Gannalāk	Nyunnolāk	Balāk
Dat.		Ġanna	N'yunno	Balāk
Accu.		Ġanyain	Ġinnin	Balin
Abl.				Balāl
 Plural.
Nom.		Galata	N'yuraġ	Balgun
Gen.		Gannilāk	N'yuraġāk	Balgunāk
Dat.		Gannilāk	N'yuraġāl	Balgunāk
Acc.		Gannil (-in)	N'yuraġin	Balgunin
Abl.		Gannilāl	N'yuraġāl	Balgunāl

There are thus two forms for the Sing. Nom. of the first and second pronouns; ġadjo and n'yundo seem to be used with an active sense of the verb, but ġanya and ġinni with a passive sense; for there is no passive form of the verb, and there is no verb 'to be'; ġanya and ġinni are always used with a participle or an adjective; ġadjo and n'yundo are never so used. Examples of their use:—Ġadjo djinnaġ, 'I see,' but ġanya bardin, 'I am going'; ġadjo dtan, 'I pierce,' but ġanya ġannaun, 'I am eating'; ġadjo burno dendaġaga, 'I climbed a tree,' but ġanya waugālāl bukkanaġa, 'I was bitten by a snake'; ġanya windo, 'I am old'; ġanya ġarraġ, 'I am angry.' Similarly for the second pronouns; as, n'yundo kattidj, 'do you understand?' but yan ġinni wan-ġauin, 'what are you talking about? n'yundo naitjak gabbi ganna ga'gau-bru, 'why do you not fetch me water'? but ginni naitjak balin bumawin, 'why are you beating me'?; ginni djul, 'you are wicked'; ginni goradda, 'you are short.'

		Dual
		1st.	2nd.	3rd.
Nom.	1.	Galli	Nubal	Bula
	2.	Galla	Nubal	Bulala
	3.	Gannik	Nubin	Bulen.

Another form of gannik is gannana.

The forms marked nom. 1 are used by brothers and sisters or two friends closely related; nom. 2., by parent and child or by nephew and uncle; nom. 3., by husband and wife or by two persons of different sexes affectionately attached, or (gannana) by two brothers-in-law.

The Possessive Pronouns are:—

Ganna, 'my,' gannalak, 'mine'; n'yunna, 'thy,' n'yunnalak, n'yunnalag, 'thine'; balak, balalak, 'his, her, its,' gannilak, 'our or ours'; n'yuragak, 'your or yours'; balgunak, 'their or theirs.' The Demonstrative Pronouns are:—N'yagga, 'that,' 'those'; nidja, 'this,' 'these.' The Interrogative Pronouns are:—Ganni, 'who?' i.e., 'who are you'? gando, 'who?' i.e., 'who did that'? gannoq, 'whose'?

4. VERBS.

The verbs in most common use are:—

Arise—irabin	Fight—bakadju
Beat—buma	Fly—bardag
Become—abbin	Go—bardo; watto
Bite—bakkan	Go away—kolbardo
Break—takkan	Hear—kattidj
Bring; carry off; take away—barrag	Pain—bakkan
Marry—kardo barrag	Pierce—dtan
Burn (fire)—burrarap	See—djinnag; gan-gau
Bury—bianan	Sit—ginnau
Carry—gagan	Speak—wan-gau
Cook—dukun	Spear—gidjil
Cry—mirag	Stand—yugau
Cry out—mirau	Take—gagan
Dig—bian	Tear—jeran
Eat, drink—ganno; nalgo.	Throw—gwardo
Fear—waen	Tie—yutarn
	Understand—kattidj
	Walk—gannau.

Imperatives are:—

Come here—kowa-kowa, yual	Leave it alone—bal or wanja
Go on—gatti	Listen—nah-nah
Get up—irap	Take care—garrodjin
Go away—watto	Stay, remain—nannap

Tenses.

1. Indic. present.—For this, use either the infinitive or the form of the present participle; as, gadjjo djinnag, 'I see'; but ganya bumawin, 'I am beating.'
2. Indic. preterite.—Use the past participle, or add -ga to the infinitive; the relative distance of the past periods of time is indicated by prefixing to the tense the words gori, 'just now,' karamb, 'a short time since,' gorah, 'a long time ago.'
3. Indic. future.—Here the first and second personal pronouns singular become gadjul and n'yundul, 'I will,' 'you will.' The distance of the future time is indicated by placing before the verb the adverbs burda, 'presently,' and mila for any more remote time.
4. Imperative mood.—Lay emphasis on the last vowel of the present indicative.
5. Participle present.—Add -in or -win to the infinitive.
 " past.—Add -ga to the infinitive.
6. Passive voice.—Here the form of the sentence is elliptical; therefore ganya, ginni are used with the past participle and the ablative of the instrument or cause.

DECLENSION OF A TRANSITIVE VERB.

Buma, 'to beat,' 'kill,' 'blow as a flower.'

Infinitive—Buma. Part. pres.—Bumawin.

Part. past.—Bumaga.

Tense 1. *bumawin. T. 2. *gori bumaga. T. 3. †burda buma.

T. 4. buma.

*The pronouns to be used here are:—Sing. ganya, ginni, bal; Plur. galata, n'yurag, balgun; but instead of ganya and ginni, T. 2. takes gadjjo and nyundo; †there use the forms gadjul, n'yundul.

Passive Voice.—For the passive voice, use the same tense-forms as in the active voice, that is, buma for the pres. and the fut., and bumaga for the past, but prefix to them the accusative cases of the personal pronouns; thus, ganya-in gori bumaga, 'I was beaten lately'; lit., '(some one) beat me lately.' But the ablative of the cause or instrument may also be used to form a passive voice; thus, ganya gidjiäl dtannäga, 'I am pierced by a spear.'

The substantive verb.—There does not appear to be any copula; it is certainly not used in such sentences as ganya yuläp, 'I am hungry'; ginni kotyelara, 'thou art thin'; bal windo, 'he is old'; galata gwabba, 'we are good'; n'yurag djul, 'you are wicked'; balgun mindait, 'they are sick.'

5. ADVERBS.

The adverb is placed before the verb; useful adverbs are:—

After (behind)— golan-ga	Never— yuatjil
Again— garro	No— yuada
Already— gori	Not— bart; bru; yuada
Always— dowir	Now— yaii
Before (in front)— gwaicägät	Perhaps— gabbain
Close to; near— barduk	So— winniräk
Continually— kalyagal	So many— winnir
Enough— beläk	That way— wunno
Formerly— karamb	Then— garro
Here— n'yal	There (prox.)— yellinya
How many— nämman	„ (remote)— boko; bokoja
Immediately— gwaicë; ilak	Where— winji; winjal; yan
Thus— wanno-ic	Yes— qua
More— gatti-gatti	Yonder— bokoja

6. PREPOSITIONS.

These are few in number:—

After (dat.)— golağ	On (upon)— gadja
Among (partitive)— mända	To— -äk or -äl
„ (mixed with)— kardagor	With (in company with)—
By (affix)— -äl	„ gämbarn (takes the acc.);
In (within)— bura	„ barduk (takes the dat.)
Of— -äk	Without— bru

In use, they are all post-positions, and are always placed after the noun or pronoun. Gadja is used of one thing lying on another, but never of anything lying on the ground.

7. INTERROGATION, AFFIRMATION, NEGATION.

A question is asked by putting kännah at the end of the sentence; as, n'yundo tonkä, kännah, 'do you hear?' An answer may be given by qua, 'yes,' or by affixing -bäk to the word used in reply; as, yallanait, 'what is that?' burnu-bäk, 'it is a tree.' If the reply is negative, put bart or bru after verbs, and yuada after adjectives.

8. CONJUNCTIONS.

Gudjir, 'and'; minniġ, 'if'; ka, 'or.' There is no word for 'when,' but minniġ and ka are used in its stead; for instance, 'when I see you to-morrow' will be expressed by 'if I see you to-morrow'; and 'when did you come to Perth?' will be 'did you come to Perth to-day or yesterday?'

9. INTERJECTIONS.

Nah—ah! so! (to indicate that a person is listening to what is related), and n'yón—'alas!'

GRAMMAR AND VOCABULARY

OF THE ABORIGINAL DIALECT CALLED

THE WIRRADHURI.

[The Wirradhuri dialect, or, as I call it, the Wirádhari, covers the whole heart of N. S. Wales; its limits are shown on the map of the native tribes. I consider myself fortunate in having secured the publication of the Grammar and Vocabulary of so important a tribe. The following manuscript was written about fifty years ago by the late Archdeacon Günther, and is specially reliable because of its author's character and experience, and because, at that time, the tribe had not yet begun to decay, and its language was entire. He was educated for the Ministry at Basle, in Switzerland, attending lectures there at the University and the Missionary College; subsequently he prosecuted his studies at the C. M. Society's College, Islington, London.

In 1837, he commenced his missionary work among the aborigines of the Wirádhari tribe at "Wellington Valley," now Wellington, in New South Wales. Here he compiled this Grammar and Vocabulary; he also translated the Gospel by St. Luke and portions of the Prayer Book for the use of the tribes on the Macquarie River and the neighbouring country. His efforts and those of the mission party, in ameliorating the condition of the natives and teaching them, met with considerable success. After the mission was abandoned by the authorities, he was induced by Bishop Broughton to accept the parish of Mudgee, where he laboured for many years, and died in December, 1879.

These MSS. are the property of the late Mr. Günther's son, the present Archdeacon of Camden, New South Wales, who has kindly lent them to me for this purpose. In editing them, I have retained the author's mode of spelling the native words, and have made only some slight alterations in the form of the matter of the Grammar and the Vocabulary, with the view of securing greater symmetry throughout.—ED.]

1. THE GRAMMAR.

1. THE DECLENSION OF NOUNS.

There is, properly speaking, only one primary declension, but the principle of assimilation, to which the language has a strong tendency, sometimes produces slight variations of the terminations of the nouns before the case-endings; similarly, when the last letter but one of the stem is i.

In order to cover all these variations, the number of the declensions will amount to eight. It must, however, be observed that here the formation of cases differs materially from the modes used in other languages, at least from that of the Latin and Greek. The simple or nominative form undergoes no alteration, but, to form the cases, it takes additions by means of postfixes. The only apparent exception to this rule is that where the letter i is cast out. The number of cases cannot easily be fixed, since almost every relation in which a noun may be placed is signified by some postfix or other; those given in the examples below include the most common and essential relations.

A strange peculiarity of this language is the existence of two nominative-forms—the one the simple nominative or nominative-declarative, corresponding to the question ‘who or what is it?’ and the other the nominative active, when the thing or person spoken of is considered as an agent; this answers to the question, ‘who or what does it?’ The genitive and the dative are alike; the accusative is the same as the simple nominative; the vocative is known by the exclamatory word ‘ya’ put before the simple nominative, or by its termination, which is like that of the genitive.

The case-endings and their meanings may be shown thus:—

Case.	Terminations.	Meaning.
1. Nominative		the simple form.
2. Nom. agent.	-du, -dyu, -gu, lu, -ru	the agent form.
3. Genitive	-gu	‘of;’ ‘belonging to.’
4. Dative	-gu	‘to,’ ‘for,’ ‘towards.’
5. Accusative	the same as nom. 1.	the direct object.
6. Vocative	prefixes ya to nom. 1.
7. Locomotive	-dyi, -li, -ri	place from which.
8. Conjunctive	-durai or -durei	‘together with.’
9. Locative	-da, -dya, -ya, -la, -ra	‘in,’ ‘on,’ ‘at.’
10. Instrumental	-durada	‘by means of.’

The numbering of the cases corresponds with that shown on the Paradigm.

The same word is both singular and plural without change; only when the idea of plurality is to be conveyed, the noun adds the word gala ġ and is then declined like walla ġ of the paradigm.

* These words are shown here in all the principal cases only for the sake of example.

* Thus also is declined ng final, even when preceded by the vowel i; as, kaling, 'water,' nom. ag., kalindyu, &c., &c.

NOTE.—By using other postfixes, additional cases may be formed; e.g., birandi and biranga, added to the proper name Bidara, give Bidarai-birandi and Bidarai-biranga, 'from ('at') Bidara's place.'

The examples given above show that the variations in declension arise from assimilation. Thus, when r or l is the last sound of the word, these letters assimilate the initial consonant of the postfix. If the vowel of the last syllable is i, either ending the word or syllable or followed by n, euphony adds the sound of y to the a of the postfix; thus, dya, dya, dyi appear instead of da, du, di. When i is ejected, this rule does not apply. The ejection of i preceded by a takes place in the Nom. 2 and in the Locative.

If the possessive pronoun is put before its noun, it is declined with the same termination as the noun. But the more common practice is to put the pronoun behind it in an abbreviated form as a postfix; as, buraigundi, 'to my boy'; buraigunu, 'to your boy'; buraigugula, 'to his boy.' 'To my boy,' with the possessive pronoun detached, would be gaddigu buraigu.

2. THE COMPARISON OF ADJECTIVES.

There is no comparative form of the adjective, nor, properly speaking, a superlative, though certain terminations, such as bağ 'very,' bambilag 'exceedingly,' express a superlative or a very high quality of the thing. Hence the comparisons on things are expressed in an indistinct manner. To say, 'this is better than that,' would be ginna marog, wirai gannalla; lit., 'this is good, not that'; nila garambag, gainguagual, lit., 'this very good, that also.' But to say, 'this is the best of all,' would be nila marogbangan, wirai igianna ginnallal; lit., 'this is good indeed, these are not like it.' Adjectives may be declined like nouns, but in syntax they are not always declined.

3. THE VERB.

The study of the verb is attended with some difficulty on account of its many tenses and modifications; it is, however, conjugated in a very regular manner, and, excepting the imperative, it is non-inflexional throughout all its tenses, all the persons, both singular and plural, having the same form. The conjugations may be reduced to about five, nor do these vary much, and, so far as they do vary, they follow strict rules according to the termination of the last syllable and the vowel preceding it.

The verbs, then, are arranged in conjugations according to the terminations of the present tense of the indicative; thus:—

Terminations of Conjugations.

1. -anna or -ãna; 2. -unna; 3. -inga; 4. -arra; 5. -irra.

The vowel of the penultimate syllable may be said to terminate the radical part of the verb, which is retained in all the tenses and modifications, whilst the remainder is liable to be thrown off. Those tenses where a becomes ai are only apparent exceptions to the rule.

In the formation of the tenses and modifications, the letter r is changed into its relative liquid l, and n, for the sake of euphony, is changed into m by assimilation. Euphony also requires an a terminating the root to be modified into the diphthong ai; and nd, on account of the influence of the preceding i, becomes ndy.

THE TENSES.

There are no fewer than ten tenses in the language; besides those common to most languages, some are peculiar tenses which have an adverbial signification.

The following shows the conjugation of a simple verb:—

Buma, 'beat.'

INDICATIVE MOOD.

T. 1. (Present Tense).

Sing.	1. Gaddu* bumarra	I beat.
	2. Gindu* bumarra	Thou beatest.
	3. Guin* bumarra	He, she, beats.

Dual.	Galli bumarra	We (two) beat.
	Galligu bumarra	He and I beat.

Plu.	1. G'éanni bumarra	We beat.
	2. Gindugir bumarra	You beat.
	3. Guaingulia bumarra	They beat.

T. 2. Gaddu bumalgarrin	T. 6. Gaddu bumalinni
3. Gaddu bumalgurranni	7. Gaddu bumalgirri
4. Gaddu bumae	8. Gaddu bumal'gurriawagirri
5. Gaddu bumalguan	9. Gaddu bumal'garrigirri
T. 10. (Ut.-perf.) Gaddu bumalyigirri.

The T. numbers here indicate the Tenses as on page 26 of this volume.

INFINITIVE.

Bumalli, 'to beat.'

IMPERATIVE.

Sing.	1. Bumallidyu, 'let me beat.'
	2. Bumalla (†buma), 'beat thou.'
	3. Bumallaguin barri, 'let him beat.' ‡
Dual	Galli bumalli, 'let us two beat.'
	Gulag'alligunna bumalli, 'let him and me beat.'
Plu.	1. Bumalli g'éanni, 'let us beat.'
	2. Gindugir bumalla (†buma), 'beat you.'
	3. Bumalla guaingulia barri, 'let them beat.'

* For emphasis use here—Sing. 1. yallu or baládu, or yalludu; 2. balundu; 3. balaguin. † This abbreviated form is often used. ‡ The verbs ending in -ana or -anna differ from this in Imp. sing. 1, 2, 3.

VERBAL NOUN.

Bumalǵidyǵal (bumalǵidyǵal), 'beating.'

This form, being a verbal noun, can never be used as a participle. In the Greek language and the German, the infinitive serves as a verbal noun; so also the Latin supine and gerundive.

The forms which supply our participles are classed with the modifications of the verb. The subjunctive is formed with mal-laǵ, the optative with baǵ; for there are no real subjunctive or potential forms. Sentences of that description are expressed by a kind of auxiliary, such as garra or mallaǵ; or by the future tense, with the conditional conjunction yandu attached:—

Yandundu dalgirri, 'if I should eat.'

Gaddu garra dalgirri, 'I can or would eat.'

Gaddu mallaǵ dé, 'I would or should eat' (or have eaten).

Yandundu mallaǵ dé, 'if you did eat' (or would eat).

Mallaǵ here is not a verb but a mere subjunctive particle.

Nor is there a form for the passive. A kind of passive is sometimes expressed by putting the subject in the accusative, along with the active form of the verb; but the source whence comes the action is not named, for that can only be put in the agent-nominative case. Hence, it must be that this is not in reality a passive, but an active sentence; only, for the sake of laying more emphasis on the action done, the agent is omitted.

TABLE OF CONJUGATIONS, PRINCIPAL TENSES, AND MOODS.

	Present.	Imperfect.	Perfect.
1.	Yannanna	Yanné	Yan-nān (i.e. , -naán)
	Guna	Guné	Gaguain
2.	Yunna	Yunné	Yunnān
3.	Gumbiǵa	Gumbinna	Gumbinnān
4.	Baddarra	Baddae	Baddalguān
5.	Gaddambirra	Gaddambie	Gaddambilguān
	Future.	Infinitive.	Imperative.
1.	Yannagirri	Yannagi	Yannada*
	Gagirri	Gagi	Gaga
2.	Yungirri	Yungi	Yunga
3.	Gumbigirri	Gumbigi	Gumbidya
4.	Badalirri	Badalli	Badalla
5.	Gaddambilgirri	Gaddambilli	Gaddambia

This table contains all the principal tenses—those in which different conjugations vary. The other tenses of each conjugation follow the model given for the verb bumarra. Of course, not every verb is used in all the tenses; thus, yunné, the imperfect, is not used. The numbers indicate the conjugations.

* The imperative is often shortened; as, nada, na; galla, ga; malla, ma.

The conjugations of certain letters may occasionally, but rarely, cause the general rules to be violated for the sake of euphony; thus, the verb mugāna has in the perfect tense mugaiguān, not, as might be expected, mugaguan, no doubt, on account of two 'g's' being so near each other.

4. MODIFICATIONS OF THE VERB.

A characteristic feature and peculiarity of this aboriginal dialect is the use of numerous postfixes. By means of these, the noun shows an unusual number of cases, which supply in a certain measure the absence of our prepositions. In a similar manner, the verb takes additions or changes of its form, by which new forms it expresses its modified significations according to the various relations in which the simple verb may be placed. These tend to enrich the language considerably, since the modified ideas implied in them often produce quite a new kind of word or signification. As new verbs, they may be adjusted to some one or other of the examples already given, agreeably to their terminations. Hence they can never be supposed to be merely conjugations.

For the sake of convenience, I shall carry one verb through the modifications, though it cannot be expected that all verbs are used or needed in every modification. I will take the root-form buma, 'beat,' as the chief example of these modifications, but another suitable one will be always added.

Some of the postfixes in those examples have doubtless lost or changed their original signification in certain verbs.

Examples of the use of Suffixes to modify the meaning of Verbs.

1. Bianna, 'a constancy of action'; as, bumal-bianna, 'to be always beating'; ġa-bianna, 'to be always looking.'

2. Gunnanna, 'a present continuance of action'; as, bumal-gunnanna, 'to be now beating'; ġa-gunnanna, 'now looking on.'

Both of these are used for our participle, but in a definite and indicative way; but as, like other verbs, they are conjugated, and never employed as adjectives, they cannot be considered as participial forms, but only as modifications of the verbs.

3. Awaigunnanna, 'a long continuance'; as, bumal-awaigunnanna, 'to be beating a long time'; ġagawaigunnanna, 'to be looking on long.' This does not much differ from No. 2.

4. Garrimāna, 'a continuance of all day long'; bumal-garrimāna, 'to be beating all day long'; bunba-garrimāna, 'to run about all day long.'

5. Guabianna, 'a continuance for the night'; bumallai-guabianna, 'to beat (fight) all the night'; winai-guabianna, 'to sit up all night.'

6. Dillinga (reflexive); as, bumangi-dillinga, 'to beat one's self'; mirama-dillinga, 'to defend one's self.'

7. Lanna (reciprocal); as, bumal-lanna, 'to beat each other,' 'to fight'; nurungamil-lanna, 'to love each other.'

8. Alinga (reiterative); as, bumal-alinga, 'to beat again'; yannai-alinga, 'to go again.'

9. Numinga implies that an action is to last for a little time only before another; as, bumal-numinga, 'to beat previously'; ganuminga, 'to see beforehand.'

10. Mambirra is causative and permissive; as, bumali-mambirra, 'to let beat'; yal-mambirra, 'to cause one to speak,' 'to teach.'

11. Gambirra, instrumental; meaning that a thing has been done by means of an instrument, tool, or weapon; as, bumal-gambirra (not used); bangal-gambirra, 'to break by throwing at (or hitting) with something.'

12. Billinga, submissive; expressive of obedience to a command; as, buma-billinga, 'to beat when told or ordered'; yanna-billinga, 'to go when ordered off.'

13. Eilinga implies a vicarious action—an action done on behalf of, or instead of, another; as, bum-eilinga, 'to beat instead of another'; barram-eilinga, 'to get or provide for another.'

14. Duringa seems to intimate a change of action, the turning of one's attention from one thing to another, or to do a thing well and thoroughly; as, bumal-duringa, 'to leave of the present act of beating'; winnanga-duringa, 'to forget,' 'to think of something else'; 'to reflect.'

15. Wanna probably signifies an aim at or a purpose to do a thing; or rather, to act in a kind of series of doings, one after another, going all round, or to be just in the act of doing; as, bumalla-wanna, 'to beat one after another'; yannaia-wanna, 'to walk away,' 'to walk from one place to another.'

16. Danna means the resuming of an action after having taken refreshment; as, bumal-danna, 'to beat again' after eating; bumba-danna, 'to run off again' after a little refreshment.

17. Gilanna indicates a kind of dual action; as, bumalu-gilanna, 'two to beat together at once'; bumban-gilanna, 'two to run together.'

18. Yarra is the verb 'to speak'; it can be put or joined to any verb as a postfix, and is then expressive of a command; 'ba' is put between as a uniting syllable; thus, yanna-ba-yarra, 'to order to go,' 'to send away'; bumal-ba-garra, 'to tell to beat.'

19. Birra, nirra, dirra, banirra, bamarra, bunmarra; these particles, when joined to a neuter or an intransitive verb, give it a transitive and causative signification; thus, from gannarra, 'to burn,' is formed gannal-birra, 'to set on fire'; ballunna, 'to die' gives ballubunirra, 'to kill'; banganna, to break' (of itself), banga-dirra, 'to chop, smash'; yannanna 'to go,' yannabanirra, 'to make go,' 'to drive,' and yanna-bunmarra, 'to cause to go away'; from mab-binga, 'to stay, stop' comes mabbi-bamarra, 'to make one stay.' Bunmarra is a verb by itself signifying 'to make, to do.'

20. Maranna implies a reference to a previous action, on which the action of the verb is dependent; as, bumal-maranna, 'to beat after' having caught one; dal-maranna, 'to eat after' having picked it up.

21. Nāna implies the adverb 'after'; as, bumal-nāna, 'to beat after another'; bunban-nāna, 'to run after another'; ḡan-nāna, 'look after one.'

22. Einga implies 'precedent, before'; as, bumal-einga, 'to beat first,' i.e., before another; ḡollenge-einga, 'to return first.'

23. Naringa, joined to a few verbs, implies that the action is done by 'falling'; also figuratively, it is expressive of a rest after moving; as, (1.) banga-naringa, 'to break by falling'; dalbanaringa, 'to be dashed by falling'; (2.) winaringa, 'to settle down'; warran-naringa, 'to make a call and stay a little.'

24. Bilāna or balāna is always preceded by m even after l. It implies the idea of 'moving on' or going along, and gradually getting into, whilst engaged in an action; as, ya-mbilāna, 'to cry whilst going along'; dé-mbilāna, 'to eat whilst walking'; ḡu-mbilāna, 'to become or get gradually.'

25. Buoanna implies both coming back and giving back; as, buogal-buoanna, 'to come back'; yanna-mbuoanna, 'to go back'; ḡu-mbuoanna, 'to give back'; nanna-mbuoanna, 'to throw back.'

There are also some words that attach themselves to verbs as auxiliaries; as,—

1. Garra, 'to be,' used only with the present indicative. Its abbreviation, ga, is used interrogatively.

2. Warré goes with present and future time. Its abbreviation is wa—also used interrogatively.

3. Bala, 'to be,' or ba, is more affirmative; in its shorter form, ba, it strengthens pronouns; as, baladu, 'I am.'

4. Yamna is an interrogative word, like the English 'do'; it is most commonly joined to pronouns. None of these auxiliaries has any effect on the structure of the sentence.

In the passive use of the verb, the subject is merely put in the accusative, and the verb remains unaltered.

5. FORMATION OF WORDS.

Derivatives are formed from the roots of verbs by adding various terminations. Thus, -da in denotes the agent who does the action expressed by the verb; as, birbára, 'to bake,' birba dain, 'a baker.' The word -gidyal forms participial nouns; as, kabin-gidyal, 'a beginning'; winan-ganna, 'to know,' winan-gidyal, 'the knowing,' 'knowledge.'

The terminations -mubag and -múgu denote the absence of some quality; as, uda, 'ear,' uda-múgu, 'deaf'; marong, 'good,' marom-mubang, 'bad,' lit., 'good-less.'

Adjectives are formed from nouns by reduplication, or by suffixes; as, wallang, 'stone,' walla-wallang, 'stony'; win, 'fire,' wi-win, 'hot'; ngarru, 'honey,' ngarru-ngarru, 'sweet.' Terminatives are, -durai; as, wallan-durai, 'having stone,' 'stony'; -bang; as, win-munnilbang, 'hollow fire-wood,' from munnil, 'a hole'; -bang also signifies increase or multitude and thus has a collective force; as, gibbir, 'man,' gibbir-bang, 'many men,' 'mankind'; ingel, 'ill,' ingel-bang, 'very ill.' Durai, as a suffix to a verb-stem, implies ability to perform the action of the verb; as, bambinga, 'to swim,' bambi-durai, 'able to swim'; yanna, 'to walk,' yannaidurai, 'able to walk'; with nouns it also denotes the possession of the thing; as, yamandu daluban-durai, 'have you a soul,' lit., 'are you soul-having or soul-with?'

Marra, 'to do,' 'to make,' joined to another verb, or, oftener, to nouns and adjectives, answers exactly to the Latin facio; as, giwai, 'sharp,' giwai-marra, 'to sharpen'; giwa, 'wet, moist,' giwa-marra, 'to moisten'; gullai, 'net,' gullai-marra, 'to net, to make a net.' Hence the natives join -marra to English verbs; as, grind-marra, 'to grind'; ring-marra, 'to ring the bell.'

6. CONJUNCTIONS AND ADVERBS.

Wargu, widdyua, 'what for,' 'why'? widdyung, 'which way'? widdyungguor, 'which side (direction)?' widdyuggu, 'when'? widdyuggaga, 'I don't know when'; minyangan, 'how many'? minyanganga, 'I don't know how many'; minyanganda, 'how many times'? minyangandaga, 'I don't know how many times'; warban (used with yamma-garra), 'how much'?

Da (the d being sounded very soft) signifies locality; as, dága, 'where'? dagu, 'of what place'? dagú, 'to what place'? dagannibangalla, 'in what place'? dadibağgalli, dadilabağgalli, 'whence'? dadiurruinbağgalli, 'through what place'? dadibağgallingirriage, 'by what place did he come'? Each of these by the addition of -ga may become an answer, equivalent to 'I don't know where,' &c. Other adverbs of place are:—dain, 'this way,' 'hither'; yain, 'that way,' 'thither'; ngidyí, 'here'; nganniain, 'over there.'

7. NUMERALS.

Ngunbai, 'one'; bula, 'two'; bulangunbai, 'three'; bungu, 'four' or 'many'; murrugai, 'first'; umbai, 'last.'

SUBJUNCTIVE AND POTENTIAL MOODS.

These moods are frequently expressed by the future tense with yandundu, 'if,' 'when,' added; by the auxiliary verb garra, and especially by the word mallang; see page 61 of this appendix.

PARTICIPLES.

These are declined like verbs in all the tenses and moods. There are two participles; the one ends in -bianna, and the other in -gunnanna; the former seems to imply a longer continuance of time than the other.

INDICATIVE.

1. Dalgunnana (or dalbianna), 'I am eating.'
2. Dalgunnani, 'I was eating.'

* This portion of Mr. Günther's manuscript is so imperfect that I cannot say that the cases of these pronouns are all correct.—ED.

† An ethical dative, as in 'give to me.' ‡ A sort of locative, as in 'come to me.'

Dual pronouns are:—

Nom.—(1) Ngalli, 'thou and I'; (2) ngéan-ngalligunna, 'he and I'; (3) ngindubula, 'you two'; (4) ngainbula, 'they two'; (5) bulagual, 'the other two'; (6) nginna bula, 'these two'; (7) ngilla bula, 'those two'; (8) ngalliguyunganba, 'our two selves.'

Of these, the inflexions of (3) are:—gen., ngindubulagu; dat. (local), nginyunda bulagu; of (4):—gen. and dat., ngagguwanbulagu; acc., ngannainbula; ablatives, ngainbulabar, ('about'); ngaddainbuladi ('from'); ngannainbulaga, ('in'); the inflexions of (8) are:—gen., guyunganğalliginbul; dat., ngalligingunnabul; acc., ngallibulguyungan; abl., ngalligingunnabuli ('from').

Reflexive pronouns are:—

Ngadduguyunganbul, 'I myself'; nginduguyunganbul, 'thou thyself'; gúlaguinguyunganbul, 'he himself'; ngalliguyunganbul, 'we (two) ourselves'; ngéanniginyanagual, 'we ourselves.'

Possessive Pronouns are:—

Ngaddiguyungan, 'my own'; nginnuguyungan, 'thy own'; gulaguinguyungan, 'his own'; ngéannigirninidinguyungan, 'our own'; nginnugirninguyungan, 'your own'; ngaggualanindin, 'their own.'

Demonstratives are:—

Nginna, nganna, ngunnalla, nilla, dilla, 'this here'; ngaggualla, 'that one'; ngaggu, 'that.' The declension is:—nom., nginna; gen., nginnagu, nginnalagu, 'belonging to this'; dat. (local), nginni, 'to this place'; acc., nginna, 'this'; ablatives, ngirinal-la (-da), 'at this,' nginnal-li (-di), 'from this'; nginnadurai, 'with this.'

Indefinite pronouns are:—

Ngunbaimarrang, 'some'; gulbir, 'part of, 'some'; ngunbai, 'one'; ngunbaigual, 'another'; -gual (a postfix) 'other'; biambul, 'all,' 'the whole'; bianggallambul, 'all,' 'everybody'; minyam-minyambul, 'everything'; bulagual, 'the other two'; murrimurri, 'each.'

All the pronouns on this page are declined like nouns.

Interrogatives are:—

Nom. 1., ngandi, 'who (is)';? nom. 2., ngandu 'who (does)';? gen., nganggu, 'whose';? dat., ngandigu, 'to or for whom';? nganngun (local); ablatives, ngangundi, 'from whom';? ngangundi birandi, 'away from whom';? ngangundidurai, 'with whom';? ngangundila, 'from whom';? ngangurgu, 'towards whom';?

Nom. 1. Minyanganna, minyaǵgarranna, 'what (is it)'
nom. 2., minyallu, 'what (does it)' gen., minyangū or minyaǵguba, 'belonging to what' dat., minyaǵgu, 'to or for what'

II. THE VOCABULARY.

Words, Phrases, and Sentences in the Wirádhari dialect.

1. WORDS AND PHRASES.

[In this Vocabulary, dy=j; ng=either the nasal g or n-g in separate syllables; -nga final of the verbals, if preceded by i, may be pronounced -nya from the influence of the i; p and t are so like b and d in sound that the author has not given a separate place to them. Words marked with † have come in from other dialects. The verbs are given in the present Indicative; to form the Infinitive, gu, 'to,' is added on after the verb-stem. There are probably some mistakes still in this Vocabulary, although much labour has been spent in getting its contents made fit for the press.—ED.]

PRAYERS

AWABAKAL DIALECT.

[I have left the spelling just as I found it in the manuscript. The reader, however, will recognise the syntax of the words by comparing them with those in the Gospel. The title in the manuscript runs thus:—“A selection of prayers for the morning, from the service of the Church of England, intended for the introduction of public worship amongst the aborigines of Australia; by the Venerable W. G. Broughton, A.M., Archdeacon of New South Wales and its dependencies. Translated into the Northumberland dialect by L. E. Threlkeld; 1835.”—ED.]

GURRE KAMILAROI—'KAMILAROI SAYINGS.'

[This is the primer referred to on the second page of my Introduction. It was printed in 1856, and was intended for the use of the blacks on Liverpool Plains, among whom Mr. Ridley laboured for a short time as a missionary. The sentences are English thoughts expressed in simple Kamalaroi words. The dotted g for the nasal ng is the only change I have introduced.—ED.]

1. Baiame gir* yarai, gille, mirri, taon ellibu, gimobi.

God verily sun, moon, stars, earth also made.

2. Baiame yalwuga murruba; Baiame minnaminnabul gumilda, minnaminnabul winugulda.

God always is good; God everything sees, everything hears.

3. Baiame gir kanugo kubba, kunial, maian, tulu, yindal, beran, boiyoi, gimobi.

God verily every hill, plain, watercourse, tree, grass, beran (an herb), pennyroyal made.

4. Baiame gir yaraman, burumo, bundar, mute, duli, dinouu, buralga, biloela, millimumul, gulamboli, kobado, mullion, guiya, nurai, gundoba, burulu, mugin, kanugo di gimobi.

God verily horse, dog, kangaroo, opossum, guanna, emu, native companion, cockatoo, swallow, pelican, parrot, eagle, fish, brown-snake, deadly-black-snake, flies, mosquitos, all animals made.

5. Baiame gir giwir gimobi; mal giwir Adam. Baiame goe: 'Kamil murruba giwir gandil guddelago; gaia giwigo inar gimibille.' Ila baiame inar gimobi; mal inar iv; iv gulir Adamu.

God verily man made; first man Adam. God said, 'Not good man alone for to dwell; I for man woman will make.' Then God woman made; first woman Eve; Eve wife of Adam.

* In the Wiradhari dialect, this word, gir, is used as an intensive and a pluralising particle; cf. gindu-gir, 'you,' niang-gir, 'clever,' &c., in the Vocabulary.—ED.

6. Adam buba murrigú, buba wundaú, buba kánugo ; ív gumba murrigú, gumba wundaú, gumba kánugo.

Adam is father of the blackfellows, father of the whites, father of all ; Eve the mother of blacks, mother of whites, mother of all.

7. Adam, ív eilibu, warawara yanani. Kánugo giwír, kánugo ínar, warawara ; yanani, kánugo kagil ginyi. Baiame yili ginyi ; goë : 'Kánugo giwír, kánugo ínar, warawara yanani, kánugo kagil ginyi, gáia gírma bálu bumále.' Immanuel, wurume Baiameú, goë : 'Kamil ; kamil ginda garma bumala ; ginda gunna bumala ; gáiv balugi ; giwír ínar moron gigigo.'

Adam, Eve also, astray went. All men, all women, astray went ; all bad became. God angry became ; he said : 'All men, all women, astray are gone ; all bad have become. I them dead will smite.' Immanuel, Son of God, said : 'Not so ; not thou them smite ; thou me smite ; I will die ; man, woman, alive for to be.'

8. Immanuel géanekúnda Baiame ; germa Baiame giwír ginyi. Murruba Immanuel ; kamil garagedúl murruba yealokwai germa. Immanuel with us God ; he God man became. Good is Immanuel ; not another is good like him.

9. Ilambo Immanuel taongo taiyanani ; giwír ginyi. Germa gír burula wíbil murruba gimobi, burula múga murruba gimobi, burula múga-binna murruba gimobi.

Long ago Immanuel to earth came ; man he became. He verily many sick well made, many blind well made, many deaf well made.

10. Giwír kair Layáru. Gerú bular boádi, Mári, Mátá. Layáru wíbil ginyi. Bular boádi gurru wáala Immanuelgo, goaldendai : 'Gai daidadi, ginnu Layáru, wíbil.' Kamil yanani Immanuel. Yerála Layáru balúni. Bularbularo bábine balún taonda. Ila Immanuel taiyanani. Mári, Mátá eilibu, yugillona. Immanuel goë : 'Ginnu daiadi yealo moron gigi.' Burula giwír, burula ínar, yugillona. Immanuel daonmago yanani. Yáru daonna kunda-wi. Immanuel goë : 'Gindai yáru diomulla.' Garma gír yáru diome. Immanuel kákúldone : 'Layáru, taiyanuga.' Ila Layáru moron ginyi ; taiyanani. Bular boádi burul guiyé.

A man name Lazarus. Belonging to him two sisters, Mary, Martha. Lazarus sick became. The two sisters word sent to Immanuel, saying : 'My brother, Thy Lazarus, is sick.' Not went Immanuel. By and by Lazarus died. Four days he lay dead in the ground. Then Immanuel came. Mary, Martha also, were weeping. Immanuel said : 'Your brother again alive shall be.' Many men, many women, were weeping. Immanuel to the grave went ; a stone the grave covered. Immanuel said : 'Ye the stone take away.' They the stone lifted up. Immanuel cried aloud : 'Lazarus, come forth.' Then Lazarus alive became ; he came forth. The two sisters were very glad.

11. Garagedúli, miédúl wíbil ginyi ; gumba boiyoi wune ; kamil miédúl murruba ginyi ; murrú ginyi wíbil, gullimun balúni. Buba yanani Immanuel gummillego ; gír gummuni ; goë : 'Inda barai taiyanuga ; murruba gimildi gai miédúl ; gai miédúl burul wíbil gullimun balúni ; inda taiyanuga gai kúndigo.' Immanuel goë : 'Gulle yanoai kúndigo.' Ila yanani bular kúndigo. Gumba duri ; yugillona ; goë : 'Gii ! güi ! gai miédúl balúni.' Burula ínar yugillona; goë: 'Gii! miédúl balúni.' Immanuel goë: 'Kurria yúga; kamil miédúl balúni; yeal babillona.' Burulabu giudami; gárma gir balundai wínuçi. Immanuel murra kawáni miédúl; goë: 'Miédúl, waria.' Ila miédúl moron ginyi; wariue; gurre goë. Gumba, buba ellibu, burul giuiye.

At another time, a little girl sick became; the mother pennyroyal gave; not the little girl well became; much she grew sick, almost dead. The father went Immanuel to see; truly he found Him; he said: 'Thou quickly come; well make my little girl. My little girl is very sick, almost dead; you come to my house.' Immanuel said: 'We two will go to the house.' Then went the two to the house. The mother came; she wept; said: 'Alas! alas! my little girl is dead.' Many women were weeping, said: 'Alas! the little girl is dead.' Immanuel said: 'Cease weeping; not the girl is dead; only she is asleep.' All of them laughed; they verily her to-be-dead knew. Immanuel by hand took the girl; said: 'Damsel, arise'. Then the girl alive became; arose; words spoke. The mother, father also, very glad.

12. Garageduli, bular giwír múga güddelona turrubulda. Immanuel aro yanani. Bular múga wínuçi; kákúldone: 'Immanuel, Dúrunmi, Wurume Davidu, gúmmilla! gúrrága gëane.' Burula giwír goë: 'Kurria! kurria gindai kakúllego.' Giwír múga yealo kákúldone: 'Durunmi, Wurume Davidu, gúmmilla! gúrraga gëane.' Ila Immanuel warine; goë: 'Minna gindai goalle? minna gáia murrannulle?' Garma goë: 'Durunmi, wuna gëane gúmmildai.' Ila Immanuel garma mil támúlda; baiambu garma murru gúmmillego.

Another time, two men blind sat by the way. Immanuel there came. The two blind heard; they cried aloud: 'Immanuel, King, Son of David, look! pity us.' Many people said: 'Have done! cease ye to cry aloud.' The men blind again cried aloud: 'King, Son of David, look! pity us!' Then Immanuel stood still; said: 'What you will say? What I shall do?' They said: 'King, grant us to see.' Then Immanuel them eyes touches; instantly they are able to see.

13. Burula kagil giwír Immanuel kunmulta. Garma kaogo bindéa yulalle. Garma gir tulu wimi; garagedul tulu gánbir wimi; garma gir Immanuel wimi; murra biru-dún; idinna biru-dúni; tulu wirri. Garma tulu tiome, Immanuel tului pindelundai. Yerála Immanuel balúni. Yerála, giwír pilari turrur duni; gue dulirri.

Many bad men Immanuel seized. They on his head thorns bound. They indeed a log laid; another log across they laid; they indeed Immanuel laid down; hands they pierced; feet they pierced; on cross fastened. They the cross raised, Immanuel on the cross hanging. Soon Immanuel died. Soon after, a man with a spear his side pierced; blood flowed.

14. Bullului, garma gir Immanuel taonda wimi, kundawi. Immanuel gúru bábine balún taonda; yealo malo bábine balún taonda; yealo garagedul gúru bábine balún taonda; garagedul gúruko moron ginyi, warine. Yerála gúnagullago yanani. Yeladu Immanuel gunagullada güddela; germa kánugo gúmmilda; kánugo wínugulda.

In evening, they verily Immanuel in ground laid, covered. Immanuel the night lay dead in ground; also one day he lay dead in ground; also another night he lay dead in ground ; next morning alive he became, arose. Soon after to heaven he went. Now Immanuel in heaven dwells ; he all sees ; all knows.

15. Murruba Immanuel ; kamil ġaragedul murruba yealokwai ġerma. Yerála Immanuel yealo taongo taiyanille ; ġeane kánuġo ġummille. Immanuel kaia goalle ; íla kánuġo balún, ġiwír, ínar, kaíġal kánuġo moron ġigi. Immanuel goalle : ‘ Minna índa ġimobi ? minna índa ġimobi ? índa murruba ġimobi ? índa ġununda taiyanuġa ġunagullago ; índa kaġil ġimobi ? índa biru yanuġa, urribú yanuġa.’

Good is Immanuel ; not another is good like Him. Hereafter Immanuel again to earth will come ; we all shall see. Immanuel aloud will speak ; then all the dead, men, women, and children, all alive shall become. Immanuel will say : ‘ What hast thou done ? what hast thou done ? thou good hast done ? thou to me come to heaven ; thou evil hast done ? thou far go, very far go away.’

16. Ġiru ġínda kaġil ġinyi ; índa warawara yanani ; ġiru Baia-me yili ġinyi. Baia-me yalwuġa murruba ; ġeane kánuġo warawara yanani. Wínugulla : kamil ġaia yal goalda ; ġiru ġaia goalda. Immanuel ġirribatai yarine, ġunagulladi taongo. Kánuġo ġiwír kaġil ġinyi ; Immanuel ġaudíl murruba ; Immanuel balúni, ġiwír moron ġigigo.

Truly thou bad hast become ; thou astray hast gone ; truly God angry is. God always is good ; we all astray have gone. Hearken : not I lies tell ; truth I tell. Immanuel from above came down, from heaven to earth. All men bad are become ; Immanuel only is good ; Immanuel died, men alive for to be.

17. Yeladu Baia-me goalda : ‘ Ġíndai, kánuġo ġiwír, kurria kaġil ġigile, berúdi warraia ; ġeane murru ġurride ; kamil ġaia yili ġigila ; murruba Immanuel balúni.’ Yeladu Immanuel goalda : ‘ Taiyanuġa ġununda, kánuġo ġíndai íġġil, íla ġaia ġíndai tubbia-mulle.’ Índa taiyanuġa Immanuelgo.

Now God saith : ‘ Ye, all men, cease bad to be, turn ye : we will be reconciled. Not I angry am. Good Immanuel died.’ Now Immanuel saith : ‘ Come unto me, all ye weary, then I you will cause to rest.’ You come to Immanuel.

18. Ġiwír ġuddelona Líttraga ; bain dínnu tuġġór, ġurribu bain ġe bain ; kamil yanelina. Paul, Barnaba ellibu, aro yanani. Paul goaldone ; baidúl ġerma wínúġailone. Paul kaia ġummildone ; kákúldone : ‘ Waria ġurriba dínnaga.’ Tuġġórdúl parine, yanani ellibu.

A man dwelt at Lystra ; with sick foot diseased, very ill indeed ; not he could walk. Paul, Barnabas also, there came. Paul was speaking ; the lame man him was hearing. Paul earnestly looked ; he cried aloud : ‘ Stand upright on feet.’ The lame man leapt, walked also.

19. Burulabu ġiwír ġummi ; ġoë ‘ ġipai ’ ! kákúldone : ‘ Baia-me bular yarine yealokwai ġiwír.’ Paul, Barnaba ellibu, bunna-ġunne, kákúldone : ‘ Kurria ! kamil ġeane Baia-me ; ġeane ġiwír yealokwai ġíndai ; ġeane ġuiye duri ; ġeane budda ġinyi ; ġeane yili ġinyi ; yealo ġeane murru ġurriġillone ; ġeane murru goalda burulabu ; kurria ġíndai yealo kaġil ġigile ; berúdi warraia, ġum-milla Baiame inoron ; Baiame gir gúnagulla, taon, burul kolle, kánúgo minnaminnabul gimobi ; Baiame yalwuga Baiame.'

All the people saw ; they wondered ; they cried aloud : ' Gods two. are come down like men.' Paul, Barnabas also ran, cried aloud : ' Have done ! not we gods ; we men like you. We glad become, we sorry become, we angry become, again we are reconciled. We good tell to all ; cease ye any more evil to be ; turn ye, look to God the living. God verily heaven, earth, the great water, all, everything made. God always is God, (the same ever).

SPECIMENS OF A DIALECT

OF THE

ABORIGINES OF NEW SOUTH WALES ;

BEING THE FIRST ATTEMPT TO FORM THEIR SPEECH INTO A WRITTEN LANGUAGE.

[I print this, because it is the earliest attempt to exhibit the structure of the aboriginal languages. The date is 1827. I have omitted the numbering of the sentences, the accents, and the table of sounds, referred to in the Author's preface. Naturally, there are some errors in such a first attempt as this. Such of these errors as were likely to mislead a reader, I have removed or altered ; in other respects I have left the pamphlet very much as I found it. But, from its early date and its use of the English system of pronunciation, it cannot be quoted as an authority.

I print also the Author's Preface to this pamphlet.—Ed.]

In submitting a specimen of a dialect of the aborigines of New South Wales, no speculative arrangement of grammar is attempted. Out of upwards of fifteen hundred sentences, the most satisfactory ones are selected. The English is in a separate column on the right side of the page, and underneath the aboriginal sentences is placed, word for word, the English meaning, without regard to English arrangement or grammar, in order to show the idiom of the aboriginal tongue. The sentences are numbered for easy reference, should any friend wish to make any remark tending to simplify the present adopted mode. As one of my objects in applying to the language is to pave the way for the rendering into this tongue the sacred Scriptures, every friendly hint will be most thankfully received. The accents are not marked for want of type, but the last arrangement of the verb will, it is hoped, be a sufficient guide. A table of the sounds, being an epitome of the plan pursued in the orthography of the language, will also be sufficient, it is presumed, to show the nature of the syllables; it would have increased the work to an inconvenient size had it been further explained. To ascertain the ellipsis with which the language abounds is the best means to obtain satisfaction in the use of the particles, and without the knowledge of this it appears very often a mere jargon. Ma-ko-ro te-a, 'fish to me,' is all they say for 'give me some fish'; but no possible mistake can arise, as in the English, using the nouns in a verbal sense. A double use of the preposition 'from' puzzled me exceedingly; but one day when the signal for a vessel was hoisted up at the signal-post, the remarks of a black man proved that it was from, on account of the vessel, the ball was hoisted from that cause. The cutting down a tree in the woods similarly showed from what part the log was to be chopped. I would also remark that we often think there is a difference in the language because the names of substantives differ; e.g., a man was asked one day what he had got; 'ta-ra-kul,' was the reply—i.e., peaches. But they had no peaches formerly; whence came the new name?—from a word 'to set the teeth on edge!' Now, at the Hawkesbury, the natives may call it by a name meaning rough skin, or any other quality. At the Hawkesbury, the English say that 'kob-ba-ra' is what the natives call 'head,' but the blacks told me to say 'wol-lung,' and it was only by an anatomical drawing my black teacher showed that by 'kob-ba-ra' he understood the 'skull bone.' No doubt there are provincialisms, but perhaps the language is radically the same. In presenting a copy to those in this colony who are connected with other societies, I beg to assure them that whatever knowledge I may obtain of the aboriginal tongue shall be always available to them with cheerful readiness, the noble principles of Christianity forbidding the indulgence of any selfish motive or party feeling in those who profess to be the promulgators of its precepts. An anxiety to satisfy the friends of humanity that our employment is not altogether without hope, as it respects attaining the language of the blacks, and that success may ultimately be expected, with the Divine aid, have suggested and urged the putting of these imperfect specimens to the press.

Eighteen months less interrupted than the time past will, it is hoped, enable me to make known salvation to the aborigines in their own tongue. To attempt instruction before I can argue with them as men would be injurious, because Christianity does not make its votaries mere machines, but teaches them how to give an answer to every one that asketh a reason of their hope. My time, therefore, must be devoted wholly to that single object until I am competent; and whatever may be the expenses, or whatever may be the privations of individuals to reclaim sinners, whether black or white, the remembrance of it will be no more, or, if it exist, it will excite only a song of praise when we shall behold the great multitude which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues standing before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands, saying, "Thou hast redeemed us to God by Thy blood, out of every kindred and tongue and people and nation, and hast made us unto our God kings and priests for ever. Amen."

DOCTOR JOHNSON observes that the orthography of a new language formed by a synod of grammarians upon principles of science would be to proportion the number of letters to that of sounds, that every sound may have its own character, and every character a single sound. Doctor Lowth's rule hath been attended to in syllabication—namely, "Divide the syllables in spelling, as they are naturally divided in a right pronunciation," so that, to use the words of another author, "Syllabication shall be the picture of actual pronunciation."

The English alphabet is used with little variation of sound, The table (an abridgement) shews the fixed sounds of the letters and syllables agreeably to the English examples, leaving nothing arbitrary.

The attempt to form the aboriginal speech into a written language with perspicuity is made on the above principles; time only can decide on its practicability.

L. E. THRELKELD.

ABORIGINAL SENTENCES VERBALLY RENDERED INTO ENGLISH UNDERNEATH THE RESPECTIVE WORDS.

1. Nga-to-a.—The pronoun I in answer to a question, as, it is I; it is used also in a relative sense, it is I who. The pronunciation of the ng is very soft, but exactly the same as ng in hang, bang. The pronoun I, when forming the simple subject to the verb, is bang, I.

Nganke un-nung? ngatoa un-ne; m., who is there? it is I
Who (is) there I this.

Ngatoa man-nun; man-nun bang; m., it is I who will take.

m., I am going to that place; I am coming to this place.
 Ngatoa bo wal wea bounnoun; m., I myself spoke to her.
 I myself spoke her.
 Ngatoa bo wal bounnoun bun-ka-leyn; m., I myself am
 I myself her striking. beating her.
 Ngatoa bo wa-le-a-la wa-kol; m., I myself went alone.
 I went one.

2. Ngin-to-a—the pronoun thou in answer to a question, it is thou who. The pronoun used to the verb in simple form is be, thou.

Ngan-ka be unne? ngintoa-ta unne; m., who art thou now?
 Who thou this? thou this. it is thou, emph.
 Ngeroung koa ban-nu wean ngurra-le-ko.
 For thee why I-it speak for to hear.
m., I speak it in order for thee to hear.
 Ngintoa tatte ba-nun; m., it is thou who wilt be dead.
 Thou dead be-will.
 Ngintoa kinta, ngatoa kaawaran; m., it is thou who fearest,
 Thou fear, I not. I do not.
 Ngatoa bo wal yaraki, ngintoa kaawaran; m., I myself am
 I myself evil, thou not. evil, thou art not.
 Ngintoa kinta; kinta be; m., it is thou who fearest; thou
 Thou fear; fear thou. fearest.
 Ngintoa kinta ka-nun; kinta be ka-nun.
 Thou fear be-will; fear thou be-will.
m., it is thou who wilt fear; thou wilt be afraid.

3. New-wo-a—the pronoun he, in answer to a question, who is it? The pronoun for the verb is noa, he or it.

- An—the sign of the present tense; as, we-an bang, ‘I speak.’
- Man-tan be, ‘thou takest’; kow-wol, to be ‘great,’ or ‘much,’ or ‘large’; kow-wol-lan unnoa, ‘that is large’; kur-kur, ‘cold’; kur-kur-ran bang, ‘I am cold’; ta kur-rara, ‘it is cold.’ The consonants are doubled, in order to preserve their full sound, and to divide the syllables for pronouncing.
- Eyn—forms the present participle; as, wa-leyn, ‘moving’; tu-ra-leyn, ‘spearing’; wa-leyn bang nar-ra-bo ka ko, ‘I am getting to sleep,’ lit., ‘I am moving for-to sleep’; bun-keyn noa, ‘he being to be beaten.’
- A—the sign of the past tense; as, wea bon bang, ‘I told him’; na-ka-la bang, ‘I saw’ or ‘did see’; bun-ka-la noa, ‘he smote,’ or ‘struck,’ or ‘fought.’
- An—the sign of the perfect; as, ta-ka-an bang, ‘I have eaten’; ta-ka-an wal bang, ‘I have just eaten’; wi-ta wa-la-an ngaan, ‘we have departed’; ta-nan wa-la-an wal ba-rur, ‘they have just arrived.’

- Nun—forms the future; as, bun-nun bon bang, ‘I will beat him’; kum-ba-bo wita bang wa-nun, ‘I shall depart to-morrow’; wita wal bang wa-nun, ‘I am about to depart.’ wita wal bang pa-la wa-nun, ‘I must depart.’
- La—forms the active imperative; as, wea-la, ‘speak’; ngurra-la, ‘do hear’: bu-mun-bil-la tea, ‘let me smite’; ngurra-bun-bil-la tea bon, ‘let him hear me.’
- Wa—imperative of motion; as, bu-wa tea-be, ‘smite thou me’; na-ow-wa, ‘look.’
- Ra—as in ra, imperatively used. Thus, kai be, ‘be thou here’; kabo be, ‘be thou where thou art,’ ‘stand still,’ ‘be still,’ ‘wait,’ ‘halt.’ The bo reflects the verb on itself.
- Ya—appears to be the imperative passive ‘to be’; as, yanoa; weaye kora, ‘let it be as it is’; ‘do not speak.’ This is often used with the negative imperative, yai, ‘do not trouble me’; ‘let me be as I am.’
- Wil or ow-wil—this, whenever used, expresses a wish or desire; as, bu-wil bang gero-ung, ‘I wish to beat thee’; pe-re-ke-wil be, ‘thou wishest to sleep’; pe-ta-ow-wil noa, ‘he wishes to drink.’
- Ko-a—has the same force; thus, bu-wil koa bang, ‘in order that I may beat’; pe-re-ke-wil koa be, ‘in order that thou mightest sleep’; pe-ta-ow-wil koa noa, ‘in order that he may drink’; we-a-ow-wil koa bang, ‘that I may speak.’
- Ke-le-ko or le-ko—this forms the infinitive; thus, unne uma ammoung ta-ke-le-ko, ‘this is made for me to eat’; tural-ko, ‘to spear.’ The idiom requires ko to form the infinitive; as, murrorong ta ta-ke-le-ko, ‘it is good for-to eat.’
- Eyn or Ke-leyn—this forms the present participle; as, ta-ke-leyn, ‘to be eating’; tat-te-ba-leyn, ‘to be dying.’
